ENTERTAINMENT!

HOLLYWOOD, it seems, is swiftly crystallizing a policy for a war-torn world. It is going now most especially into the making of motion pictures for the entertainment of the customers—and it tends to assume that those customers are getting all the war, all the "social consciousness", all the debates and turmoils and travails that it can absorb, elsewhere.

A crisp keynoting came out of Hollywood last weekend in a statement set down by Mr. Jack L. Warner addressed at breaking up the gloom of war woes, in an advertisement saying:

> "This industry's business is entertainment. Today it is more than a business—it is our heritage. We must realize that it is squarely up to us, more than any others, to put the smile back on the map of America. . . . "

This was prefatory to a recommendation of the Warner production, "My Love Came Back", which appears to be romance with no message except young love and music—something to see, nothing to worry about.

And turning some more advertising pages one discovers one of those blithe 72-point modern Gothic exclamations from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer: "Cheer Up, America!"

This one is about "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante", done in that unbiased manner of Mr. Silas Seadler, that advertising designer who has contributed so much to the gaiety and esprit of the M-G-M Leo, genial lion of salesmanship.

"There is something," said Mr. Seadler under examination, "in the notion that the customers want a good time. Incidentally," he continued in that blandishing manner, "you might also mention that 'New Moon', strictly entertainment, is positively a hit."

"New Moon", just incidentally, is an operetta, and if it has a "message" it would be in the lightsome music of Mr. Sigmund Romberg with Mr. Oscar Hammerstein's lyrics.

As for the new Andy Hardy, there need be no argument about its approach, its concerns and its message.

IT is of particular interest to observe that the motion picture, after some year or so of treading out the grapes of experience, comes now to decided avowal and demonstration of a return to the function that made it great—entertainment. Quite a while ago, it is to be remembered that Mr. Martin Quigley, at Williamstown, Massachusetts, took the rostrum at that forum, entirely surrounded by academic and pseudo-academic pressure groups, to declare against their clamours for special pleadings and propaganda on the screen, that the motion picture had come to great estate as the amusement of the people and would hold its position only by keeping faith on its assignment to entertainment and entertainment only.

In the time between there have been many and expensive adventures in pictures of "social significance". None of those in that category has been of commercial significance, and that means they did not reach the audience, with their "messages", expressed or implied. That has been double failure—no message delivered, dollars spent and lost.

THE pleas for "message" are now fewer and fainter. Pressure groups are getting rather out of fashion, and going with them are those minor audiences of readers who wrote such earnest letters to the papers.

A trace lingers here and there. For instance, the other day Mr. William Boehnel of the New York World Telegram said:

"If the movies want to lead the way—and I think they should—they should do everything in their power to show how to avoid those things (Nazism) here, how valuable our heritage is. . . . And the best way I know of to begin is to make immediately a screen version of 'It Can't Happen Here'. Then we would have something constructive to rouse us and to fight against."

So Mr. Boehnel would be having the screen make preachment, and tell the public what he thinks it should hear about the war and social movements.

That would be the way that Stalin, Hitler and Mussolini would do it—the way they do do it, by taking over the theatre screen for their messages, for the purveying of their ideologies.

Our heritage which is democratic and the democratic way of life requires that we fight, not emulate, the methods of dictatorships. We would be getting nowhere by converting all approaches to the public mind, including the screen, into propaganda channels. At that point democracy would go out the window.

Tanks must be fought with tanks, dive bombers with bombers. But the democratic ideal is not to be defended successfully by and with the methods and ideas of dictatorship.

Democracy will not be saved by abandoning it.

Also the nation will not be served by any seeking to have the theatre screen seek, under any guidance whatever, to share or usurp the functions of church, or state, or education.

When the screen starts to think for its people it will have lost them. The motion picture, and all other institutions of these United States, can serve best by careful attention to their own business, the concerns to which they have been commissioned by the public's support—the job they were hired for.

MR. JOHN BARRYMORE has told the Associated Press his notion of the top ten of the "fine actors worth watching for pointers." He topped the list with a Barrymore, his brother Lionel, and closed it with Maria Ouspenskaya, who he says "transcends sex differences" in the art of acting. Maybe so, but commonly the customers do not seem to want their sex transcended. That is not what it is for.

This Week in the News

Fight Ban Ends

NO PIECE of Federal motion picture legislation, favorable or otherwise, in memory, ever went through the halls of Congress and received the blessing of Presidential seal and signature as quickly, as silently as this week's repealer of the 28-year-old Congressional prohibition of interstate transportation of prizefight films.

So far as is known, there was nary a mention in the public prints of enactment by House and Senate, last Friday, until the repealer was signed and sealed in the Presidential study, just before the White House main clock struck noon last Monday, July 1st.

William Warren Barbour, Republican Senator from New Jersey, deftly guided the repealer through Congress, as quietly as the enactment, meeting no opposition and succeeding in narrowing attention to but a brief hearing in the Senate, to which he brought Jack Dempsey, ex-pugilist champion and present Broadway cafe operator, to testify as to the desirability of removing the Sims bill ban that was legislated by Congress on July 31, 1912, against interstate traffic in fight films. Congressional legalization does not apply to existing state laws prohibiting fight films.

The ban was effected just two years after John Arthur Johnson, otherwise Jack Johnson or "'Lil Artha," Negro, knocked out Jim Jeffries at Reno, Nevada, on July 4, 1910. J. Stuart Blackton and William T. Rock, of old Vitagraph, later purchased by Warners as the nucleus of a Warner distribution system, supervised photography at the Johnson-Jeffries fight, release rights to which went to George Kleine, of old General Film.

Johnson's conduct and spectacular affairs in Chicago subsequent to the race riots that resulted from showings of the black-and-white prize fight, caused the termination of legal interstate traffic of fight films. But the law did not end illegal traffic, which was quickly taken hold of by the "sports crowd." It brought handsome profits, the while they readily paid comparatively insignificant fines, of say, $1,000 to a Federal judge each time they were caught transporting prints over a state border.

Whether the business of fight films will return to the film business remains to be seen. That depends mostly on whether the motion picture business is willing to pay a higher price to the fight promoters for filming a fight than the "sport crowd" now pays for the rights.

Legal interstate traffic in fight films ended with a Negro heavyweight champion, Jack Johnson, and returns with a Negro heavyweight champ, Joe Louis.

Petrillo Starts

FIRST film industry action of James C. Petrillo, as new head of the American Federation of Musicians, was taken Wednesday, when he stepped in to settle the eight months old musicians' strike against Warner theatres in Philadelphia. Mr. Petrillo has been given full power by the Philadelphia local to make a settlement with the circuit, quickly, it is hoped.

In radio, Mr. Petrillo, Monday, decreed that the music of his members could not be picked up either by NBC or CBS from remote locations, such as dance halls and restaurants, and piped over stations of the networks.

Convention Costs

BROADCASTS of the Republican Presidential convention proceedings cost the three major networks—Mutual, National and Columbia broadcasting systems—about $332,000, including payment by the networks of technicians, and persons with whom technical arrangements were made, of announcers, of talent on commercial programs which were cancelled, and lost revenues from commercial programs cancelled.

CBS cancelled 11 hours of commercial programs, in its 18-hour coverage. This cost $150,000. NBC "Red" network cancelled six hours and 13 minutes in its 11¼-hour coverage, and NBC "Blue" network cancelled one hour and 18 minutes in its 18-hour and 10-minute coverage; NBC's cost, about $133,000. Mutual network gave 35 hours to the convention, cancelled approximately $1,200 of programs.

Actual operating costs were figured thus: NBC, with two networks and a television station, $15,000; CBS, $25,000; and Mutual, $8,000.

Goldwyn's UA Suit

THE suit brought by Samuel Goldwyn against United Artists, which was dismissed by Judge John P. Nields in the lower Federal Court at Wilmington, several months ago, was ordered reinstated Wednesday by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia. A declaratory judgment that his distribution contract with UA was ended and that he be declared free to withdraw from that distribution syndicate was asked by Mr. Goldwyn.

The original complaint was dismissed on the grounds that Alexander Korda and the late Douglas Fairbanks, U. A. partners, were "indispensable" to the action. The basis of the Goldwyn complaint is the assertion that his original contract with U. A. and its producer-owners was invalidated when extra contractual concessions were given to Mr. Korda and Mr. Fairbanks.

The Court of Appeals now rules that Korda, or his London Films Corporation, or Fairbanks or his Elton Firm "are neither indispensible or necessary parties to this action" and that Judge Nields could decide on the case without having them joined as party defendants. Judge John Briggs, Jr., who wrote the latest opinion, also advised Judge Nields to examine all papers filed and watch what evidence is presented in a separate and similar suit filed earlier this year in New York by Mr. Goldwyn against UA and Korda's London Films.

Summer Grosses

MOTION picture theatre grosses, at least those in downtown key-city runs, are commencing to settle down to the summer pace, although the drop is not as marked as in other years, due, principally, to extended cool weather and to employment upturns in national defense manufacturing.

The books of 133 downtown theatres in key cities show total gross admission income now running at about $1,100,000 a week, compared with income of around $1,400,000 in an average week in the winter-fall show season.

'Snow White' Returns

WALT DISNEY and RKO announced Wednesday the return to circulation of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," released in December, 1937, and withdrawn 18 months later after a reputed rental gross of $8,000,000.

The Disney film, first feature, sound, color cartoon, will be sold as a "'Snow White' festival" with the Disney shorts, "Ferdinand the Bull," "The Practical Pig," "The Ugly Duckling" and "Donald's Lucky Day."

Hal Horne, for Disney, with RKO has been conducting tests on the combination for six months.

Recognize Writers

LATE Tuesday night representatives of the Screen Writers Guild and producers reached a tentative agreement on a short term contract, climaxing a fight of several years conducted by the Guild for recognition. The contract is subject to ratification by the producers and by members of the Writers Guild.

Negotiations between the Guild and producers collapsed two years ago when no agreement could be reached on the short term pact demanded and now won by the Guild.

ASCAP's Income

WITH the claims of the broadcasters dinning in ASCAP's ears—claims that radio is paying ASCAP more than ever before, claims that radio pays much more than any other industry—ASCAP officials, Tuesday, in breaking down their gross receipts for 1939, pointed out that radio's payments are for performing rights only. ASCAP added that the motion picture industry, an admittedly poor second to radio in fee payments, actually contributes "an unrealized amount" to music and to ASCAP, by its payment to authors and composers on direct salaries, and by ownership or interest in music publishing firms which are ASCAP members. Over 130 ASCAP composers are now in Hollywood, on majors' payrolls, an ASCAP official remarked. They receive salaries ranging from $100 to $3,000 per week.

All that affects the impression possibly to be gained from the breakdown of ASCAP 1939 receipts, which showed, among other things, that ASCAP income from radio in 1939 increased by about eight per cent over 1938.

In 1939, ASCAP received a total of $4,142,024 from radio; $1,166,232 from motion picture theatres; $673,787 from restaurants; $226,890 from hotels; $143,845 from dance halls; and $158,973 from miscellaneous sources.

Meanwhile, National Association of Broadcasters' members this week were perusing an "analysis" sent to them by President Neville Miller (see page 18), showing that the new ASCAP five year contracts, offered to broadcasters to succeed the present ones, expiring January 1,—were anything but desirable.

Radio's Ad Dollars

ADVERTISING time sales, the principal source of radio station revenue, bring the three main networks—NBC, CBS, MBS—less than $100,000,000 a year, gross, computed on the basis of the $47,048,571 ad income of the three networks for the first six months of 1940. RCA, NBC's parent, of course, derives revenue from radio set sales, but NBC is the only network with an affiliate selling radios.

When considering radio and motion pictures as the nation's two great entertainment media, economic strength is usually overlooked—radio stations probably getting no more than $150,000,000 a year from their advertising supporters for the public attention it can muster through all of its entertainment, educational and news casting, a mere seventh of the round billion dollars taken in at box offices annually from a motion picture screen buying public. And some exhibitors complain about radio competition.

New Trust Blast

CHARLES OLSON'S independent Indianapolis Apollo theatre on Monday filed an anti-trust action, seeking $876,600 triple damages, against Fourth Avenue Amusement Company and Greater Indianapolis Amusement Company—operating the Circle and Indiana—and the eight large distributors.

Mr. Olson's Apollo Amusement Company charged in Circuit Court in Indianapolis that the defendants conspired to put his Apollo theatre, in the downtown section, out of business, by attempting to destroy its reputation during the period, ending June 1st, last, when the two defendant theatre companies had the house under joint lease.

It was further charged that when the operation of the Apollo reverted to Mr. Olson, the distributor defendants refused to sell product to it.

The suit is the first to be filed since attorneys for the Department of Justice and the major company defendants in the Government's "key" New York anti-trust case started the pending negotiations for a consent decree settlement (see page 16).

Bioff Still Trying

WILLIE BIOFF, studio union leader, now serving a six-month jail term in Chicago on a 1922 pandering charge, has a new lawyer to help him regain freedom. He is Walker Butler, said to be a former classmate of Westbrook Pegler, in early Chicago schooldays.

It was syndicated columnist Pegler who, in the fall of last year, disclosed that Bioff had not finished the 1922 sentence, causing a reopening of the case.

Mr. Butler, on Tuesday, said he would go into the Chicago courts and cite 75 cases showing that the lower appeals courts, as well as the United States Supreme Court, have held that receiving money from an illegal enterprise is not grounds for conviction. Mr. Butler's contention is that Bioff did not know the source of the money at the time he received it.

In the meantime, Bioff learned this week that his application for clemency would not be heard until October 7th. His term will be about served, then.

TRIPLE BILLS FORCE SPOTLIGHT ON ENTIRE MULTI-FEATURE SITUATION

Wanger, Selznick in Attack on "Evil" After Kirsch Requests Studio Cooperation; MGM To Single "New Moon"

"A crisis in the double feature evil is at hand," this in the opinion of Hollywood, as expressed by Walter Wanger, producer, and believed also by others.

The issue of doubles is being forced by triples—three features being given in some places for a single admission, with short subjects, newsreels, cash prizes, bric-a-brac, even refreshments thrown in for extra good measure.

New Attack Seen

The double and triple bill problem is no new one. It has been a perennial for years. But the strength of attack is new, in certain quarters of production, distribution and exhibition.

Typical of the target of attack is Chicago where an exhibitor showing doubles, or groups of owners doing likewise, embrace a third feature to outdo competition. In Chicago, independents and Balaban & Katz became embroiled in a triple fight that is now beginning to resound nationally. Most of the independents finally abandoned the practice, but Paramount's B. & K. did not, causing Jack Kirsch, leader of the independents of Allied of Illinois, to direct a blast, ten days ago, against triples, causing reverberations from Hollywood and New York.

Mr. Kirsch and his independents directed an open message to leaders of the industry, requesting, "If the leaders of this industry cannot correct such a devasting abuse and waste of product we would at least appreciate public utterances of condemnation of this policy on their part."

Hollywood responded immediately, David O. Selznick endorsing the attack, and promising that in future none of his pictures would ever be permitted to play on a triple bill—Mr. Kirsch having singled out Mr. Selznick's "Rebecca" in the 'blast' as one current triple-bill feature in Chicago.

"New Moon" on Singles

Probably the most direct effort by a major distributor in recent years to further the single booking of a current release has been launched by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which, in an "experiment," placed the Nelson Eddy-Jeanette MacDonald musical, "New Moon," on a single basis in all of its related Loew's theatres operating in so-called "double-feature towns." On Monday, Joseph R. Vogel, Loew theatre executive, and William F. Rodgers, MGM sales director, reported the test satisfactory.

Only exhibitors can solve the double bill problem, Mr. Rodgers said, but "triple bills are indefensible."

There have been few, if any, recent releases of pictures other than the "Gone With the Wind," and one or two others, which have been sent out by the distributor with a definite single booking in mind.

In the double bill towns of Akron, Columbus, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Louisville, Providence, Rochester and Syracuse, the Metro officials reported, weekend opening business was 35 per cent above average for the single film.

"Exhibitors are beginning to realize they owe it not only to themselves, but to the producers to get full revenue value," said Mr. Rodgers, who has been a leader in the conduct of new trade practices for distribution-exhibition. "It's their job," he said, "to help eliminate the waste in our business resulting from under-playing and under-selling."

Double bills and triple bills have been seesawing for years on the policy decisions of exhibitors. Now Milwaukee will end doubles, and Flint re-adopts them. Now some Philadelphia houses discontinue the practice, the while triples hit Seattle.

Selznick Calls It "Disgraceful"

David O. Selznick, producer of "Gone With the Wind," "Rebecca" and other "big" pictures, bitterly scored recent used of his "Rebecca" as part of a triple feature program, in a telegram last week, to Mr. Kirsch, leader of the Illinois Allied.

The telegram said, in part: "The situation is disgraceful. I am more depressed than I can say that a picture of which I have been so proud as I have of 'Rebecca' should be permitted to be part of a triple bill in an important theatre. . . . I am taking steps to avoid the inclusion of any future production of mine in any such destructive program."

Mr. Kirsch's "open letter" had referred to a triple bill recently at the Balaban and Katz Belmont Theatre. On the bill with "Rebecca" were "House Across the Bay" and "Viva Cisco Kid." Mr. Kirsch had also charged monopoly in that section of Chicago.

Observers wondered whether the closing lines in Mr. Selznicks responsive telegram meant that he would start a movement among producers to protect their product from such display. The members of the Illinois Allied board this week considered continuing the "open letter" idea, with a series.

Mr. Kirsch's plea to the producers had pointed out that, while 17 Chicago local independents had decided to eliminate the triple features, beginning June 16th, the circuit had run its triple feature program, which lasted five hours. He noted, also, that the circuit's theatre not only had the advantage of showing more pictures for the money, but also the advantage of better ones, because it ran pictures before the independents.

Chicago Independents Agree

As of the past mid-week, the independent Chicago theatres, 14 of which are Illinois Allied members, which had agreed to drop triple features, were still abiding by the oral agreement of their operators; and the Balaban and Katz Belmont was still using three features.

Ten of the 160 Allied member theatres were still showing triples, it was additionally noted, though Jack Kirsch, Allied president, hoped to have these, too, drop the practice.

Four of the 47 Balaban & Katz theatres were using triples. The circuit spokesmen refused to comment on the situation, beyond saying that no policy change was expected.

One theatre, last week, the Karlov, of the Charles Stern group, not only used triple features, but also gave away two stem wine glasses.

EXCHANGES HAVE FLAG DISPLAY

Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer has sent American flags to all of its branch distribution offices where they will be prominently displayed, on orders, at the entrance to each exchange. The all-silk flag measures three by five feet in size.

Four theatres in Chicago, of the "art" classification, are using single features; the Esquire of the Balaban circuit; the Essex, the Cinema and the World.

"Crisis" Seen by Wanger

Walter Wanger, producer, last week declared, in Hollywood, that exhibitors now agree that the existence of the business depends upon the "immediate discontinuance of the double feature policy" and that "a crisis in the double feature evil has been reached."

He commended the stand against double features by the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York headed by Harry Brandt. That association, two weeks ago, termed the double feature a greater threat to the industry than the loss of the foreign market, and it called upon producers to lead a crusade against doubles. It said, too, that with the abolition of duals, producers could make better pictures, giveaways would not be necessary, exhibitors could show only those pictures which made money, pictures would stand or fall on their own merits, and programs would be reduced to a length of which the theatre patron would not be tried.

Kansas City Experiment

Kansas City theatre owners will inaugurate an experiment with single bills on July 14th. Seven subsequent runs will play "A" pictures on the Sunday, Monday changes on single bills for four weeks. The exhibitors will probably extend the policy if successful. The theatres involved are the State, Park, Midway, Osage, Home, Gauntier and Tenth Street.

Milwaukee Ends Duals

Harry Perlewitz, business manager of the Independent Theatres Protective Association, said independent and circuit theatres will end double features in the Milwaukee territory on September 2nd. There will be no reduction in admission prices.

Duals Again in Flint

After collapse of a "gentlemen's agreement" to play singles, the theatres of Flint, Michigan, reverted again to duals two weeks ago. The Rialto, however, kept singles, and added stage shows.

Prices have been cut, and some houses are using three features.

Triples Hit Seattle

Seattle's first triple feature programs were offered recently at the Embassy, second and third run "downtown" house run by Joe Danz. Three full length features, with a newsreel, were offered at 10 cents at 1 P. M., and 15 cents thereafter.

Some Duals Out in Philadelphia

Several of the Stanley Warner circuit houses in Philadelphia have dropped double, for single, features. The circuit spokesmen said, however, it was not to be interpreted as "policy," but reflected individual situations and the time of year.

On the other hand, double features are being exploited as "special" at the Tioga Theatre, in that city. One show is offered on Wednesday and Thursday nights, at 8:15 P. M., with intermission between the two features, during which patrons may smoke and sip drinks on a decorated terrace outside the theatre.

Reduce, Says St. Louis

Independents in St. Louis would follow the lead, if one were offered, of the circuits, in reducing duals, Fred Wehrenberg, circuit head, and president of the city's MPTOA, has said.

RAISED ADMISSION PRICES TO PASS TAX TO PUBLIC IS GENERAL POLICY

95 Per Cent of Theatre Owners Increase Scales as New Levy Goes into Effect; Public Seen Receptive to Charge

Approximately 95 percent of the theatres of the United States which were affected by the new Federal admissions beginning at 21 cents have raised their price scale by passing the tax on to the public. Reports from the field indicate that there have been very few complaints from the public, a fact due in part to the action of the circuits and independent theatres in "selling" the tax as a patriotic obligation.

No Attendance Loss Seen

A survey of conditions in key cities and other areas showed that during the first few days there was hardly any loss in gross attributed to the new defense admission tax. In some locations theatres raised the admission five cents and included the tax but also increased the house's share one or two cents. Some smaller houses and subsequents in a few areas dropped prices from 25 to 20 cents to avoid the tax.

The issue was one of patriotism in many cities and this accounted for an almost unanimous acceptance of the tax. As a practical business matter most theatres decided they could not afford to absorb the tax and had no alternative but to pass it on to the patron. A three cent tax on a 25 cent admission, if absorbed, would deprive many theatres of their entire margin of profit.

Joseph Bernhard, head of Warner Bros. theatre, explained the policy which was followed in most spots across the country, by circuits and independents alike:

"The tax will be added everywhere to present admission prices, as I consider it a patriotic obligation to help make people defense-conscious."

William F. Rodgers, MGM sales manager, predicted theatre attendance would not be hurt by the new taxes because the public understands that additional revenue is needed by the Government for defense. All Loew theatres added the tax.

Other large circuits including National Theatres and RKO adopted a policy of merely adding the tax. Paramount operators determined the policy for each locality which almost everywhere was to pass on the levy to the patron.

The major distributors have determined to protect the present clearance and zoning regulations if any attempt is made to bring about changes caused by theatres lowering admissions below the 21 cents taxable minimum. Where the price spread is increased as a result of the tax distributors probably will widen clearance and delay availability or require a higher rental from the subsequent theatre.

Educational Campaign Urged

National Allied issued a report pointing out that under the law the tax is "to be paid by the person paying for such admission." Members were urged "to carry on an intensive educational campaign to reconcile the public to the tax. Group trailers and group newspaper ads should be used."

The question of getting new tickets printed or old ones stamped in time for the July 1st tax deadline was a problem. Temporarily theatres which have changed the basic admission are required to overstamp the tickets to show admission and the tax and those keeping the same scales may use the old tickets "for a limited time" without stamping them provided there are signs on the boxoffice showing the admission charged and the tax. In a short time all theatres will be required to have new tickets printed with the admission and the tax.

In Ohio where there is a 3 percent State tax there was a special problem. It was decided that a theatre could charge 21 cents without paying the Federal tax, even though the tax begins at that figure.

An outline of what action on the new tax exhibitors have taken in many cities across the country follows:

Passed on in Chicago

In Chicago Balaban & Katz, Warner Bros. theatres and members of Allied Theatres of Illinois passed the tax on to the public. The public reaction was found favorable, with Loop patrons paying the tax willingly. A large number of independents, perhaps half of such theatres in the area, are experimenting with early shows at 20 cents. Some of the local theatres' night scale is below the tax point. A few theatres increased prices five cents and added the tax.

New York theatres generally added the tax to the former admission scale, in some cases the prices were increased and then the 10 per cent tax was added. Only a few houses reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents to escape the tax. All Broadway theatres, including the independents, added the tax.

In the Philadelphia area exhibitors added the tax. In the downtown district, the uniform 32 and 42-cent scales were raised to 35 and 46 cents. There were no protests and the general opinion was that the public recognized the tax as an "obligation." Members of Allied of Eastern Pennsylvania, comprising 150 houses, voted to pass the levy on to the patrons.

Joseph Bernhard, general manager of Warner Bros. theatres, speaking for the Stanley-Warner theatres, said, "There will be no cut in admission prices in Philadelphia or anywhere else on account of the tax."

All Harris and Warner theatres in Pittsburgh added the exact tax to admission and independents generally adopted a similar policy with the exception of some houses which increased prices to eliminate odd pennies.

Exhibitors in the Cleveland territory predicted the new defense tax would have little or no effect on grosses.

California Asks Further Increase

Circuit and independent theatre operators in Los Angeles generally were united in not changing admission prices and decided to add the tax. The ITO of Southern California passed a resolution asking the Government to tax every adult admission over 9 cents, as a patriotic measure.

In Kansas City most exhibitors passed the tax on. The first run Tower increased its scale from 25 cents to 30 cents. One or two 25-cent houses have lowered the admission to 20 cents.

The public accepted the new levy added to admissions in the St. Louis territory. A majority of the exhibitors passed it on to the customer, but in some of the smaller cities and rural sections there were instances of both tax absorption and price increases. Fred Wehrenberg, head of the MPTOA in St. Louis, announced that members at a special meeting had voted to add the tax to regular price scales.

In the main, Atlanta theatres passed it on to the patron. One theatre reduced the price of its afternoon show from 30 and 35 cents to 30 cents and absorbed it.

In the Cincinnati area the question of adding the new levy was not considered difficult because patrons are already accustomed to odd-penny taxes on account of the Ohio law. All first runs except the RKO Lyric have a price scale of 39 and 47 cents for matinee and night, respectively; the Lyric charges 33 and 42 cents. Rowland, MacDonald and Neth theatres advanced prices to include the state and federal tax. Except in first runs the state tax previously had been absorbed.

Boston passed on the tax and no adverse public reaction was reported. New England Allied group, about 150 theatres, voted to add it to present scales.

Memphis houses also added the federal levy. The Warner theatre gave patrons their change in envelopes which advertised the coming attraction.

At a joint meeting of the Cooperative Theatres of Michigan, United Detroit Theatres, Michigan Allied members and independents in the Detroit area voted to add the defense tax to present scales.

Universal acceptance on the part of the public of the new admission tax added to regular prices was noticed in the New Haven territory. A plan to increase prices five cents and absorb the tax was rejected. It was reported that a few houses considering price cuts kept the scale and absorbed the tax.

Theatres in the New Orleans area also added the tax.

Admission Up in Reading

In Reading three theatres, one an independent, one a Warner house and the other operated by Wilmer & Vincent, raised admissions from 25 cents to 27 cents, which, with the tax, made a total of 30 cents.

All Richmond theatres, with the exception of the Booker T. Lichtman houses, added the defense tax. The Booker T. changed from a 15 and 25-cent scale to a straight 20 cents. The MPTOA of Virginia voted to pass it on.

Seattle exhibitors also passed it on. The first

PRESIDENT REQUESTS EXCESS PROFIT TAX

A few hours after the defense admission levy went into effect on July 1st President Roosevelt asked Congress for an excess profits tax. The actuat rates were left up to Congress which, it was reported, will impose heavy taxes on income over a conservative figure and confiscatory taxes on highly excessive profits.

The President asked Congress to pass the tax immediately and said that it should apply to all individuals and to all corporations "without discrimination." The purpose of the tax, he explained, is to assure that the burden of the $5,000,000,000 national defense program is equitably distributed according to ability to pay "so that a few do not gain from the sacrifices of the many." Individuals and companies in the film industry which might make a profit over the limit set by Congress would be subject to the excess profits levy.

Public Reaction To Defense Tax Shows Patriotism

run matinee prices now total 35 cents, including State and federal taxes, instead of the former 30-cent scale.

Independent and circuit operators in the Albany territory reported that very few patrons walked away after learning of the admission increases. Fabian's Leland, Albany, was the only downtown theatre which absorbed the three-cent tax on the 25-cent admission.

No theatre in the Dallas area was reported to have cut its scale below the exemption. Robert J. O'Donnell of Interstate and R. I. Payne of R. E. Griffith Theatres said there was no adverse reaction to the new levy. Interstate passed on the tax, as did Griffith except in a few high-admission spots where it is being absorbed.

Exhibitors in Harrisburg are blaming the product and not the new Federal tax for any drop in grosses.

In Des Moines Tri-States and independents raised the 26-cent scale to 30 cents, including the tax. In all other admission rates the tax was merely added. A service charge of 10 cents on all passes and free admissions was inaugurated.

Miami theatres added the tax and patrons paid willingly. In Jacksonville a slight increase in ticket sales was noted on the first day of the new admission tax. All theatres there are passing on the levy to the public.

In Omaha exhibitors decided that the tax could not be absorbed and generally it was added. The Orpheum and Omaha added five cents to the matinee price and included the tax.

In Scranton and everywhere else the Comerford theatres are passing on the tax and most of the theatres in the area followed their example.

Increases in Buffalo

Downtown theatres in Buffalo increased prices to an even figure and included the tax. Only neighborhood theatres had odd-figure admission scales. Three downtown houses have admissions of 30 cents to 6 P. M. and 40 after that time; the former scale was 25 and 35 cents. In cases where the old tax starting at 41 cents had been absorbed it was included in price increases, with the top at the Buffalo going from 55 to 60 cents.

All theatres affected by the tax in Minneapolis have passed it on and houses which have increased from 25 to 28 cents are asking for an additional week of clearance over houses charging 20 cents and not affected by the new levy.

Patrons in Birmingham willingly paid the tax and some even expressed an eagerness to pay even more, if necessary.

Most neighborhood and subsequent runs in Indianapolis increased admission from 25 to 28 cents, but 18 theatres went to 30 cents and others may follow that example. Downtown scale is now 28 cents during the day and 33 and 44 cents in the evening.

In Milwaukee the first run Fox and Warner houses increased the scale five cents and included the tax. The Riverside added the levy and some outlying houses absorbed the tax.

Rochester exhibitors reported no reaction against the new tax.

The public in Lincoln was prepared for the tax through advance newspaper stories and there were no protests.

The Princess in Nashville dropped its scale from 25 cents to 20 cents, as an experiment. Other theatres added the levy.

The tax was passed on in the Louisville area where patrons are accustomed to pennies in change on account of the state levy.

BLOCK, BLIND SELLING BANNED BY CUBAN LAW

Government Decree Called Most Drastic Passed in Non-Totalitarian Country

Indications of the extremes to which anti-block-booking and blind-selling legislation can go are shown in a Presidential decree regulating motion picture distribution in Cuba. Home offices of the distributors in New York learned this week the full import of what is considered the most drastic measure ever passed for the regulation of film distribution in a non-warring, non-totalitarian country.

More Severe Than England

In England blind book and advance booking have been prohibited for years, and advance trade showings are required. But the British Cinematograph Films Act is not nearly as severe as the Cuban decree—which is of particular interest to U. S. distributors, at a time when block booking and other trade practices are being considered in the negotiations for a settlement of the "key" New York anti-trust suit against the majors.

The Cuban anti-block-booking, blind selling measure was sponsored by Dr. Oscar Bonachea, Secretary of Commerce. The bill, in some respects, is similar to the Neely block booking measure which passed the U. S. Senate last year and on which the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee held hearings this Spring.

In Cuba there are approximately 375 theatres, seating 75,000 and American films dominate about two-thirds of the screen-playing time. There is some local production.

The Cuban decree, which has already gone into effect was promulgated by Frederico Laredo Bru, president. The preamble of the measure explains that the local exhibitors organization, "The Association of Impresarios of the Republic of Cuba" appealed to the Government for assistance in regulating their relations with U. S. distributors. The exhibitors declared that they wanted only special films and not blocks. A protest was also made against the practice of buying films before they are made, without adequate information—blind buying. It was further asserted that exhibitors who complained found themselves on a "black list" and were not able to obtain product, even if local "arbitration commission" decided in their favor.

The decree was made, it was said, in the interest of "good commercial faith" and for "the normal and honest development of mercantile business." It was pointed out that the U. S. Department of Commerce had jurisdiction in these matters. The preamble also reminded officials that it is against the law for them to accept or use passes or tickets to public entertainments.

The President of Cuba outlawed the following trade practices:

(a) Block-booking;

(b) Contracting or renting pictures before they are made "therefore not permitting the exhibitors to appreciate the quality of same";

(c) Renting pictures that have been made without giving the "most exact possible" synopsis to the exhibitor "so that he may not be cheated as to the quality and theme of the picture which he wishes to select in a free manner";

(d) Any "black list" or other methods to force the exhibitors to give up their free choice;

(e) "All and every class of act or procedure which limits the freedom of the exhibitor to rent the pictures which he wishes to select";

(f) Imposition of fines on the exhibitor;

(g) "To rent or to offer to rent, or to transport pictures for public exhibition in any way which may lead to violate or to annul the effects of this decree" and

(h) Pressure of any sort by distributors.

The second section of the decree provided for compulsory cooperative ads on all percentage bookings. "In case that the film rental consists of a certain percentage of the gross income, the distributors shall be compelled to share in the advertising expenses accorded, in proportion to the percentage assigned."

Newsreels and short subjects of less than 2,000 feet are not included in the decree.

Provision was made for carrying the act into effect. The general administration was placed in the hands of the Secretary of Commerce. Inspections of theatres and distributors' offices are provided for and the firms are required to assist the inspector's work.

Passes for officials are banned in a section that would please many exhibitors: "The requests, the offers, the promises or acceptances of invitations, passes, or free tickets, to enable the public officers to enjoy gratis or with a discount, public entertainment, is absolutely prohibited; the same applies to any person responsible for the compliance of the dispositions of this Decree, and in such case, both the public officer and the exhibitor or the distributor, will be accused as guilty of such an act."

Coast Union Men Sue IATSE Officers

A $250,000 damage suit was filed in the Superior Court of Los Angeles Tuesday by 10 "rebel" leaders of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators against the International officers of the union.

The suit, which is an aftermath of last year's fight by the United Studio Technicians Guild to overthrow the IATSE in Hollywood, seeks a receiver for the dissolved Local 37, studio technicians.

RKO, Skouras Pool Cocalis Theatres

The RKO and Skouras circuits in New York Wednesday took over seven Cocalis circuit houses in the Bronx on a pooling arrangement, RKO to operate the Pelham, Castle Hill and Marble Hill theatres and Skouras operating the Ward, Square, Pilgrim and Interboro.

IATSE Operators Local 306 will supplant Empire State union members at the seven theatres in the pool.

Paramount Board Reelects Officers

The board of directors of Paramount Pictures met Wednesday at the home office in New York and reelected all officers, as follows:

Barney Balaban, president; Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board; Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee; Y. Frank Freeman, Austin C. Keough, Neil Agnew, John W. Hicks, Jr., and George Bagnall, vice-presidents; Mr. Keough, secretary; Norman Collyer, Jacob H. Karp, and Frank Meyer, assistant secretaries; Fred Mohrhardt, comptroller, and Walter B. Cokell, treasurer.

PROPOSALS FOR ARBITRATION, OTHER PRACTICES, WIN NEW TRIAL DELAY

Sixth Adjournment Granted as Trust Suit Conferees Reach Agreement on Arbitration Principle; Judge Asks Speed

The Government's anti-trust suit against the majors was postponed again on Monday until July 8th by Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard. The sixth adjournment of the trial was granted after the judge was told that specific proposals have been offered by sub-committees working on various disputed points. It was reported that both sides approve of arbitration for industry disputes.

Consent Decree Likely

Each day attorneys for the Government and the defense meet at the Bar Association Building. Special sub-committee meetings as well as general discussions are held. Nothing definite has been decided yet but indications are that objections to a consent decree, voiced by some of the companies, have been settled and any out of court conclusion of the suit will be reached through that means.

The arbitration sub-committee, Robert Sher, assistant attorney general; Edward C. Raferty, United Artists and Universal, and Austin Keough, Paramount, have, it was said, made considerable progress. Although the Government and the defendants agree on the principle of arbitration, there has been no decision on the type of arbitration machinery which could be used. The Government wants the arbitration boards to have wide powers, while the majors wish the powers of the boards to be limited and to apply only in specific cases. A disputed point is whether local boards should have complete power or a National Appeal Board should be set up to hear certain cases.

Speed Asked by Judge

The sixth adjournment was requested by J. Stephen Doyle, assistant attorney general, who explained what progress had been made to Judge Goddard. The point that it was "very desirable to reach an agreement as soon as possible" was stressed by the judge.

No agreement has been reached on the block-booking section. Various proposals for a limited number of pictures in a block have been considered. One of these would give the distributors the right to offer blocks of ten films of which the exhibitor could cancel two, or the alternative of offering five in a block with no cancellation rights.

Local buying was suggested in the Department of Commerce memorandum on the suit. The defense has suggested compulsory arbitration of disputes between circuits and independent theatres as a substitute for local buying.

The questions of clearance and overbuying are also being discussed but no details of specific proposals were reported.

Some of the five theatre-owning defendants want any consent decree to cover the whole industry so that other firms could not gain a competitive advantage over those required to sign.

While negotiations on the consent decree continue, the majors have decided that there should be no delay in selling the 1940-41 season's product. Selling is said to be about the same as, or a bit ahead of, this time last year. It is now thought that no settlement of the suit can be reached before the Fall at which time much of the product will have been sold so that any new trade practices would probably not go into effect before the 1941-42 season.

Some of the practices covered by a settlement of the suit probably could be changed immediately but others might take time to adopt.

If consent decree talks break down entirely and the suit goes back to trial it might take a year or two before a final decision is reached, so under either alternative the companies feel that it is better to proceed with the selling at the usual time and meet new conditions when they arise.

Although discussions continue between the Government and the defense attorneys other defense attorneys in many sections of the country are carrying on their investigations and interviewing of prospective witnesses for the Government.

Prospective Government witnesses were classified by one defense attorney in the following way: exhibitors who, despite their claims of having been "driven out of business" or charged exorbitant and discriminatory rentals, frequently appear to be prosperous; witnesses who have long records of defaults in payments to distributors or unfulfilled contracts; witnesses who have the record and reputation of dealing harshly with their competition and witnesses with apparently sound grievances which, however, infrequently involve no violation of the anti-trust laws on the part of the distributors.

Trials cost, estimated at $3,500,000, in addition to the large sums already spent, has been given as another reason for seeking a settlement out of court of the New York suit.

Government Acts In Griffith Case

The Government last week continued action on the anti-trust suit against the Griffith Amusement Company and the major distributors in the Federal District Court of Oklahoma City by serving all defendants with a series of interrogatories and objections to the interrogatories must be filed shortly.

The Government asks for information on the local Oklahoma City territory, especially with regard to the nature of contracts and the principles involved. In May the Government moved to dismiss the suit so that an appeal could be made on an order for particulars but the defense counsel waived its rights under the ruling and accepted the original bill and filed answers.

It is reported that the Government will not press anti-trust suits in the field until the New York case is settled. However it may be merely proceeding with routine steps to get the cases, such as the Griffith action, ready for trial, if the settlement talks in New York are discontinued at any time.

SAYS SERIOUS PLAYS PREFERRED

"Individuals insist that they prefer comedies, but the box office records show that the serious plays which give audiences something to think about are the most heavily patronized," Owen Phillips, director of the Actors Guild, Cincinnati, said this week in addressing the Cincinnati Motion Picture Council.

He called attention to the opportunities for self-expression that are available in a civic theatre organization and said that the little theatre movement keeps alive community interest in the legitimate theatre.

Counteraction Brought In Windsor (Conn.) Case

Permitted to intervene as party defendant in the damage and injunction suit of Lampert Theatre of Windsor, Inc. vs. Vitagraph, Inc., Joseph L. Shulman, Plaza Theatre, Windsor, Conn., asked $25,000 damages, dismissal of the complaint, and that Vitagraph be enjoined from withholding booking and delivery of pictures to him. The complaint stated that the corporation had entered into first run contracts with Vitagraph with the understanding that there would be no second run in Windsor but that subsequently Vitagraph had sold the Plaza second run with 14-day clearance.

Mr. Shulman asserted that the Lampert Theatre of Windsor, Inc., a Lockwood-Gordon corporation, had not sustained any damage. He said he was "unable to procure an adequate and timely supply of moving picture films for exhibition at the Plaze."

Vitagraph's answer to the complaint denied the company entered into a second run agreement in violation of an agreement with the plaintiff; denied custom or usage to confer with first run to arrive at fair clearance; and that in a town of 8,000 such as Windsor, usual clearance is several months.

Baltimore Case Appeal Scheduled

The appeal of the Westway theatre in Baltimore from the decision of Federal Judge W. C. Chestnut dismissing its anti-trust suit against the major distributors was scheduled to be argued in the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals this week. Defendants have filed their final briefs for the appeal and arguments will be heard.

The action charged that the distributors and the Durkee circuit combined to force unfair clearance regulations for the Durkee Engewood over the Westway. Judge Chestnut, in dismissing the case, ruled that the established clearance was "fair."

Suit Dismissed

New York Supreme Court Justice Carroll Walter Wednesday dismissed two minority stockholder suits against Consolidated Film Industries, its officers and directors, Republic Pictures and Cajo Company, Inc.

Extend Brooklyn Pool

Extension of the Brooklyn pooling arrangement, whereby Fabian Theatres manages the Fox, Strand, and Paramount, in that borough, has been assured, it was learned this week. The extension is for five years.

Emanuel, Fernon, Receivers

Jay Emanuel, operator of a small circuit of Philadelphia territory theatres, and trade publisher; and Norman P. Fernon, a stockholder in the theatre, were appointed on Wednesday as receivers of the Carmen Theatre, de luxe Philadelphia house of 2,500 seats. They were given authority to continue operation, pending measures to conserve bondholders' interests.

CANADA 'BLACKOUTS' NOT AFFECTING THEATRES; INDUSTRY WAR BENEFIT SET

No Marquee or Other Lights Allowed; Propaganda and Benefit Plans Continued; New Production Is Set

by VICTOR SERVICE
in St. John, N. B.

Practice "blackouts" are under way in Canada, but they are not affecting business at motion picture theatres, as they did in London, Paris and elsewhere in European capitals of the Allies. Theatres in the Canadian blackout places can show no lights on upright signs, marquees or from lobby or elsewhere.

Fine for Violations

Theatres, as other establishments, are being watched closely by Air Raid Precautions police, who report any violations, notably light penetrations from within buildings. Blackouts last from ten minutes to half an hour. Violators are subject to a fine.

The practice blackouts prevail only along the Atlantic coastline, in the maritime provinces, because of their vulnerability to attack from sea and air.

At present, motion picture theatres are the only places exempted from a business suspension policy during blackouts—the Government apparently desiring to keep amusement places going for their moral effect. Streets are pitch black, of course, and all stores, garages, service stations and the like must shut down during the practice. Within theatres, the only light permitted is that from projector to screen.

The Canadian motion picture industry's "Win the War" campaign, engineered by the Canadian Motion Picture Pioneers, N. L. Nathanson, chairman, is now fully mobilized, extending from coast to coast in the Dominion for an industrywide war benefit, to be held on July 15th, and into Hollywood, where producers and American talent are cooperating.

TWO NEW SERIES FOR PARAMOUNT

For the 1940-41 product season Paramount has announced that it will distribute two new series of short subjects. The first, six subjects in all, will be travelogues to be called "Fascinating Journeys." One reel in length and photographed in color, they are to be produced by World Windows, Inc.

The second series, also six one-reel subjects in color, will be the "Merry Model" animated cartoons to be produced by George Pal and Stanley Neal in Hollywood. In place of the pen, paint and ink drawings, wooden and plastic puppets will be posed on miniature sets and each movement will be photographed on a single frame. The process has been used for commercials.

Benefit in Maritimes

Representing motion picture distribution and exhibition interests in the organization of the maritime provinces into two districts for the July 15th, coast-to-coast war savings benefit, were John A. Cooper and James O'Loghlin, of Toronto. They spoke at rallies of exhibitors and exchangemen at St. John, N. B. and Halifax, N. S., forming a division for each district, one for New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island and another for Nova Scotia.

Every theatre and exchange was represented. The decision to hold the benefit show on a weekday instead of Sunday, as originally planned, settled the storm that broke over the heads of the sponsors, with clergymen taking the lead in opposition. Incidentally, a plan started several months ago to open theatres on Sundays in Halifax, has met with formidable objection by local clergy. The open theatres are claimed essential on Sundays to provide entertainment for soldiers, sailors and airforcemen.

Canadian Production, Despite Denials

by COLIN R. HAWORTH
in Montreal

Despite Alexander Korda's and others' denials made in New York and repeated in Hollywood, of plans for starting film production in Canada, talk in film circles in the Canadian metropolis continues to center around the probable growth of a film industry in this city. Added to the welter of rumors and suppositions have come two pertinent facts—first that RKO director John Farrow will actually go to work on a made-in-Canada picture; second, that Ortus Films, of London, has signed—Elizabeth Bergner and Charles Boyer for a Canadian film, their first.

Mr. Farrow, who holds the post of Controller of Naval Information for the Canadian Government, arrived in Montreal recently with his wife Maureen O'Sullivan to make a short boosting the sale of Canadian war savings stamps and certificates. Miss O'Sullivan's short will be run in all Canadian theatres this week, announcing the forthcoming drive of the Dominion's movie industry to sell $1,000,000 worth of certificates.

Study Studio Facilities

The picture was made at the studios of Associated Screen News in Montreal and while directing it Mr. Farrow looked over the technical set-up and talked over possibilities of feature production with Ben Norrish, ASN head. Farrow said the plant could handle feature picture filming.

"On loan" by RKO to the Canadian Government since war broke out, Mr. Farrow has up till recently been engaged in active service aboard a Canadian destroyer in Atlantic convoy work. He holds a Lieutenant's commission in the Navy. His appointment to the post of Naval Information Chief, a job usually handed to a high-ranking officer, has put him in the position of being able to use his motion picture experience. And his experience of the past few months in the North Atlantic has given him the basis for his first picture which is to be built around wartime convoy work.

Films on War Subjects

Mr. Farrow's film will be a feature picture with a story, love-interest and Hollywood stars, probably those of British citizenship. He said he is planning a number of feature pictures to deal with war work and these films will star many of British stars now in Hollywood. Many of them have already signified their willingness to serve.

Mr. Farrow would name no specific stars as possibilities for his first picture since no contracts had yet been signed but such names as Cary Grant, Leslie Howard, Raymond Massey and Basil Rathbone loomed as possibilities.

When work is started on the new film, backgrounds from "Atlantic Patrol" or any other documentary films on navy life will probably be used. A second might deal with the Royal Canadian Air Force, for the RKO man, in addition to becoming Information Chief for the Navy has been given a liason job to do motion picture work for the air force.

Meanwhile in Montreal, belief that "something is going to happen," production-wise, grows. Francis Lederer has arrived in Montreal. He was named some weeks ago as a possible prospect for the picture Ortus Films is starting to make in Canada.

Stars on Way to Canada

The prospect of Lederer getting a part in the new Ortus picture may be indefinite but word from London advises that Charles Boyer and Elizabeth Bergner have already been signed and are on their way to Canada for the film. With them are coming Michael Powell, who is to direct, Roland Gillett, production manager, and a staff of cameramen and technicians. They will remain on location in Canada for three months, shooting sequences from coast to coast and completing the studio work of the film either in Montreal or New York. The story, written by Emerick Pressburger deals with a Nazi submarine sunk in Hudson's Bay. The survivors reach shore and are absorbed into Canadian life with one exception and he returns to Germany with the story of a free and unopressed life in Canada.

BROADCASTERS MAY BUY MUSIC CATALOGUE AT COST OF MILLIONS

Broadcast Music, Inc., Reported Negotiating for Robbins, Miller, and Feist Catalogues at Cost of $4,000,000

Despite talk in the music industry about a settlement between the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers and the National Association of Broadcasters, the music publishing firm, Broadcast Music, Inc., set up by the NAB several months ago, to supplant ASCAP, proceeded this week with plans to acquire the Robbins, Miller, and Feist music catalogues from MGM.

Meanwhile, the NAB, last week answered the new ASCAP contracts with a detailed analysis, "proving" among many other things, that "the broadcaster who signs an ASCAP contract does not known what, if anything, he will be getting for his money". Accompanying the analysis was a letter of explanation from Neville Miller, president of the NAB to the organization's members.

ASCAP this week reported it received $4,142,024 from radio in 1939, $1,166,232 from theatres, $1,203,495 from all other public performers of its members' music.

Delay Over Price

The acquisition by BMI of the Robbins, Miller, and Feist catalogues has been blocked by price, and by legal difficulties, it was said this week. The reported price for the catalogue is $4,000,000; and radio and BMI officials met last week to discuss means of raising the money, and whether it would be worth raising. BMI officails said this week that member stations had authorized their board to use its own discretion; but it was also not denied that the members had been asked to increase their commitments from one to three years, to facilitate the purchase of this catalogue grouping. Hesitancy to give such commitments was said to have come from some of the coast members of the NAB, and from some BMI members who fear conscription of the radio industry by the United States Government.

The legal difficulties reported were connected with the rights of composers for compensation through ASCAP for radio performances.

The situation was somewhat as follows this week: the publishers own the copyrights to songs they publish. Under the standard contract, the "small rights" are owned by the composers. BMI, primarily interested in broadcast privileges, claims that the publisher owns the dominant right to the copyright, that rights which accrue to the composer are subject to the publisher's ownership of the copyright, and that, when the catalogue is sold, Ascap cannot, therefore, control radio performances.

The issue may be taken to the courts.

The Miller, Robbins, and Feist catalogues are now affiliated with ASCAP.

The object of acquiring those catalogues would be to assure BMI enough popular favorites of the last 20 years or so to make assumption by the broadcasters of an exclusive BMI contract possible, without a public outcry against the withdrawal of many favorites of that period, which is what the absence of ASCAP music admittedly would mean. BMI's endeavors to build up, in the meanwhile, with its own new staff of composers, and several small libraries of popular and classical music, a self-sufficiency, have been proceeding; but acquisition of a strong popular catalogue grouping such as that under consideration, would considerably aid the music publishing firm, it was conceded.

NEBRASKA APPEALS ANTI-ASCAP LAW

Nebraska last week appealed to the United States Supreme Court against a Federal statutory court decision, branding its anti-ASCAP law unconstitutional. The appeal was filed by Walter Johnson, state attorney general, in Lincoln. ASCAP was given 40 days to show why the lower court decision should not be reversed. ASCAP revenue in the state amounts to about $70,000 per year of which three-fifths is collected from 12 Nebraska radio stations.

The NAB analysis of the ASCAP completed contracts, made available to the broadcasters two weeks ago, charges, among other things, that the broadcaster who signs an ASCAP contract does not know what he is getting for his money; that ASCAP may restrict its entire catalogue without any recourse on the part of the broadcaster; that the proposed form of license does not enable the broadcaster to keep step with progress; that ASCAP has deprived the station of all "outs" from the contract, but has given itself additional "outs"; that the ASCAP tax is levied not only on time sales, but on talent costs, line charges, etc.; and that the proposed contract does not cure the essential defects of the existing contract.

ASCAP Contract Attacked

In a preface to the analysis the NAB remarks of the new ASCAP contract are:

"It obligates broadcasters for a period of five years, but it imposes no obligation on ASCAP to furnish any specified body of music, at any specified price. In other words, ASCAP, under the present contract, will have complete power of dictatorship over the music situation, not only after the expiration of its proposed contract, but even during its term. The apparent protection which it gives, and the apparent rights which it grants, are in fact entirely illusory."

Mr. Miller's explanatory letter to NAB and BMI members said: "The progress of BMI to date, clearly demonstrates that we can solve our music problem. . . . The solution which broadcasters have sought for years is now within our grasp—provided we do not abandon our efforts to create a pool of music, and do not accept the bait dangled before our eyes by ASCAP, in the form of the proposed contract."

His letter further charged: "ASCAP has drawn a one-sided contract for you to sign. ASCAP requires a lot in the way of payment; it guarantees little. ASCAP may cancel the contract; but the broadcaster is bound for five years. . . . There are many provisions for levying increased toll upon broadcasters. . . . The percentage of payment is lessened in some cases; but the base is broadened to include, not only time sales, but talent costs and line charges. None of the abuses are eliminated. The question whether you have the right to make an arrangement is left unanswered, undoubtedly for a purpose. The indemnity clause does not protect the sponsor or the agency. . . . The industry's action at this time will determine whether broadcasters can obtain music in a free competitive market, or continue to sign on a dotted line laid before them by a music monopoly."

Meanwhile, two networks, the NBC and the CBS continued to attempt aiding BMI in popularizing its music. The former has been reported inserting BMI songs into its sustaining programs; the latter is reported especially vigorous in eliminating many ASCAP tunes from its sustaining programs, and being reported ready to ask the name bands to include BMI songs.

ASCAP is surveying its song catalogues, at the request of its availability committee. It also, it was learned, has ceased making payments to French and Belgian performing rights societies.

Merrit E. Tompkins, general manager of BMI, said last week that payment within two days, recently, of the first 15 per cent of the BMI license fee, by 80 per cent of the BMI members, was a "really remarkable demonstration of the solidarity of the broadcasting industry behind BMI."

Compare ASCAP Revenue

The BMI public relations department has been reiterating the complaints made at the beginning of the struggle several months ago: that radio pays much more money to ASCAP than any other industry. Charts released by BMI claim that, in 1931, motion pictures, radio's nearest competitor in the use of music, paid $665,000 to ASCAP, and radio $939,500. The disparity has grown, the charts explain, showing that in 1939, motion pictures paid $1,150,000 to ASCAP, and radio paid $4,300,000. This, BMI asserts, is 40 times as much per dollar of revenue in 1939, as any other user of music.

As of last week, there were 300 clients of BMI. The organization said they represented in excess of 70 per cent of the revenue which ASCAP derived from radio.

To date, BMI has succeeded in acquiring the catalogue of M. M. Cole and subsidiaries, of Chicago, effective January 1st; the music and other assets of Hinds, Hayden, and Eldredge, of New York; and it has made available to its members sources of non-ASCAP music such as the Associated Music Publishers, Ricordi of Milan, the Society of European Stage Authors and Composers, and many other independent publishers.

Application Granted

The Interstate Commerce Commission has granted the application of Tacme Film Service, Inc., to operate as a contract carrier of motion pictures and theatre accessories and advertising display material between New York City and Butler, Clifton, East Rutherford, Franklin, Garfield, Hawthorne, Little Falls, Lyndhurst, Passaic, Paterson, Pompton Lakes, Ridgewood, Secaucus and Sussex, N. J.

Hemingway Gets Injunction

New York Supreme Court Justice Felix C. Benvenga Wednesday issued a temporary injunction in favor of Ernest Hemingway, Benjamin Glazer and the Theatre Guild, Inc., restraining Film Alliance of the U. S., distributor, and Midtown Theatre Corporation, operator of the Rialto at Times Square, from using the title "Fifth Column Squad" for a picture scheduled to open at the Rialto this week. The court ruled that the plaintiffs had exclusive rights to the title "The Fifth Column" based on Mr. Hemingway's play.

ANDY HARDY MEETS DEBUTANTE

Every man, woman and child in the nation will be grateful for this wonderful entertainment. It is not exaggerating to say that localities would be justified in declaring a holiday when this picture plays, for it is a show nobody will want to miss. The Hardy Family comes to the Gay White Way in a rousing, uproarious story that reunites Judy Garland (and her captivating songs) with Mickey Rooney. From this minute on keep saying "Cheer up America! Andy Hardy Meets Debutante."

LISBON BECOMES LAST STAND FOR FOREIGN HEADQUARTERS OF MAJORS

Metro, RKO Have Headquarters in Portugal; Some Companies Out of Touch or Moving Personnel to New York

The site of the European film headquarters for American motion picture companies, which had been in Paris until the roar of guns and rumble of tanks made it clear that the capital city of France and all continental Europe would fall, has not yet been chosen. Lisbon is now the leading contender for the title of European film capital for the U. S. with offices of two companies already established there, but New York, from which European contact is being kept by some companies, is perhaps today, more than any modern city, the film headquarters for Europe. Others have had no direct contact abroad for weeks.

Lost Touch with Some

At the time the French Government left Paris most of the film offices were moved to the temporary capitol, at Tour, and later to Bordeaux. Several companies, so far as their home offices know, still have their European headquarters in Bordeaux, others have moved to Barcelona, Spain, and to Lisbon, Portugal, and others have picked other locations.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and RKO have set up headquarters in Lisbon, Paramount in Barcelona and Columbia and United Artists are believed to be still in Bordeaux. Warners Brothers' home office "just doesn't know" where the European headquarters is at the present time. It was thought that the company's men have probably separated and are in different cities. Twentieth Century-Fox has temporary offices in Barcelona and in Lisbon.

Offices were opened in Lisbon by Benjamin Miggins, European manager for Twentieth Century-Fox, just before he returned to this country for home office conferences and by Reginald Armour, European general manager for RKO, following his trip back to Europe. Phil Reisman, RKO vice-president in charge of foreign distribution, said, "Lisbon is the only place over there you can work out of at the present time."

20th-Fox Location Uncertain

Decision on the location of the continental headquarters for Twentieth Century-Fox will depend on the outcome of conferences between Walter J. Hutchinson, director of foreign distribution, Mr. Miggins and other foreign department officials. Irving A. Mass said no decision had been made between Lisbon and Barcelona and other plans were being discussed which could not be disclosed. R. A. Kreier, assistant European manager is believed to be in Barcelona. William B. Morgan, supervisor for France, Belgium and Switzerland, has transferred his office from Bordeaux to Barcelona.

Joseph H. Seidelman, export manager and vice-president of Universal, said the company had abandoned its European office. Commenting on Lisbon as a film capitol he said it would probably be the best for contact purposes, accessible for mails and transportation to America but no place from which prints could be shipped. He expressed the opinion that what can be done with regard to the continental European market at this time can be handled best from New York. Other companies may adopt a similar policy.

Fred W. Lange, general foreign representative for Paramount, has set up his office in Barcelona. Albert Deane said Barcelona had advantages over Lisbon in that it was a better place for film shipments and since Spain is friendly to the axis powers, it might be more satisfactory as a film base.

David Blum of MGM reported all the staff safely out of France into Spain or Portugal and headquarters have been set up in Lisbon which, he said, was the only neutral port accessible at this time. Madrid or some other city in Spain, it was said, is not so easy to reach. Larry Lawrence is European head for MGM.

Columbia, UA in Bordeaux

Columbia and United Artists have not been able to keep in contact with their European representatives, when last heard from they were in Bordeaux. A. Stein, continental supervisor for Columbia, is believed to be still in Bordeaux. T. P. Mulrooney, foreign sales manager, for United Artists, said no news had reached the home office other than that the office had been moved to Bordeaux.

Following Universal other companies may give up, temporarily, a European headquarters and run that part of the world from New York because little is left that is not dominated by Germany, Italy and Russia. The present trouble in the Balkans has threatened one of the few existing "free" film markets in Europe. A glance at the map shows that Switzerland, Greece, Sweden are about all that is left of the European market, and even those countries are close to the fighting.

The film business continues to be satisfactory in most of Europe but there is no revenue for the American companies. Conditions in Spain, where the companies stopped sending in film in 1936, are said to be good, with the theatres doing very well but there is no immediate outlook for any revenue from the market. There is a report that all French motion picture theatres will reopen within a few days but the films will be subject to Nazi censorship.

Communication Difficult

Communication with Europe continues to be difficult. As noted above many of the companies are not sure of the present whereabouts of their representatives. Radio communication with much of Europe, as well as other forms, has been interrupted. Now that Italy is in the war the U. S. ships no longer run to the Mediterranean, mails are uncertain.

Massce-Barnett Company, film shippers, reported that conditions have made several readjustments in arrangements necessary but film shipments are proceeding satisfactorily. For continental Europe films are shipped to Spain or Portugal and thence overland to their destination. The American Export lines have added a new service to Lisbon, with sailings every week; Spanish and Portugese ships also make the run and can be used for film shipments.

Lisbon in which two of the companies have already located their European headquarters and which may become the film center of Europe, if the companies do not abandon activities and bring their key men back to New York is even closer than Paris to New York. Lisbon is only 24 hours by clipper and planes are scheduled to depart three times each week. Passenger steamers reach the capitol of Portugal in eight days.

Until recent events changed the film map of Europe, Lisbon was unimportant as a motion picture center. That city is the capital of a small country, 35,490 square miles, the size of Indiana and smaller than 36 of the 48 States in this country. Portugal's population is about 7,000,000. Before the war the following companies had small film branches in Lisbon: Loew's Inc., Paramount, RKO, Twentieth Century-Fox. The "Film Row" of Lisbon is Rua Braamcamp 10, where Loew's, Paramount and 20th-Fox have their branch. The RKO office is at Avenida Dupue de Loulé 95.

By air most of the important cities of Europe can be reached from Lisbon. Railroad transportation is uncertain. Following the Spanish civil war railroad bridges linking that country and France were not repaired. With Italy in the war transportation by water in the Mediterranean is hazardous. Lisbon, at the mouth of the Tagus River, is about 300 miles from Madrid; about 800 miles to Paris, two days by boat to Naples, when boats are running.

"BETTER PICTURES" SEEN NEED HERE

The American public will see better motion pictures because the loss in foreign revenue must be made up at home, according to Ned E. Depinet, vice-president of RKO.

"We could try to cut production costs but the public wouldn't stand for it," he said. The problem is to get more revenue from the domestic market. The only way I know is to make better pictures. Of course, all studios realize this and are now working towards that end."

Foreign Officials Sailing

A. L. Pratchett, Paramount's general manager in Cuba, Mexico and Central America, left New York Saturday, June 29th, for his headquarters in Cuba after conferring with John W. Hicks, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution. Other Paramount foreign representatives have scheduled their return as follows: J. D. Rappaport, Havana branch manager, sailing for Cuba Friday; John L. Day, Jr., general manager in South America, and S. L. Pierpont, manager in Brazil, sailing July 12th for Rio de Janeiro, and Frank Kennebeck, India general manager, returning to his post in Bombay the latter part of this month.

Gould to Latin America

Walter Gould, division manager for United Artists in Latin America, left New York Friday, June 26th, for Mexico on the first leg of a visit to the company's branch offices below the Rio Grande.

Baez to Brazil

Enrique Baez, United Artists general manager in Brazil, left for his headquarters in Rio de Janeiro Friday, June 28th, following a six weeks visit in this country.

May Exports Drop

Exports of photographic and projection goods decreased in May over the same month last year the Commerce Department, Washington, reported this week. The May, 1940, figure is $1,294,000 against $1,650,000 for May, 1939. Figures for five months of the year ending in May show 1940 figures at $6,971,000 compared to $8,158,000 for 1939.

STOCK PRICES OF FILM ISSUES OFF $158,542,000 SINCE WAR STARTED

Total Market Value June 29th $451,930,125; Gain Shown in First Three Months as Exchange Rose Generally

by THE ANALYST

Motion picture shares listed on the New York Stock Exchange dropped $174,439,000 in price during the first six months of 1940. Total market value of 19 film issues on the stock exchange was $451,930,125 as of the close of trading last Friday, June 29, compared with $626,369,125 at the end of 1939.

"War Babies"

While the European war was a later dominating influence on trading, a study of the stock movements shows that from the outbreak of World War II on September 1, 1939, when Germany invaded Poland, to the end of 1939, there was an actual gain in prices of motion picture issues, from a total valuation of $610,472,125 on September 1, 1939 to $626,369,125 on December 31, 1939. This was due mainly to the action of the general market which, under the lead of the "war babies," was discounting a protracted period of hostilities during which American business would feel a boom effect of large scale war orders.

This, however, was upset in the spring of 1940 when Germany broke the long Winter stalement in the war by invading Norway and Denmark and subsequently launching an offensive in the west that moved France out of the war and gave the Germans control of the entire European Atlantic coast line from the northernmost tip of Norway to the Spanish coast in the south.

These developments, coupled with the entrance of Italy into the war, raised the possibility of an early cessation of hostilities and there were drastic shakeouts in many stocks which had been bought on the basis of a long war.

The general market consequently sold off and the general average of prices around the middle of June was at the lowest in two years. Trading tapered off sharpy.

There were stabilizing influences at work in the general market, however. Adoption by Congress of a huge national defense program was expected to take up the slack caused by the possible loss of any war orders placed for the Allies. In the latter connection, British purchasing agents assumed orders previously placed by the French, but, with a German invasion of England apparently imminent, the situation was uncertain.

The stock market also moved upward on the nomination of Wendell Willkie as Republican presidential candidate, so that the end of June found prices generally holding steady in a narrow range and trading quiet as market operators attempted to gauge future developments.

Hinge on Britain

The effect of the war on the motion picture industry and its stocks appeared to hinge mainly on British developments, according to well-informed opinion in Wall Street. Domestic box office receipts and income from film rentals were running some 5 to 15 per cent ahead of last year during the spring of 1940, it was reported.

There was an increasing foreign demand for United States films outside of Europe because of a growing shortage of German, British and French product, but adverse South American and Canadian exchange rates cut into the profits of this increased business. General market opinion, however, was favorable on picture stocks for a long term outlook, it being pointed out that they had, as a result of the decline of the first six months of the year, discounted some foreign uncertainties.

Good Background for Future

A good background for future profits of motion picture companies was provided by the general business situation during the first half. All major business indices made favorable comparisons with last year.

Among individual motion picture units highlighting business news as the end of the first half approached was Universal Pictures Company, which earned a net profit of $920,370 in the second quarter ended April 27, compared with a net profit of $581,587 in the corresponding quarter of last year and with a net loss of $199,487 in the second quarter two years ago. J. C. Cowdin, chairman of the board, reported to stockholders that the company had closed more than 9,700 contracts in the domestic market for 1939-40 product, compared with 8,400 contracts for the 1938-39 product. He reported improvement in the company's financial position with a net reduction of $1,381,745 in bank loans and an increase of $1,163,257 in net working capital.

Another optimistic report to stockholders was made by Barney Balaban, president of Paramount Pictures, Inc.. He said earnings for the current quarter will be substantially ahead of the June, 1939, quarter.

210 THEATRES IN NEW ILLINOIS OWNERS GROUP

Fight on Adverse Legislation Listed as Primary Object; "Gypsy" Show Study Planned

Illinois exhibitors' new United Theatre Owners of Illinois, at a meeting last Thursday in Peoria set in motion the machinery to carry out a definite platform for the owners of some 210 theatres represented from "downstate." The avowed purpose of the organization is to fight legislation which they fear might be harmful to the exhibitors.

Headquarters in Springfield

Permanent headquarters will be established in Springfield, the state capital so that representatives of the group may watch proposed legislation affecting the entire state and start efforts to forestall their passage.

Board members and theatres they operate are:

George Kerasotes, Kerasotes Theatres, Springfield.

Fred Anderson, Anderson Circuit, Morris, Ill.

A. B. McCullom, McCullom Circuit, Hoopeston, Ill.

Charles Dyas, Lyric Theatre, Earlville, Ill.

Joseph Emma, Deerpath Theatre, Lake Forest.

Wright Catlow, Barrington, Ill.

Jules J. Rubens, Publix-Great States Theatres, Chicago.

H. U. Bailey, Bailey Enterprises, Princeton, Ill.

Edward G. Zorn, Crescent Theatre, Pontiac, Ill.

E. E. Alger, Alger Theatres, La Salle, Ill.

Chas. Kuchan, Capitol Theatre, Canton, Ill.

A. L. Hainline, Illinois Theatre Circuit, McComb, Illinois.

Steve Bennis, Lincoln, Ill.

Dominic Frisina, Frisina Circuit, Springfield, Ill.

John Koletis, Rivoli Theatre, Rock Island, Ill.

Tracy Orr, Edna Theatre, Gibson City, Ill.

R. H. Schoelhorn, Crystal Theatre, Dundee.

In addition to the foregoing, eight more directors will be added to the board in the near future. The permanent executive secretary is William F. Crouch. The board selected the following to become members of the legislative committee:

H. U. Bailey, A. L. Hainline, Chas. Carpentier, East Moline, Ill., George Kerasotes, John B. Giachetto, Frisinia Circuit, F. C. Souttar, Fox Theatres, East St. Louis, and M. H. Kirkhart, Lincoln, Illinois.

The organization also will undertake an investigation to determine the source of the 16mm. film, used by "gypsy" motion picture operators who invade the small towns and offer feature attractions on the smaller film free to townsfolk who attend the carnivals at which they usually appear.

At the Thursday meeting in informal talks it was ascertained that exhibitors throughout the State are passing the new tax on to their patrons.

New York Allied May Join MPTOA

Allied Theatre Owners of New York, of which Max A. Cohen is president, may join the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America as the New York State member of that organization. The unit was ousted by national Allied last year in a disagreement over policies.

The executive board at a special meeting in New York Wednesday, June 26th, considered an invitation from the MPTOA, and according to an Allied statement, "it is expected that the state organization will look favorably" toward an affiliation.

The directors voted to maintain present admission scales and to pass the new defense tax to the public. They also offered the services of the organization to President Roosevelt to aid national defense.

Northwest Allied Meeting Wednesday

The main subject for consideration when Northwest Allied convenes at the Nicollect Hotel in Minneapolis Wednesday and Thursday probably will be the scheduled committee report on the organization of a buying unit. It is expected that the convention will authorize some form of a buying unit.

Considerable opposition is expected in the move to name Ben Ashe to the executive secretaryship of the organization from a group headed by Sol Lebedoff, independent exhibitor. Stan Kane, former secretary, is also being mentioned. Mr. Ashe this week resigned his position of manager of the Berger Amusement Company to run for the post.

SETOA Jacksonville Meeting July 21–23

The annual convention of the Southeastern Theatre Owners Association in Jacksonville, Fla., has been set for July 21-23. Headquarters will be at the George Washington Hotel.

New England Allied To Survey Product

The Independent Exhibitors, Inc., Allied's New England affiliate, will hold a meeting next Friday to start the product survey and information bureau authorized by the national organization at its recent convention in Chicago.

Terry-Toon Vacation Period

Terry-Toons' staff of more than a hundred are now on vacation. The New Rochelle, N. Y., plant will be closed down until July 15th. The studio has three pictures completed, including two color subjects, for Twentieth Century-Fox release in the new season and five more cartoons are in various stages of production.

Harris Assists Lewis

Lou Harris is assistant to Cliff Lewis, advertising and publicity director at the Paramount studio. The promotion was announced Monday. It was added that Mr. Harris will continue in charge of trailers.

Erpi Sues

Electrical Research Products has brought suit in a Los Angeles Superior Court to protect its rights as assignee of a note and deed of trust covering studio property formerly used by Educational Pictures. Named in the action are the Security-First National Bank, Western Service Studios, and Fine Arts Producing and Distributing Corporation.

HOLLYWOOD GETS MORE THAN THIRD OF NATION'S TOP-BRACKET SALARIES

Supplementary Treasury Release Lists 150 Film Players and Executives; 19 of First 25 in the Motion Picture Industry

One hundred and fifty motion picture stars and executives were included among the 250 persons named by the Treasury Department last week as having received $75,000 or more in salary and other compensation from any one company during 1938. Including a previous list of 400 published in January motion picture people comprise more than a third of the total number. The list was headed by Louis B. Mayer, production chief for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with a salary and bonus totalling $688,369, a substantial cut from the 1937 sum of $1,296,503. Nineteen of the first 25 persons listed were in the industry, mostly in Hollywood.

First List in January

Part I of the Treasury's annual report was published in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, January 27th, page 44, but a number of organizations, including several of the principal film companies had asked and obtained a postponement of the date for filing the returns and so were not included in the first list.

About 400, of which 100 were film personalities, were listed in the January report and 250 additional names, including 150 film people, were listed in the supplementary statement. More than one-third of the persons in the United States who received $75,000 or over in 1938 in compensation (which does not include dividends) from one company were members of the motion picture industry.

The sums listed were the amounts paid by the companies to the individuals and no provision was made for the Government's tax. The federal tax alone on some of the top incomes ran up to 60 percent and state taxes took other large slices from the big earnings.

Mr. Mayer's compensation for 1938 was at the rate of over $13,000 a week, or nearly $2,000 per day. His weekly compensation in 1937 was nearly $25,000.

Reports Combined

Consolidating the two reports the Treasury issued the following list of the 25 highest remunerations for 1938 or for the fiscal year beginning in 1938:

Louis B. Mayer, $688,369; F. A. Countway, president Lever Brothers Company (soap manufacturers), $469,713; Thomas J. Watson, president International Business Machines Corporation, $453,440; Claudette Colbert, $426,944; Bing Crosby, $410,000; Irene Dunne, $405,222; Eugene G. Grace, president Bethlehem Steel Corporation, $378,698; Charles Boyer, $375,277; Wallace Beery, $355,000; Cary Grant, $340,625; George W. Hill, president American Tobacco Company, $331,348; Hunt Stromberg, film producer, $328,817; Shirley Temple, $307,014, and Joan Crawford, $305,384.

William S. Knudsen, president General Motors Corporation, $303,400; Mervyn LeRoy, film director, $300,000; Norma Shearer, $300,000; Frank Capra, film director, $294,166; Warner Baxter, $279,807; Edward C. Stone, United States Mannager Employers Liability Assurance Corporation, Ltd., $277,185; Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc., and M-G-M, $275,673; Clark Gable, $272,000; Greta Garbo, $270,000; Fred Astaire, $266,837, and Darryl F. Zanuck, film producer, $265,000.

The supplementary reported included 73 from Loew's, Inc. (with MGM), 23 Warner Brothers, 20 RKO and 13 each from Columbia and Universal.

In general the trend of top salaries in 1938 was up from those earned in 1937. There were a number of exceptions: Greta Garbo dropped from $472,499 in 1937, top for all actors and actresses, to $270,000; Mr. Mayer's was cut nearly one-half. Wallace Beery's salary rose from $190,000 to $355,000. Loew executives, including A. M. Loew, J. Robert Rubin and N. M. Schenck, took cuts, in some cases of over 50 percent. The greatest changes were in salaries to performers and directors.

The film companies included in the January list were Cosmopolitan Corporation, Eastman Kodak Company, Fox West Coast Agency Corp., National Theatres Amusement Company, Paramount Pictures, Twentieth Century-Fox, United Artists, Samuel Goldwyn, Selznick International, Myron Selznick, Walter Wanger and Radio Corporation of America. The film lists issued last week by the Treasury follow, In many cases figures for 1937, for comparison, are not available.

THEATRE UNIONS ASK "BURLESQUE" REVIVAL

Because "burlesque" as a word connotes certain things to certain people and because business has not been good since New York's Mayor LaGuardia and License Commissioner Moss barred the word from theatre marquees and advertising the metropolitan theatrical unions met on Wednesday at the Hotel Astor, to start a "campaign" to revive the word. A committee was to confer with the Mayor, after the meeting. The unions noted that 14 houses were operating before the ban; only three, now.

Circuit Cutting War Newsreels, Not Defense Reels

Standard Theatres Corporation of Oklahoma City, Okla., will cut the worst of the horror scenes in war newsreels and will continue to show short subjects about preparedness, fifth column, army and navy and air corps activities in the circuit of theatres, as a result of a second and direct mail poll of the public's desires taken by Walter B. Shuttee, general manager.

Previous Poll of Audiences

Standard had posted girls at the doors of all its theaters to ask patrons whether they wanted to see newsreels and shorts subjects on the war. Mr. Shuttee said he was not satisfied with the results of this poll which revealed that most men were in favor of seeing the newsreels and women were about half for and half against the showing of newsreels. A majority of both voted for the short subjects on preparedness.

In a new poll the questions were printed on the back of self-addressed post cards.

The direct mail poll showed 57 percent of the men favored the showing of war newsreels and 43 percent felt they would rather not see them. The women voted 46 percent for seeing war newsreels and 54 per cent against.

Ninety percent of the men voted in favor of viewing preparedness short subjects and only 10 percent voted against them. The women voted 83 percent in favor and only 18 percent against. Sixty percent of the answers were from women and the remaining 40 percent from men.

As a result of a trial "no war" program at the Midwest theater, operated by standard in Oklahoma City, with "Susan and God" as the feature picture, the company received a letter of protest from L. D. Melton, Oklahoma tax commission official, who termed the war news deletion as "self-constituted censorship of what we should be allowed to see and hear," adding, "Neithed you nor any other agency, public or private, has any moral or legal right to censor the news reels than a newspaper editor would have to cut out the story of France's capitulation from his paper to protect sensitive feelings."

"World" to Broadway

A second play has been bought by Boyar Associates for early Broadway presentation in the newly formed producing group's program for the Fall season. It is a romantic drama, "World of Their Own," by Gabriel R. Walling and is in three acts.

Work was set to start, this week, on the first feature to be made for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer by Jack Chertok, short subjects department head since 1935.

Mr. Chertok explains, however, that while this was to be his first "official" feature, he'd produced, a year ago, "They All Come Out," featuer picture which had its basis in a three and a half reel short on the Federal prison system, made with the cooperation of the Government. The film, it is said, had one of the highest percentages of return to cost of any in recent years.

"Our Home Town," tentative title of the new feature, is an original by David Hertz and William Ludwig, based on an idea by William Ullman, Jr. A comedy romance, the story has a modern setting, its "twist" coming in the fact that its young principals leave the city for a small town to find their success.

Also in work is a mystery story. The "down to earth" element, as exemplified in the first story, coupled with the mystery, is seen by Mr. Chertok as typifying two of the most fundamental channels of entertainment in line with an audience's need for emotional release from the tensions of the day.

In addition to the features, Mr. Chertok will continue actively to supervise the short subjects department, which, for 1940-41, will turn out 49 films in the various categories of the "Crime Does Not Pay" subjects, "Pete Smith specialties," "John Nesbitt Passing Parade series," "Carey Wilson miniatures" and "Our Gang' comedies. Coproducing with Mr. Chertok will be Richard Goldstone, as he has been recently.

Coming to the studio in 1924 after working for MGM's distribution department in Atlanta, Chertok, who was 18 at the time, was variously an assistant and a second cameraman, a script clerk, cutter, assistant director and unit manager. When sound came in, he took charge of dance units, on the basis of previous stage experience with Max Reinhardt. Said experience was gained when, on graduation from school, the young man asked his family for 48 hours' time in which to find a job on the stage—and found it.

Following his work with dance units, came that of assistant to the head of the music department, then five years as head of it.

Leaving MGM to become associate producer on Universal's "Great Ziegfeld," he returned when the former studio purchased the story, this time as assistant to Harry Rapf, then head of the short subjects department. Followed the position as head of the department, when in 1935 Mr. Rapf turned his attentions to features.

Mr. Chertok believes that curtailment of film markets abroad will strength the domestic trend toward single bills, and increase the importance of short subjects. Indicative is the fact that since taking charge of the department, he has increased its personnal from approximately 10 to 80.

KNOWLEDGE IS POWER

Oscar Levant, of the almost infallible musical ear on radio's "Information, Please," currently working in Paramount's "Rhythm on the River," recently received an assignment adjudged by all on the lot as one of filmdom's easiest.

For assorted camera angles in the film, all Levant has to do is appear to be reading at random from a book by favorite author:

The book: "A Smattering of Ignorance." The author: Oscar Levant.

Premieres

The world premiere of "Maryland," Twentieth Century-Fox picture, will be held at the New and Centre theatres in Baltimore Wednesday. A Hollywood contingent, headed by Tyrone Power, Richard Greene and Brenda Joyce will arrive in New York Tuesday on the first commercial trip of the new TWA Stratoliner and will fly to Baltimore for the premiere and a two-day celebration.

The celebration has been arranged by Morris Mechanic, managing director of the New and Centre, and Charles E. McCarthy, Twentieth Century-Fox publicity and advertising head. Mayor Jackson of Baltimore will greet the stars on their arrival and at night they will be guests of honor at a Paddock dinner to be held at the Alfred G. Vanderbilt estate.

On Wednesday the stars will make a trip down Chesapeake Bay on Governor Herbert O'Connor's yacht "The Dupont" to Annapolis, where they will be luncheon guests of the Governor at the executive mansion. The stars and the Governor's party will return that afternoon to Baltimore for the premiere of "Maryland."

Miss Joyce, who has the feminine lead in the film, will make a personal appearance with Richard Greene at the Roxy theatre, New York, July 12th.

"All This"

"All This, and Heaven Too," which was scheduled to open at the 2,000-seat RKO Capitol in Cincinnati June 28th at roadshow prices, will open instead in that city at the 3,300-seat RKO Albee at popular prices July 12th. An RKO announcement said that the change was effected "in order to present this outstanding attraction to as many of our patrons as possible at the lowest possible prices."

"Tom Brown"

RKO's "Tom Brown's School Days" will have its midwest premiere at the Oriental theatre, Chicago, July 12th, according to Walter Branson, district manager for RKO.

Freddie Bartholomew, Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Jimmy Lydon, who co-star in the picture, will make personal appearances at the theatre. On July 11th the three will appear on a coast-to-coast Mutual Broadcasting System hook-up from that city.

"Cross Country"

The premiere of RKO's "Cross Country Romance" will be held at the Golden Gate theatre in San Francisco July 31st with Gene Raymond, co-starred in the film, making a personal appearance.

IATSE JURISDICTION IS CLAIMED FOR SLOT-FILMS

Chicago Local Manager Says Projectionist Will Be Required for Each Five Machines

The IATSE's old claim of jurisdiction over virtually all crafts engaged in the making or showing of motion pictures was made anew this week with the statement of John Smith, business manager of Chicago motion picture operators' union, Local No. 110, that IATSE projectionists will work the new nickel-in-the-slot movies, which are about to be placed on the market, and which many exhibitors believe threaten to bring new competition to regular theatre operation.

Projectionist for Five Machines

Plans of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, for effecting jurisdiction, Smith said, are at the moment in a tentative state, requiring a union projectionist to service from five to eight machines—even though they are automatically coin operated—and call for a wage scale of $100 per week for each operator.

The operator, who would not be required to run any machine, would be available 24 hours daily for emergency service and repairs on the machines assigned to his care.

Mr. Smith, in Chicago, had just inspected the manufacturing plant of the Mills Novelty Company, makers of the machines for James Roosevelt's new nickel-in-the-slot company, when he disclosed IATSE's plans for jurisdiction. He explained that the machines operate on the selector type of mechanism, with a choice of six short-movie selections. On the miniature screen demonstrated to him, a band and singer appeared for about four minutes, which is about the average performance length of a nickel "juke" record. Mr. Smith reported that the Mills factory was experimenting with three types of projectors, those of the Bell and Howel, Ampro and Holmes portable projector manufacturers.

Mr. Smith predicted that actual operations would commence in from 60 to 90 days, in cafes, cocktail lounges, bars, restaurants, railroad stations and other places of the many thousands where nickel music machines now are operated.

Theatre Opposition Aroused

Although the exact nature of the competion feared by theatre operators is yet to be shown, many city and state exhibitor groups have already gone on record, in formal resolution, against the nickel-movies, several aiming principally at the use in the films of any Hollywood talent which appears regularly in theatre attractions.

In many places, local authorities have been giving attention to taxation on the new machines, and in places where censorship is exercised over Hollywood product, it has been said that the same attention will be given to the machine films.

Of the dozen or more slot-machine projectors announced in recent weeks, Talk-A-Vision is the latest, operating from a suite in the St. Moritz Hotel in New York. The sponsors claim that their machine is ready, suitable for straight 24-hour-a-day operation, in a cabinet size 64x34x26 inches, giving a screen size picture of 21x28 inches, with five, ten and 25-cent coin chutes, to play from one to five selections, with sound, as in all other devices. Talk-A-Vision will produce its own films, claiming "leading name bands, radio and screen stars," with weekly changes of program.

Phonovision, the machine of Sam Sax and Frank Orsatti, both of Hollywood, is to be marketed in the east from headquarters, at One East 54th Street, New York. The machine was given its first public demonstration the other night, in Jack Dempsey's cocktail place on Broadway. This machine is 66x36 inches. Inside the cabinet is a 16mm rear projection device, which throws pictures on a screen 21x28 inches, the same size as Talk-A-Vision's. It is built to screen eight subjects, running three minutes each. Reels are self-winding in all machines.

Phonovision is seeking not only public placement, but use in visual education, home entertainment and for merchandising promotion. Phonovision also will furnish its own pictures, producing at the old Edison Studio, in the Bronx of New York. The studio will turn out 520 films a year, averaging ten weekly. Mr. Sax will be in charge of production.

The Edison Studio, at 2800 Decatur Avenue, the Bronx, has been leased for this purpose, and the hiring of the several hundred technical workers needed to make shorts has already started. Actual production will begin within a few weeks.

"Leading artists" are now being signed for these films, it is said. The orchestras of Abe Lyman and Ozzie Nelson have already been placed under contract. The range of subjects will also include special coverage of news, sports, and national events, and many subjects will be filmed in color.

Ready by September

Phonovision machines will sell for $590 each, and may either be bought outright, or on installment payments, or leased. The corporation says that more than 36,000 Phonovisions have already been ordered. They will be ready for delivery by September 1st.

"All pictures will be produced in strict accordance with the Production Code of Ethics of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America," says a company statement, adding, "the company will not permit use of its machines in direct competition with theatres, although they may be used to exhibit scenes in coming attractions in theatre lobbies, in the manner of the present 'trailers.'"

Although present plans provide for construction of machines containing eight shorts, the Phonovision apparatus is large enough to contain 2,500 feet.

The corporation has established 40 dealer districts, more than half of which have already been allotted to distributors. Public Service Vending Company has been assigned the New York district.

The Phonovision Corporation of America was incorporated Monday in Wilmington, Del. Previously the firm was a California corporation. Capitalization was listed at $1,100,000.

Movietrola Corporation of America, another film slot machine company, in the Strand Theatre Building, New York, also will produce its own reels for its slot machine projectors, it was said by Emile Hollander, company's president.

Movietrola considers talent the least of its worries, according to Mr. Hollander, and will largely depend upon new players and bands for its artists. He sees the new "nickel movies" as a testing ground for talent, with the result that it will "feed" Hollywood.

While the company already has lined up some new talent, Mr. Hollander said it was at present concentrating on getting its machine into production.

Central Casting Strike Continues; 306 Grants Cuts

Thankful that the strike had not yet spread to the studios, all factions concerned—producers, office workers, and extras—entered the third week, this Monday, of the office workers' walkout at Hollywood's great clearing house for extras, the Central Casting Corporation. It was a walkout which at first appeared liable to tieup production. Even this week, there were reports that the American Federation of Labor Office Employees Local 20978, which had called the strike, might begin picketing studio gates, as the large companies continued calling their extras directly.

Conferences Continue

Producers conferred this week, as they had Friday, June 28th, and the weeks previously, with the representatives of the Local, led by J. W. Buzzell, vice-chairman of the conference of American Federation of Labor Studio Unions, and executive secretary of the Los Angeles Central Trades and Labor Council. Points holding up agreement were not revealed on Friday; but, previously, it had been reported that the producers were amenable to the local's demands, except the one that called for inclusion in their ranks of the casting directors.

There may be four new Hollywood guilds soon: the Society of Motion Picture Art Directors, the Screen Set Designers, the Society of Motion Picture Interior Decorators, and the Sketch Artists.

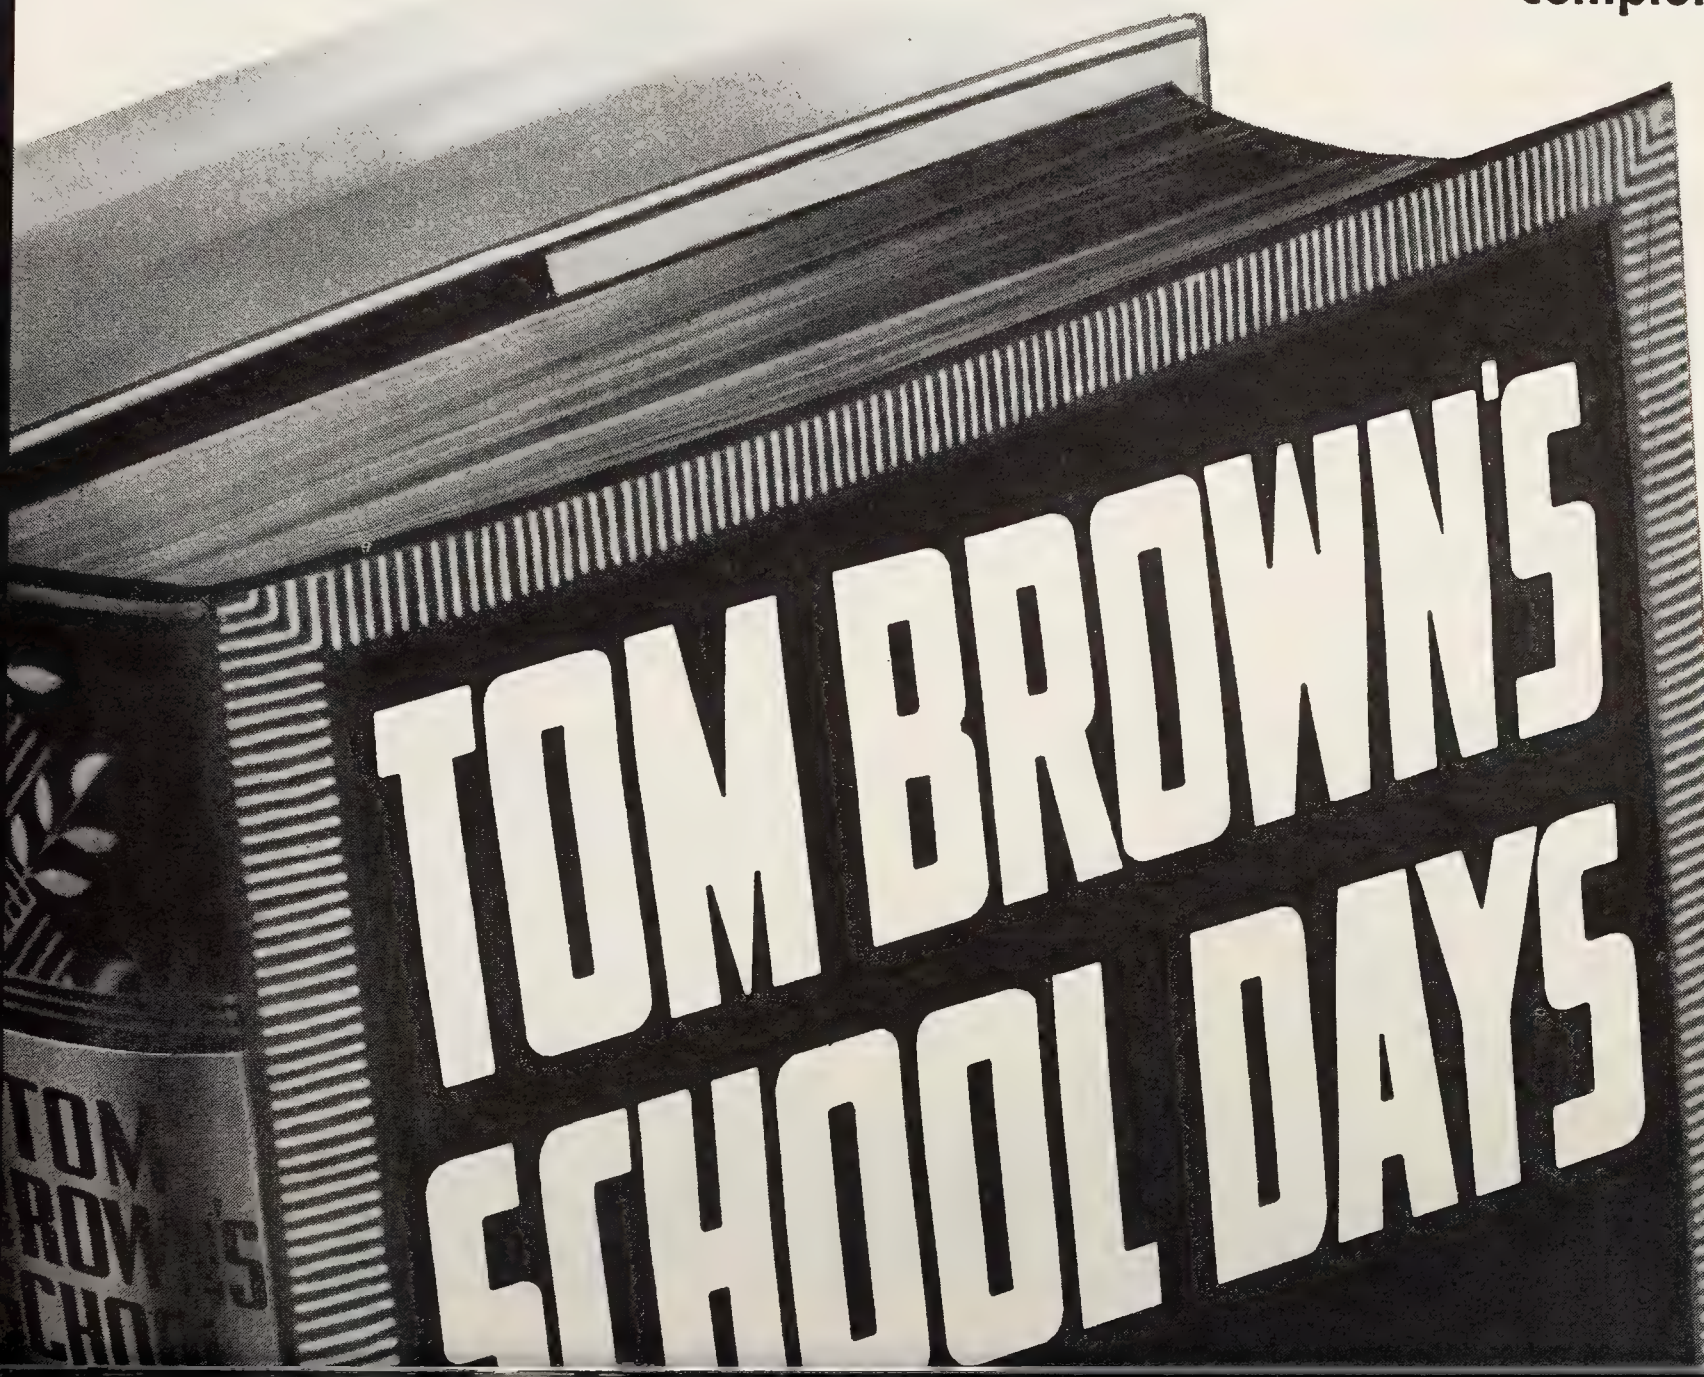
To Reduce Booth Cost

After repeated requests by some of New York's independent theatre owners, faced by a drop in attendance during the summer months and the necessity for keeping their houses open, New York's projectionists' Local 306 has decided to reduce the "cost per booth" in those instances where the owner can prove the theatre is losing money and that the action is necessary to keep the house open.

The union's executive board declared, two weeks ago, that it would treat with individual theatre members of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, but not with the group.

John Smith, business agent of the Chicago Motion Picture Operators' Union, denied that his union was being asked to reduce the prevailing wage scale. Any requests for such will be refused, he said, noting contracts in effect. He added that such requests, and their granting, would lead to similar practices in other cities. The present contracts between the union and the city's exhibitors expires September 1st.

Campaign Ended



The five year campaign by the anti-John Nick faction in the St. Louis Motion Picture Operators' Union, Local 143, was formally concluded last week, when Circuit Judge Ernest F. Oakley ended the receivership which began on April 21, 1939, and ordered the property returned to the union. Mr. Nick's ousting, which his enemies had sought during those five years, occurred several months ago. Judge Oakley, as he closed the case, complimented the union members, the receivers, and the counsel for the plaintiffs.

Mr. Nick and Clyde Weston, deposed business agent of the union, have been given until Wednesday, July 10th, by St. Louis Federal Judge Collet to file motions, in the federal indictment now pending, against them, which charges anti-racketeering law violation. The motions are to be heard July 17th, and if they are overruled the indictment case will go before Judge Collet on August 5th for trial.

Maryland

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Horses and Comedy

In the tradition of the earlier "Kentucky," but with more emphasis on comedy elements, "Maryland" brings horse-racing to the screen in Technicolor. The climax of the picture is the winning of the Maryland Hunt Cup. The race is announced by Ed Thorgersen.

The preview night audience, expressing general approval, indicated that the comedy supplied primarily by Hattie McDaniel, Acadamy Award winner, and Ben Carter, as her wayward husband, was the high point of the picmeeting.

The story, an original by Ethel Hill and Jack Andrew, is that of a woman whose hatred of horses, stemming from the death of her husband at a fox hunt, is absolved as her son wins the Maryland Hunt Cup.

Directed by Henry King, the picture's cast includes Walter Brennan, Fay Bainter, Brenda Joyce and John Payne, supplying romantic interest, Charles Ruggles and Sidney Blackmer. Gene Markey was associate producer.

Previewed at Grauman's Chinese Theatre, Hollywood. In addition to the reaction noted above, the audience indicated approval of such departures from the screen norm as the Thorgersen announcing, and the prologue indicating some of the state's claims to fame.—WALTER SELDEN.

Produced and distributed by Twentieth Century-Fox. Associate producer, Gene Markey. Directed by Henry King. Original screen play by Ethel Hill and Jack Andrews. Director of photography, George Barnes. Film editor, Barbara McLean. P. C. A. Certificate No. 6085. Release date, July 19, 1940. Running time, when seen in Hollywood, 92 minutes. Scatterbrain

Farce

A professional audience, composed of press and studio folk, acclaimed this comedy one of the most comical it has ever seen, gave every indication that it enjoyed it thoroughly and lost unto itself many lines of dialogue by laughing too long at several points.

Judy Canova, whom Republic introduced to the press some time ago, proves herself as a comedienne and a singer as well in "Scatterbrain." She is given support by Alan Mowbray, Eddi Foy, Jr., Joseph Cawthorn, Wallace Ford, Isabel Jewell, Luis Alberni, Billy Gilbert, Emmett Lynn, Jimmy Starr and the musical aggregations of Cal Shrums Gang and Matty Malneck and his Orchestra.

Introducing Miss Canova to film audience, the picture takes her, in the characterization of a hillbilly girl, to Hollywood as a result of mistaken identity. The rest of the story has to do with her struggle to achieve stardom and her success despite adversity. Gus Meins produced and directed from an original screen play by Jack Townley and Val Burton.

Andy Hardy Meets Debutante

(MGM)

Comedy

Had MGM executives held a production conference to plan deliberately a timely, up to date picture which would dispel from American film theatres any thoughts of care or worry from both exhibitor and patron standpoints, a picture which would completely disassociate its audience from any distractions it might have had upon paying for its admission tickets, that picture would have been "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante."

That was evidenced in both applause and lobby comment at the picture's preview last week in the Village Theatre, Westwood, as the unfolding of a new "Hardy Family" adventure, this time laid principally in New York City, took place.

Mickey Rooney, as "Andy Hardy," is teamed again with Judy Garland (remember, exhibitors, "Babes in Arms"?) and the usual support of Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Sara Haden, Ann Rutherford and George Breakston, all now well established in their characterizations. Additional support is given by Diana Lewis, Addison Richards and others.

George B. Seitz, associated with several other "Hardy Family" hits, directed from a screen play written by Annalee Whitmore and Thomas Seller and based on the Aurania Rouverol characters. The script contains a preachment on American traditions and heritage, interwoven in the story in such a manner as to make it a component part of the plot.

Challenged by his friends in his hometown to prove his boasted acquaintance with New York's leading debutante, "Andy" upon being taken to that city by his father with the rest of his family is hard pressed. After a series of misadventures, he meets the debutante through "Betsy," an old friend, and, after his father makes him realize that "all men are created equal," saves his face.

Miss Garland sings two songs, "Alone" and "I'm Nobody's Baby."

Previewed at the Village Theatre, Westwood, to an audience predominantly lay and which indicated thoroughly their enjoyment of the offering.—V. K.

Sailor's Lady

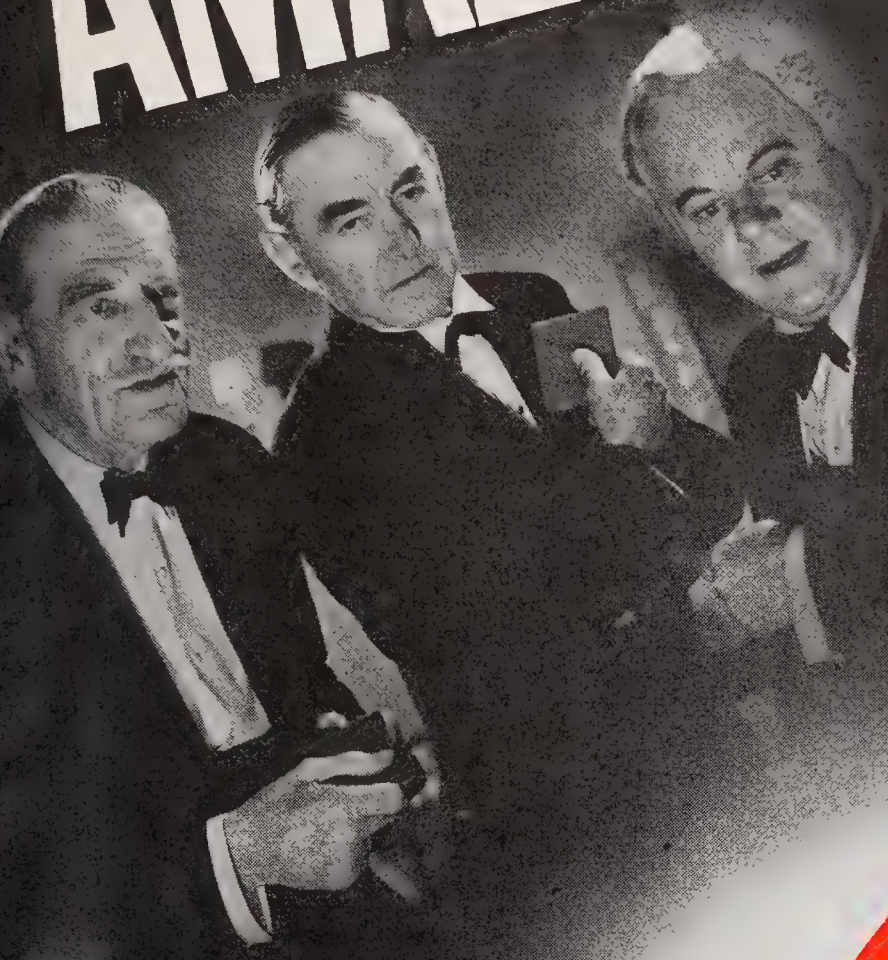
Comedy-Romance

Comedy, romance and night maneuvers of the U. S. Fleet are the ingredients of "Sailor's Lady." The whole revolves around a child, a baby girl called "Skipper," who is an orphan adopted by "Sally," played by Nancy Kelly, who is engaged to "Danny," a sailor played by Jon Hall. Their engagement is an on-and-off arrangement and in a pique Sally hides the baby on a battleship just before the Fleet leaves on maneuvers.

The funniest sequences of the film are those of the night maneuvers with orders flying back and forth from the U. S. S. Dakota, where three sailors have been assigned to "Skipper," to the flagship where the Flag Admiral passes the decision on to the Chief Umpire of the games, who in turn ponders wiring Washington.



When the guns begin to roar "Skipper" begins to cry and finally the ship doctor warns the Captain that the child might be permanently injured as a result of the firing which leaves the disheartened officer no alternative but to cease firing and withdraw from the maneuvers. Then it is discovered that an open safety pin was causing all the trouble.

Prior to the war games the usual sailor antics on shore are indulged in with "Danny" and "Rodney" (Larry Crabbe) fighting, literally, for "Sally" while "Danny's" shipmates "Scrappy" (Dana Andrews) and "Goofer" (Wally Vernon) try their hardest to keep "Danny" from marriage.

In the cast, also, are Joan Davis, who shares the comedy element with Vernon and performs

Yukon Flight

Renfrew Series

"Yukon Flight" continues the series depicting the exploits of "Renfrew" of the Northwest Canadian Mounted Police. "Sergeant Renfrew" here is called on to investigate a mysterious plane crash, ramifications of which lead to other elements principally the illicit flying of gold across the Canadian border.

Jame Newill continues as "Renfrew." Besides engaged in fighting on any provocation, he also, on several occasions, breaks out in song. His buddy, "Kelly" of the Mounted, is played by Dave O'Brien, and the girl of the story is played by Louise Stanley. The lawless element is led by William Pawley as "Yuke."

A plane owned by "Yuke's" "trading company" crashes, killing the pilot. Suspecting sabotage and murder, "Renfrew" investigates and discovers that the so-called "trading company" is flying gold stolen from the mine owned by "Miss Howard." When "Shipley," the new pilot and once a candidate for the Mounted, arrives he is warned by "Renfrew." The Mountie traps "Yuke" by replacing the gold with sand. "Yuke" accuses "Shipley" and sends him off to the same fate as his predecessor. "Renfrew," however, has hidden himself in the plane. He releases "Shipley." In an ensuing airplane battle "Yuke's" plane crashes.

The Man Who Talked Too Much

(First National)

"Mouthpiece Melodrama"

The gentleman who spoke too often and out of turn may be recognized by filmgoers with a clinging memory for past plots as the lawyer who first found voice in "The Mouthpiece" away back in 1932. In the first edition, which was aired under Warner Brothers sponsorship, Warren William played top billing with Aline MacMahon as the tart tongued secretary and Sidney Fox as the sweet young thing. In the current version George Brent is the legal spokesman and Virginia Bruce, having not much to do besides look her pretty self, performs as the secretarial assistant, sweetened down to romantic flavoring. A new addition to this released reissue is a sub-plot along the brother angle plus a minor romance between the young fellow and one of the stenographic ladies in the law firm. Another alteration is the appending of a happy ending.

Besides the two principals, other name players concerned in the forensic proceedings are William Lundigan and Brenda Marshall in the roles of the kid brother and his heart interest; Richard Barthelmess, making an infrequent but impressive screen return as the plot's heavy number one, and Henry Armetta in one of his characteristic but comical portrayals as a gesticulatory Latin. Director Vincent Sherman has cut the old pattern into a smart, snappy remodeling job and scripsters Walter DeLeon and Tom Reed have furnished for the retailoring some slick dialogue lines.

"Forbes" resigns his position as assistant district attorney when he innocently sends a guiltless man to the death penalty. Mostly to send his younger brother through law school, he becomes mouthpiece for a gang headed by "Roscoe." The acceptance of the brother into the firm as an associate complicates "Forbes'" successful but unethical practice. The youngster turns over to the government incriminating evidence against "Roscoe" for a tax evasion indictment and is framed on a murder charge. His brother wrings the truth from the real murderer. The new installment contains the famous sequence from the original wherein "Forbes" wins an acquittal for his client by downing a poison potion and then skips over to a waiting stomach pump.

Seen at a mid-afternoon performance at the Strand Theatre on New York's Great White Way where an audience, mostly on the young side, followed "the mouthpiece's" meanderings with evident attention and satisfaction, especially during the Armetta comedy interludes and the death house sequences.—JOSEPH F. COUGHLIN.

The Golden Trail

(Republic)

Ritter Roughouse

Ted Ritter and his sidekick, Slim Andrews, are concerned in this latest page from their western diary with tracking down a gang of gold chiselers who go about their dirty work by eliminating prospectors with rich hits to their credits. The mob is known as the "Ceegareet Gang" because of the practice of leaving with their intended victims a death-warning calling card inscribed on cigarette paper. Due to some circumstantial evidence planted against Tex, that upright gentleman is believed to be the ring leader of the racket. However, Tex and Slim clear up the misunderstanding quickly and efficiently enough.

Tex, throughout the fast footage, is almost constantly in the saddle and seems only to dismount to participate in a gay and rousing round of fisticuffs. Of course, there are momentary lulls in the frantic program for Tex to vocalize in his wide western tones. One of the song numbers in the bronco recital is "Clementine." Such musical moments allow Tex and his film followers a breathing spell between action sequences. Under the cueing of Producer Edward Finney, Al Herman has directorially refereed the slug fests and clocked the chase scenes with actionful results. Tex Ritter partisans should be considerably pleased with his current enterprise.

Grand Ole Opry

(Republic)

Weavers and Elviry

The newest of the Weaver Brothers and Elviry pictures has taken its plot material from a current source—a political campaign. The participants are concerned with the election of Leon Weaver to a governor's chair. The campaign is conducted in the style to which the Weavers and Elviry are accustomed which means slapstick to the accompaniment of hillbilly music.

The goings on start in the town of "Hopeville," where Leon, the "straight" man of the trio, is mayor; Cicero Weaver, the silent, is the police force, and Elviry is the school teacher. Cicero arrests both the governor and the newspaper publisher who controls the state's political machine for speeding and the two are held in the town's jail until the farm bill, which they had opposed, is passed. The town folk hold state troopers at bay with a Civil War cannon loaded with vegetables and a hillbilly session prevents the governor from broadcasting his sentiments on the farm bill. The passage of that bill creates a hue and cry of Weaver for governor.

The ensuing campaign is ninety per cent "Grand Ole Opry" music and 10 per cent a smear Weaver movement by the political grafters which they climax by framing him, the procedure requiring the services of a girl. Matters are adjusted in time for the voters to elect Weaver.

Not forgetting the romantic element, Dorrell and Stuart McGowan, in their original screen play, have John Hartley, as "Hunch," a newspaperman, and Lois Ransom, as "Judge" Weaver's daughter, taking care of the love interest. "Hunch," it is, also, who uncovers the real culprit responsible for the unsavory political machinations.

(Producers Releasing Corp.)

Cop Melodrama

Taking an original story by William A. Ullman, Jr., Sigmund Neufeld has produced a melodrama along the line of a rookie policeman's dream. Gordon Jones, a comparative newcomer to the screen, is the "rookie" who joins the force to avenge the death of his father, a police inspector murdered as he was about to uncover a den of racketeers. Joyce Compton lends the romantic interest in a sub-plot of the picture while J. Farrell McDonald, fresh from his role of a fire captain in Monogram's "Last Alarm," displays his versatility in the production as a police inspector, and friend of the murdered man, who aids the young cop in his sleuthing.

Upon the death of his father, "Steve Hannigan" (Gordon Jones) enters police school, uncovers a policy racket, kills the leader of the policy gang in a gun fight, avenges his father's death, brings the rest of the criminals to justice, wins back the love of his potential wife and eventually graduates from the school with honors. Accomplishing all while still a "rookie."

Danger Ahead

Renfrew of the Mounted

This series based on the exploits of Laurie York Erskine's story book character "Renfrew" of the Northwest Canadian Mounted Police is equivalent to a western series in both plot developments and locale. What sets the series apart however is the fact that "Renfrew" and his buddy "Kelly" wear the uniform of the Mounties at all times.

The star of the series is James Newill as "Renfrew." A singer on the "Ford Sunday Hour" and formerly with Abe Lyman's band Newill has an excellent screen voice and appearance, but that is hardly enough as is illustrated in "Danger Ahead." The screen play, also, fails to take advantage of Newill's singing ability for he breaks into song at inopportune moments.

The story concerns the theft of a gold shipment and the murder of a driver of an armored truck. The truck belongs to the "Maxwell Trucking Company" and Maxwell is the thief and murderer by proxy—his henchmen do the dirty work. "Renfrew," "Kelly" and "Genevieve," daughter of the "Inspector," solve the case. "Genevieve" incidentally, is a jiu-jit-su specialist and packs a knockout blow in either fist.

SHORT PRODUCT

The Milky Way

(MGM)

Cute Color Cartoon

When, according to fairy tale lore, the three little kittens lost their mittens, their aggrieved mama sent them to bed without their supper. Hungry and disgruntled, the feline trio goes sailing off to the astral domain of the milky way and a drinking spree, running an imbibing range from buttermilk to milk weed. Such riotous lapping up brings the kittens to a perilous end but a quick dissolve finds the adventurers tumbling out of their beds in nightmare fright. A call to the table brings pusses on the run but their appetites soon fade when their milk meal is set before them. The fable action is more fanciful than funny but the kitty adventures sailing through space is so imaginatively contrived and portrayed that the lack of humor will not be greatly missed. Coloring and musical recounting of the tale add to the whimsical, fantastic side of the cartooning.—Running time, 8 minutes.

Nurse Mates

(Paramount)

Cartoon

Popeye and Bluto are nursemaids for Li'l Swee'pea in the latest of Max Fleischer Cartoons. Throughout the reel they vie for the privilege of caring for the child to win the affections of Olive Oyl. Of course, many harrowing experiences result only to have Olive find them both asleep in the crib being cared for by Swee'pea.—Running time, 7 minutes.

Information Please, No. 12

(RKO Pathe)

Quiz Program

Wendell L. Willkie, Republican Presidential nominee and utilities executive, is the guest guesser in this, the latest in the Information Please series. As usual, Clifton Fadiman, book critic for the New Yorker magazine, fires questions at John Kieran, Franklin P. Adams, Oscar Levant and the honored guest, Mr. Willkie. Only one of the many questions is left unanswered, costing Pathe twenty-five dollars. The ad-libs of the questioned four and the complete and detailed accuracy of Mr. Willkie's answers make this an amusing and interesting subject.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Dangerous Dollars

(Paramount)

Counterfeiting

With the rarely given permission of the United States Treasury Department, Paramount has produced a short subject on counterfeit money revealing to the audience how this money can be detected by comparing it with real money and pointing out irregularities that appear on bogus bills. The subject also shows how the Treasury Department and the Secret Service department capture the independent manufacturers who try to run in competition with the government in manufacturing money.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Pony Express Days

(Vitaphone)

Outstanding Historical Subject

Equally good, either in entertainment aspects or from educational angles, is this colorful chapter from the pony express times. The miniature is concerned chiefly with the role played by this horse and rider enterprise in saving California from seceding from the Union in the war between the States. Head rider is a stalwart, Bill Cody, who with the film's finish is given his more famous name of "Buffalo Bill Cody." Besides the secession interests which are concerned with keeping the Golden State on the side of the south, the redskins in the pay of the rebel forces offer some opposition to Cody's ride, as he gallops across plain and over mountain terrain with the news of Lincoln's election. George Reeves plays "Bill" with manly talent and there is a good scene or two with J. Farrell McDonald as a local character. Color has heightened the action and increased the photogenic qualities of the location shots. The material is worthy of program mention.—Running time, 19 minutes.

Bubbling Troubles

(MGM)

Our Gang

The kids come up against a gastronomic problem in their current collective comedy cutups. Alfalfa and Butch are wooing Darla and to prove that he is the better man of the combination, Alfalfa downs some concoction which his rival has been making under the title of "dynamite." The drink is really something called "Settles-It' and the gaseous ingredients of the potion inflate Alfalfa to enormous proportions around the midriff. The children believe their friend fat with combustible components and solicitously pad him for the big blow-up. When a real explosion occurs and Alfalfa is missing, the Gang call upon his parents to break the sad news. They find their pal very much alive and still in his bloated state but a fall and a dose of bicarbonate of soda release the cumulative pressure. The finale is very much a literal translation of "gone with the wind." Adults will blow up with glee over the whirlwind finish. Kiddie patrons will also be amused, if not on such a grownup range.—Running time, 11 minutes.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

TYPICAL of the need for Britishers in that so-called "tight little island" of England, to reorientate ideas and living in these crucial days is described in some observations of Aubrey Flanagan, of our London staff.

In his own little village, near London, their own little band of stalwarts patrol the lanes and meadows with rifles on the qui vive for parachutists.

A weekend junket into the country, over 300 miles across fields and farms, brought nary a sight of a single signpost to guide the traveler, with names on all postoffices and railroad stations blacked out, even milestones uprooted and destroyed, all for fear that "travelers" might be German parachutists in search of bearings.

One sees sandbagged machine gun posts in Whitehall, Bren guns perched on the roundabouts of kids' playparks, and armed military everywhere, to stop and ask for identification papers.

John Barnes, our QP advertising manager, is a Flying Officer in the Royal Air Force, but apparently has not allowed the smoke of battle and the call of day and night duty to interfere with some song writing. One of his latest, "R.A.F. Patrol," which he composed while on active service, is a hit of wartime ballrooms. Now he has written another, "Brown as a Berry," which he put together between flights and lying beside his plane awaiting the order to take off.

George Archibald, one of the joint managing directors for United Artists in London, is a member of the Local Defense Volunteers, and sallies forth three nights a week, rifle in hand, to defend Chalfont St. Peter and neighborhood from enemy parachuteers. George Barker, of Denham Labs, is also a member and guards an aerodrome.

Charlie Chaplin's insistence that his prospects of a $5,000,000 profit from his forthcoming "The Dictator" were endangered by the use of his picture in Life magazine, caused Advertising Age to observe that, "No movie ever profited from national publicity, of course."

Radio-telephone service to autos and trucks will be introduced by the Bell Telephone Co. when the idea is approved by the Federal Communications Commission, to permit quick mobilization and centralized direction of motor vehicle fleets in event of major emergencies threatening public welfare. The Bell Company has applied for a permit to install transmitting and receiving equipment atop its downtown office buildings, starting in Pittsburgh. Two-way conversations can be carried on within a radius of about 15 miles from each transmitter, engineers estimate.

Phil Laufer, press agent at Loew's Criterion theatre, on New York's Times Square, really goes in for realism. Playing Republic's "Gangs of Chicago," Mr. Laufer arranged a large display in the lobby with first-hand 'tributes' from 'the underworld,' quoting "Killer Butch" as saying he "taut the pictoore was sooperb. I'm glad I seen it before I boin in da hot seat." "Harry the Dip" said, "I ain't gonna be bad no more. Dem guys in de 'Gangs of Chicago' makes us blokes look like a bunch of sissies." "Muggs" Dolan said "da picture about dem guys in Chicago is da nerts."

Not particularly favorable publicity in these days of movie bigwigs' calling for emergency economic cooperation from exhibitors was that Associated Press dispatch from Hollywood to its hundreds of AP newspaper clients, telling how one Leni Lynn, 15 years old, has been drawing down $350 a week for nearly two years at MGM's studio, without having a movie camera even aimed at her.

AP says that to date $31,500 has been spent in salary alone on little Leni, teaching her how to sing the right way, how to walk and talk the right way, in preparation for that big day when she actually starts in films.

Leni is the fantastic almost-success from Passaic, N. J., whose neighbors' nickels and dimes paid her way to Hollywood two years ago. She made a hit then, singing on the radio and bowling over movie men fascinated by her voice.

Angelica Ciofani was her name and she was the daughter of a Passaic mill hand, singing at firemen's benefits and such, when Howard Herty, a newspaper man, heard her.

Herty, now her manager and legal guardian, groomed and trained her for eight months, got her on radio programs and promoted a festival, raising enough money to take her to California. There was great to-do when Angelica (now Leni Lynn, which "sounds like Jenny Lind") signed a movie contract and just about everybody figured Deanna Durbin and Judy Garland would soon be in place and show positions.

She still just sings and studies and oftentimes gets so discouraged that Manager Herty gives her a pep talk and, to restore her confidence, takes her to sing before an audience. They say she has sung at more benefits than any one else in town, not excepting even Bob Hope, who now is called Benefit Bob.

Today's conflicting war communiques for daily newspaper consumption, one coming from one side saying one thing, another from the other saying something different, causes Alvin Joseph, Radio-station WOR special features man, to bring forth an amusing parallel of eighty years ago.

Collector of historic newspapers, old and new, Mr. Joseph now shows as a prize exhibit a four-page Virginia weekly newspaper published during the Civil War, in which the first two pages were written and printed by the Southern forces and the last two pages by Northern!

It happened when Northern troops captured the Virginia town in which the paper was published, seized the presses, took over the two pages which the fugitive editor had already set up, and then added their own copy to the last two. The result was that the first two pages shouted Southern victories, while the back pages countered gleefully with news of Union achievements, a la Allied and Nazi communiques of today.

Winston Churchill, England's war-lord, has some blood relations dating 'way back to early motion pictures. An American cousin of Mr. Churchill's, of which he has at least a dozen, is William Travers Jerome, son of New York's famous District Attorney, now living in Bennington, Vermont, Jerome the elder being one of those participating in the very inception of Technicolor film stock, and for a long time thereafter prominently connected with Technicolor and Technicolor stock.

MIKE CULLEN, division manager for Loew's theatres, tried to engage funnyman Bob Hope, of air and films, for a personal appearance engagement at the Stanley theatre, in Pittsburgh. Hope wanted $15,000 a week, plus a percentage. Mr. Cullen pointed out to Bob that "three years ago, you'd have been glad to work at $350 a week." "Sure," Hope replied, "and three years from now I may be glad to go on for you at $350, but right now its $15,000."

Bob is the comedian who opened his new "Ghost Breakers" picture in Detroit, recently, by putting on a "ghost breaking" stunt for Paramount. Bob wanted something "real tough" to prove himself a "ghost breaker" in real life as well as on the screen. So they carted, all the way from Wichita, Kansas, a "haunted mattress," the owner of which, one William Lucas, orchestra leader, claimed emitted strange tappings and other sounds. The mattress was placed in an abandoned farmhouse 16 miles from Detroit, a house pronounced—in Paramount publicity—as "the most haunted in the city by a psychic, a committee of magicians and a psychologist." Hope was laid on the haunted mattress, and from nearby, Bill Goodwn, radio announcer, gave Station WWJ listeners—all good potential theatre customers—a creak by creak picture of what was going on. Neither Mr. Goodwin or Paramount's press agents explained whether it was the mattress that creaked or Bob.

Mrs. Bob Hope and Mrs. Carmine Ennis next took to the mattress. For a while not even the ticking ticked, but suddenly both screamed that they felt tapping beneath them on the mattress.

Paramount admitted "it was perhaps the world's whackiest stunt."

Enid Markey, now of the radio cast of Columbia Broadcasting playlets, is the Enid Markey who was in the first film show, "The Iron Strain," with Dustin Farnum, to play as a two-dollar-a-seat movie, as put on by Triangle Film Corporation on the night of September 23, 1915, in Triangle's Broadway "show-window," the Knickerbocker. Samuel (Roxy) Rothafel was theatre director and Hugo Riesenfeld directed the orchestra.

One Dave Herman, down near Washington, had a tough one the middle of the other night, when his two-year-old boy stopped breathing. With his wife out calling a fire department rescue squad, Herman covered his boy's mouth and forced his own breath into his son's lungs. He was still working over the boy when the squad arrived. The child had begun to respond faintly. The firemen took over with their oxygen equipment. And the life of the infant was saved.

Upon hearing the story, the doctor who had been called, complimented the man on his resourcefulness.

"But how did you know what to do?" the doctor asked the very young father.

"I saw it done in a movie," Herman answered, and he described how in "Vigil of the Night," Anne Shirley as a night nurse in a children's hospital ward forced her breath into the mouth of a baby who had stopped breathing—(RKO, free advt.)

Running time, 62 minutes. Played June 22-25.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis.

TEXAS STAGECOACH: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith, Sons of the Pioneers—Good western; poor draw. Fine singing by Sons of Pioneers. CASTLE ON THE HUDSON: John Garfield, Ann Sheridan, Pat O'Brien, Burgess Meredith—No business. Not much of a show, either. Running time, 77 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

DARK VICTORY: Bette Davis, George Brent, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Humphrey Bogart—Good picture. Played late. Better than some late productions. Very poor print and many complaints account of it. Running time, 106 minutes. Played June 15-16.—E. C. Bohlig, Opheim Theatre, Ohpeim, Mont. Small town patronage.

EACH DAWN I DIE: James Cagney, Jane Bryan, George Raft, George Bancroft—Picked this up and was well liked. Running time, 87 minutes. Played June 15-16.—Otto W. Chapek, New Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

FIGHTING 69TH, THE: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Jeffrey Lynn, Alan Hale, Dennis Morgan—The most realistic war picture that has been produced, according to a number of ex-service men that were there during the last war. Not for children but an exceptional 10 reels of entertainment. Would recommend this in any spot that likes action and plenty of it. Running time, 100 minutes. Played June 13.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

FLIGHT ANGELS: Dennis Morgan, Virginia Bruce, Ralph Bellamy, Jane Wyman, Wayne Morris—Good action picture and good business. Everyone pleased. Running time, 74 minutes. Played June 18.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FUGITIVE FROM JUSTICE: Roger Pryor, Lucille Fairbanks—Good action drama with a few laughs. Many theatres require "Cheaters" of this type in cutting down running time and this one is made to order. Running time, 53 minutes. Played June 14-15.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

OLD MAID, THE: Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent, Jane Bryan—Did not expect much business on this one as this is an action house but merely played it for the prestige. Am glad I played it for our ladies' business, and was well liked by all. Played May 14-15.—Eddie Mansfield, Regent Theatre, Kansas City, Mo. General patronage.

'TIL WE MEET AGAIN: Merle Oberon, George Brent, Pat O'Brien, Geraldine Fitzgerald—Was very well liked here and, accordingly, did good business. Not as good as "One Way Passage," though. Running time, 99 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

TORRID ZONE: James Cagney, Ann Sheridan, Pat O'Brien, Andy Devine, Helen Vinson—Good enough comedy with enough action to suit all. Business poor but not poor enough to get by without average. Running time, 90 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

TORRID ZONE: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, Andy Devine, Helen Vinson—Good picture and good business. This will please anywhere. Running time, 87 minutes. Played June 16-17.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANOTHER THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Ruth Hussey, Virginia Grey—Very fine picture that was very well liked by the few that came to see it. I ran "GWTW" after this and that held down the gross on it. Running time, 102 minutes. Played June 7-9.—Otto W. Chapek, New Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

BABES IN ARMS: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Charles Winninger, Guy Kibbee—Good picture but MGM should not try and overdo Rooney. There is no use trying to ride a good horse to death. Running time, 97 minutes. Played May 24-26.—Otto W. Chapek, New Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

FORTY LITTLE MOTHERS: Eddie Cantor, Rita Johnson, Bonita Granville, Judith Anderson—As good a picture as you will show in a long time but still the public was afraid of it. If this picture had some extra advertising, we feel that it would more than pay as it truly has everything that makes a good picture. Running time, 88 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GHOST COMES HOME, THE: Frank Morgan, Billie Burke, Ann Rutherford—Here is a swell little audience picture that drew more than its share of laughs. Nothing exceptional but a good little comedy. Running time, 78 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GONE WITH THE WIND: Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh, Leslie Howard, Olivia de Havilland, Hattie McDaniel—A great show that will gross a lot of money and when you are done you will have nothing left. Hurts your picture before and after. Metro's terms on this picture are all wet. Running time, 228 minutes. Played June 14.—Otto W. Chapek, New Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

NORTHWEST PASSAGE: Spencer Tracey, Robert Young, Walter Brennan, Nat Pendleton, Isabel Jewell—Excellent production, even if I did not like it. It is a man's picture, just a little too rough for the ladies and children. A superb cast. Spencer, as always, outstanding; Young, Brennan and Pendleton very good and Isabel Jewell outstanding. If I were a casting director, she would get more, bigger and better parts. The scenery is grand, beautiful color, good musical score. It brought in a lot who seldom come, due partly to a good Saturday night, the first pleasant Saturday for months. This will bring them in, which is what the exhibitor wants. Running time, 126 minutes. Played June 14-16.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

SAN FRANCISCO (reissue): Clark Gable, Jeanette MacDonald, Spencer Tracy—One of the best reissues we've played to date. Play it. We doubt you'll have cause to regret. Played June 25.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

20 MULE TEAM: Wallace Beery, Leo Carrillo, Anne Baxter, Marjorie Rambeau, Douglas Fowler—A typical Beery role that pleased the patrons. The picture holds your interest throughout and there is a darn good supporting cast that does a thorough job. Marjorie Rambeau always did a fine job and Douglas Fowley deserves bigger and better parts. As usual, Beery was taken as a matter of fact because he never turns in a bad performance. He's just a perennial favorite. Running time, 84 minutes. Played May 25-28.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

TWO GIRLS ON BROADWAY: Lana Turner, Joan Blondell, George Murphy—Not good here. No entertainment; no draw. Running time, 73 minutes. —A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

TWO GIRLS ON BROADWAY: George Murphy, Joan Blondell, Lana Turner—A very good musical feature. Wish we could say as much for business. It was definitely off. Played June 14-15.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WATERLOO BRIDGE: Robert Taylor, Vivien Leigh—Left a decidedly bad taste with all who saw it. Poor draw but Robert Taylor has never drawn here. Feature has its points but it's only the poor parts that your patrons seem to remember. Running time, 103 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

Monogram

STREETS OF NEW YORK: Jackie Cooper, Marjorie Reynolds, Dick Purcell, Martin Spellman—We played Photo-Nite with this picture so cannot say which did business. Good picture for small towns. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ADVENTURE IN DIAMONDS: George Brent, Isa Miranda—Good picture. Fair draw. Played June 12.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BUCK BENNY RIDES AGAIN: Jack Benny, Phil Harris, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, Andy Devine, Ellen Drew—Very good acting by all. Only the title should have been "Rochester Steals the Show." Running time, 82 minutes. Played June 16-17.—Lester Booth, Stark Theatre, Bailey Enterprises, Toulon, Ill. General patronage.

DISPUTED PASSAGE: Akim Tamiroff, Dorothy Lamour, John Howard—Good story and well acted but Dorothy Lamour is positively no drawing card here. She may be O.K. in the city but in our rural district she is obsolete.—Ben Brinck, West Point Theatre, West Point, Iowa. Small town patronage.

FRENCH WITHOUT TEARS: Ray Milland, Ellen Drew—A better than average British production. Under Paramount's sponsorship it has turned out a snappy farce. Interesting throughout. Ray Milland and Ellen Drew keep things American. Played June 21-22.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HIDDEN GOLD: William Boyd, Russell Hayden—Good picture and good business. Running time, 61 minutes. Played June 21-22.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ROAD TO SINGAPORE: Bing Crosby, Dorothy Lamour, Bob Hope—Just what the public is looking for in these troubled times. A dandy comedy. Bing and Bob a riot. Give us more like this.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RULERS OF THE SEA: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Margaret Lockwood, Will Fyffe—Terrible. Had many walkouts. Poor, dark photography, English dialect and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. Not so hot as a drawing card.—Ben Brinck, West Point Theatre, West Point, Iowa. Small town patronage.

RULERS OF THE SEA: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Margaret Lockwood, Will Fyffe—The title of this picture sold it and did very nicely, although the reaction was not as good as it might have been. The comments were varied but in the main unfavorable. Played May 16-18.—Eddie Mansfield, Regent Theatre, Kansas City, Mo. General patronage.

SEVENTEEN: Jackie Cooper, Betty Field—Any producer that would make a picture like this certainly has poor taste. I don't think the "seventeen" age has quite the effect that this picture shows. Betty Field just isn't what she is. Maybe she would be better if she had a different role. As for young Cooper, he is one of the best juvenile actors in the business. Running time, 78 minutes. Played June 17-18.—Don C. Ware, Joy Theatre, Belzoni, Miss. General patronage.

Producers

I TAKE THIS OATH: Gordon Jones—If and when you play this one, your customers will welcome "The End" at the tail end of the film. Poor. Running time, 69 minutes. Played June 9.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

Republic

IN OLD MONTEREY: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, George Hayes—Played this picture on Wednesday-Thursday to capacity business. You can't play one of these Autry-Burnette pictures on the wrong day as they will come any time to see them. I found two cars that had driven in from the hills to see this picture and neither one of them had State licenses. I've had patrons walk 10 to 15 miles to see the comedy furnished by Smiley Burnette in the Autry pictures.—Harry F. Blount, Plaza Theatre, Potosi, Mo. Rural patronage.

RANCHO GRANDE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Story—Nice week-end business. Thanks, Gene, for your picture. Regards to you from Pete Barnes who hopes you won't fall off at his ranch again. He wore your suit at our theatre and looked well. We also got your card, Smiley, thanks a lot. We did enjoy "South of the Border."—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ROCKY MONTAIN RANGERS: Three Mesquiteers (Robert Livingston, Raymond Hatton, Duncan Renaldo)—Not bad for western fans. Bob Livingston, Duncan Renaldo and Raymond Hatton, the Three Mesquiteers, will please them. Running time, 58 minutes. Played June 14-15.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torington, Conn. General patronage.

ROVIN' TUMBLEWEEDS: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Mary Carlisle—Gene Autry is a life saver to our box office. Heralds on mail routes I find the best theatre advertising for results.—Ben Brinck, West Point Theatre, West Point, Iowa. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

COURAGEOUS DR. CHRISTIAN: Jean Hersholt. Dorothy Lovett—Generally disappointing. This seems to merely carbon copy stuff that is now too familiar to stand repetition. This could be a good series but not if the story value is as below par as in this picture. Played June 19-20.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME: Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Hara, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Thomas Mitchell, Basil Rathbone, Walter Hampden—In spite of fact I had an early run, this picture did very poor business. I paid double the amount I usually pay for an "A" feature. Cannot understand, because a great deal of interest was expressed by patrons prior to run. Running time, 115 minutes. Played May 8-11.—Eddie Mansfield, Regent Theatre, Kansas City, Mo. General patronage.

IRENE: Anna Neagle, Ray Milland, Roland Young, Billie Burke, May Robson—A musical everyone seemed to enjoy. I honestly believe that Anna Neagle was a joyful surprise with her singing and light comedy. The public seemed to think she was strictly a dramatic actress. Ray Milland is coming to the front fast. They are just beginning to realize that this fellow has talent plus a nice personality. He's a cinch for top notch parts for light comedy. Business very good. Running time, 101 minutes. Played May 4-9.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

ISLE OF DESTINY: William Gargan, Wallace Ford, June Lang—Not much to this. Color is a poor "sub" for Technicolor. Had they cut out about 20 minutes of the running time it would have been better, because it would have moved along faster. A little dull as it stands. Played June 14-15.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LEGION OF THE LAWLESS: George O'Brien, Virginia Vale—O'Brien westerns are of the best.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

TWO CONTRIBUTORS JOIN DEPARTMENT

Two new contributors report this week to the What the Picture Did for Me department and two others whose reports have been missing for some months return to the fold. The two new members are:

HARRY F. BLOUNT, Plaza Theatre, Potosi, Mo.

E. C. BOHLIG, Opheim Theatre, Opheim, Mont.

The two prodigal contributors whose reports reappear this week are:

BEN BRINCK, West Point Theatre, West Point, Iowa.

A. E. ELIASEN, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn.

Read the reports from these and other exhibitors in the adjoining columns.

PRIMROSE PATH, THE: Ginger Rogers, Joel McCrea—A good picture for adults. Did a pretty fair business. Ginger and Joel were fine. Played June 16-17.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BLUE BIRD: Shirley Temple, Spring Byington—The blame for this picture's flop ought to rest on its producers. They should never have attempted fantasy or fairy tale stuff. For what it is it's a dandy but adults except a few won't go for it. And it's beyond the understanding of most children. Color gorgeous and entire production beautiful. But still no box office and it's our first flop on a Shirley Temple picture. Shirley is wonderful in the part assigned to her and has new dignity and grace. She should not be taken off the screen. She's still good and how! Played June 23-24.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HE MARRIED HIS WIFE: Joel McCrea, Nancy Kelly, Mary Boland—Good comedy. I had above average business on week-end with this. However, I advertised Paramount's special war news in conjunction with it and figure about 40 per cent of the business was on account of the war news. Running time, 82 minutes.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

HIGH SCHOOL: Jane Withers, Joe Brown, Jr.—Average Jane Withers, not good, not bad, so-so. Jane could go places now that Shirley is out. Running time, 74 minutes.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

I WAS AN ADVENTURESS: Zorina, Richard Greene, Peter Lorre, Erich Von Stroheim—Flopped. Fair picture and interesting but this gal Zorina means stay home here. Running time, 81 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

JOHNNY APOLLO: Tyrone Power, Dorothy Lamour, Edward Arnold, Lloyd Nolan—I think that Edward Arnold and Lloyd Nolan did outstanding acting in this picture. This is one prison picture that will hold your interest from beginning to end. Two of my help saw this picture before we ran it and they reported this very good so now that I have seen it, too, I send the good word along. Play it. Running time, 93 minutes. Played June 23-24.—Lester Booth, Stark Theatre, Bailey Enterprises, Toulon, Ill. General patronage.

United Artists

CHUMP AT OXFORD: Laurel and Hardy—Good business; fair picture. Seems like they want comedies here. Why doesn't Hollywood wise up to itself and make pictures that the masses of the people will understand and enjoy and lay off the stuff that's supposed to appeal to the intelligentsia who never go to shows. Running time, 63 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

LION HAS WINGS, THE: Merle Oberon, Ralph Richardson, June Duprez, Flora Robson—This picture seems to show what Britain hasn't. It was very well enjoyed by those who hadn't given much thought about the air superiority of Germany over England. It is a good piece of propaganda, although there were no anti-Nazi demonstrations in the theatre. There are a few criticisms I would like to make concerning the production. The so called "actual" raid on the Kiel Canal (as advertised) is no more actual than the man in the moon. The English flag could plainly be seen on the supposedly German pocket battleships which were only engaged in some depth charge practice. On the return from the raid there were more British bombers than had started out. Then, we have a German raid on England. The first scene shows a line-up of pursuit ships (which can't stay up in the air but 3 hours) that are coming all the way to England. A few scenes later these ships suddenly turned into giant twin-motored bombers. The German pilots are made to look like some of Frankenstein's cousins. When the English Spitfires tie into these bombers, they shoot one down after another with no trouble. It is funny that the Germans couldn't do this to the English bombers. There's one thing, Mr. Korda (and other producers), the public isn't as dumb as you think. By this time the American public knows the Lion has had his wings clipped. No, I'm not a fifth columnist. Business was good. Running time, 73 minutes. Played June 12-13.—Don C. Ware, Joy Theatre, Belzoni, Miss. General patronage.

ONE MILLION B. C.: Carole Landis, John Hubbard, Lon Chaney, Jr.—Congratulations to Hal Roach. If you like your audiences spellbound, run this one. Several of the kids got scared and ran out. You will have some trouble drawing on this one because most of the ladies beware of this type picture. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 24-25.—Don C. Ware, Joy Theatre, Belzoni, Miss. General patronage.

RAFFLES: David Niven, Olivia de Havilland—Good. Seemed to enjoy this on Friday-Saturday, although it's plenty good enough to play mid-week. Running time, 71 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

SLIGHTLY HONORABLE: Pat O'Brien, Ruth Terry, Edward Arnold, Broderick Crawford—This company has no stars which the public knows and in our small situation we must have known names to bring them in. A good picture but no draw because the only ones in the cast known were O'Brien and Arnold and neither of these are extra box office for us. Running time, 83 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Universal

ALIAS THE DEACON: Bob Burns, Mischa Auer, Dennis O'Keefe—You have to hand it to Universal. They have been making a much better grade of pictures for the past year. This one pulled in the old timers that saw the play as far back as twenty-five to thirty years ago and they said it was far the best portrayal they had ever seen. Full of laughs and it pleased everyone. Running time, 72 minutes. Puayed May 25-28.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

DOUBLE ALIBI: Wayne Morris, Margaret Lindsay—An okay meler. No business, nevertheless. Played June 11.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MA! HE'S MAKING EYES AT ME: Tom Brown, Constance Moore—Our customers made a mistake when they passed up seeing this one. There's more entertainment at that in this hour-long feature than we've given out for weeks. Swell. Played June 18.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WEST OF CARSON CITY: Bob Baker, Fuzzy Knight, Johnny Mack Brown, Peggy Moran—Plenty of action in this western but did no business for us. Running time, 55 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

ROARING TWENTIES: James Cagney, Priscilla Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—This picture was very well liked and went over good at the box office. Running time, 106 minutes. Played May 17-19.—Otto W. Chapek, New Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

VIRGINIA CITY: Errol Flynn, Miriam Hopkins, Randolph Scott, Humphrey Bogart, Alan Hale—Played this late but a grand picture.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

EGG HUNT, THE: Color Rhapsodies—Not up to standard in this series.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

THREE SAPPY PEOPLE: Three Stooges—Stooges are a natural here and always try to bolster a doubtful feature with one. The most popular comedy we play.—Eddie Mansfield, Regent Theatre, Kansas City, Mo. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BIG PREMIERE: Our Gang—A little flat. Lacking real comedy.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DOG DAZE: Our Gang—The only laugh in the last few feet of film. We have had better. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HOME ON THE RANGE: MGM Cartoons—Remarkably fine. Nice coloring.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

JOY SCOUTS: Our Gang—Real good. Everybody liked it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MAD MAESTRO, THE: MGM Cartoon—Good colored cartoon. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MIRACLE AT LOURDES: MGM Miniatures—Will set folks thinking and they enjoyed its message, we're sure.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Paramount

ALL'S FAIR AT THE FAIR: Color Classics—A very good color cartoon.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

BUSSE RHYTHM: Henry Busse and His Orchestra—Timed this to play with Busse's personal appearance at the Fox Tower and the band boys themselves paid for the short, even Mr. Busse, himself, coming in to see it. I am only a block from the Tower and find it a good way to play shorts.—Eddie Mansfield, Regent Theatre, Kansas City, Mo. General patronage.

GEORGE OLSEN AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Headliners—Fine. A hillbilly rendition is especially good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HAL KEMP AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Headliners—Real good for the youth.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RKO Radio

CORRALLING A SCHOOLMARM: Ray Whitley Comedies—Very good. Western music really entertaining when played by Ray and his Six Bar Cowboys.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DONALD'S GOLF GAME: Walt Disney Cartoons—Good color cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

INFORMATION PLEASE: No. 4—This does not click here, as our patrons do not seem to go for informal entertainment of this sort. However, it was good and some liked it very much.—Eddie Mansfield, Regent Theatre, Kansas City, Mo. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, No. 9: America's Youth—We consider these our most outstanding short subjects.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PLUTO'S QUINPUPLETS: Walt Disney Cartoons—Second run and went over with a bang.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

TWINCUPLETS: Radio Flash Comedies—Stroud Twins as flat in this comedy as on the radio. No more for us.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CLIMBING THE SPIRIT'S HOME: Father Hubbard's Alaskan Adventures—Average traveltalk. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FIRST ROBIN, THE: Terry-Toons—Not so hot. These subjects are too short for the money paid for them.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

PROFESSOR OFFKEYSKI: Terry-Toons—Average black and white cartoon. Running time, seven Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SKY FIGHTERS: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—This good reel showing Government Aviation training, etc. Played with Paramount's Special War News and Red Cross reel "Mobilized for Mercy," which was a perfect combination.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

Universal

BABY KITTENS: Lantz Cartunes—Just a waste of celluloid. Running time, six minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GOING PLACES: No. 67—Excellent—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

RHYTHM JAMBOREE: Two-Reel Musicals—Excellent. This series is 100 per cent improved under Larry Ceballos' direction. Keep it up.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

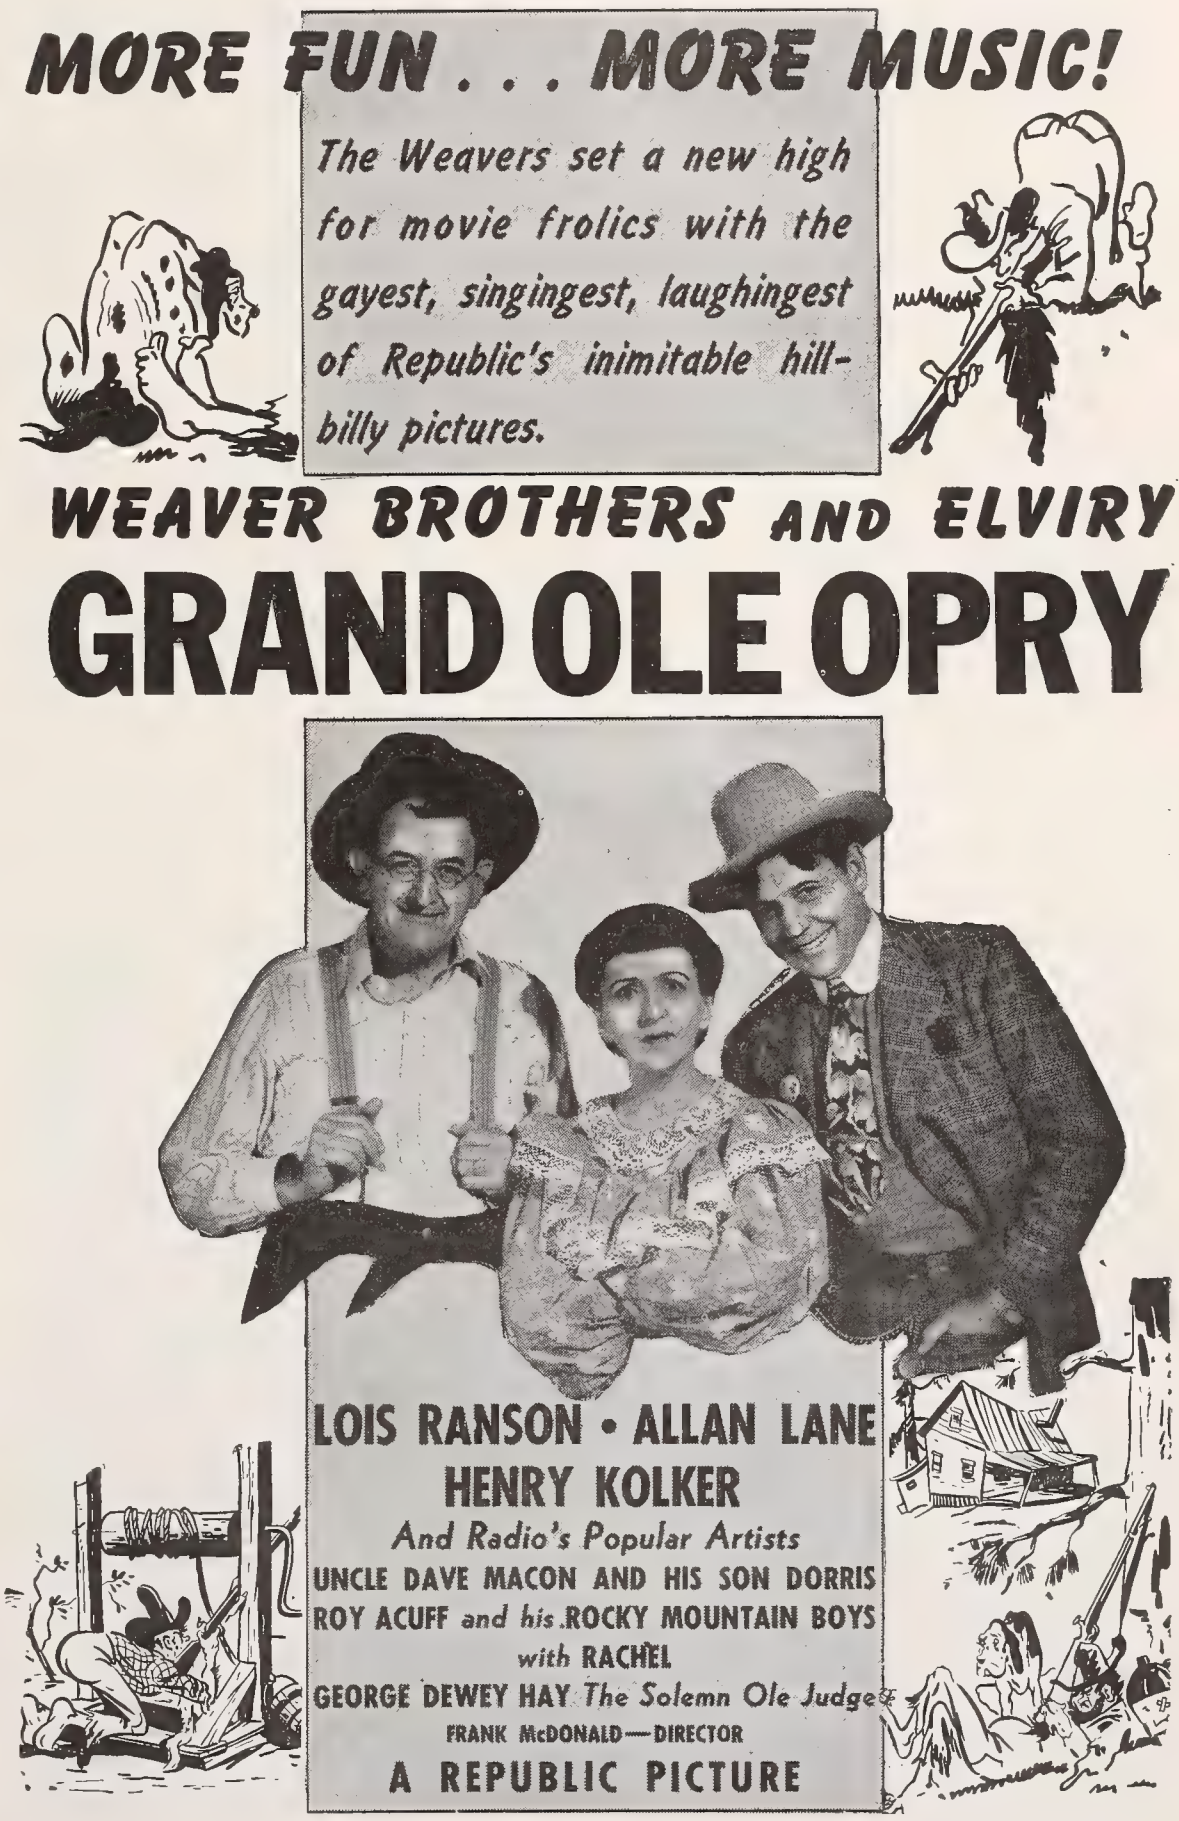
SWINGIN' IN THE BARN: Two-Reel Musicals—Universal certainly did themselves proud with this musical. Tops so do not waste it. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

DOUBLE OR NOTHING: Broadway Brevities—Good two reel comedy. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GUN DOG'S LIFE: Color Parade—A fine colored single reel on hunting dogs. Our audience loved it.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HARDSHIP OF MILES STANDISH: Merrie Melodies—A very good presentation of Miles Standish's courtship. Very pleasing and entertaining. Running time, 10 minutes.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.



SCREWBALL FOOTBALL: Merrie Melodies—Good cartoon and well liked. All cartoons click here. However, Popeye is at the bottom of the list now. Should be produced in color.—Eddie Mansfield, Regent Theatre, Kansas City, Mo. General patronage.

SINGING DUDE: Broadway Brevities—A fine colored two reeler western with good singing.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SLAP HAPPY PAPPY: Looney Tunes—These Porky cartoons are excellent and if made in color would be knockouts.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SLAP HAPPY PAPPY: Looney Tunes—Do I have to start raving all over again? It seems that any of the Merrie Melodies or Looney Tunes are the tops for genuine belly-laffs. This one, supervised by Clampett, is a riot with excellent imitations of Eddie Cantor, Bing Crosby, and others. Running time, seven minutes.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

SLAPSIE MAXIE: Maxie Rosenbloom—Thought his radio popularity would help but. our patrons seem not to have ever heard of him. However, an acceptable comedy and a wow with our after midnight, night club performers.—Eddie Mansfield, Regent Theatre, Kansas City, Mo. General patronage.

STATUS OF BANK NIGHT IN OHIO IS UNDECIDED

Court Recesses Without Ruling on Test Case; Legality To Be Tested in New Mexico

The status of Bank Night in Ohio, which was expected to be ruled upon by the state supreme court in the taxpayer case hearings held in Columbus, remains unchanged with the recessing of the court for the summer. The court, however, will review the case when it reconvenes in the fall.

The case was instituted by Andrew Attenweiler, a Troy, Ohio, taxpayer, against the Troy Amusement Company seeking judgment of $510 exemplary damages and admission refund and asking discontinuance of Bank Night at the Mayflower theatre, Troy. The action was appealed after the appellate court in Dayton ruled that Bank Night was a lottery and in violation of the state law.

Ben H. Schwartz, Cleveland, defense counsel, told the court that Bank Night was conducted in approximately 400 Ohio theatres to a combined daily attendance of around 500,000.

New Mexico Case

The legality of Bank Night, for the second time in three years, is before the New Mexico supreme court. The case at issue was appealed from a Chaves County district court decision overruling the state in an action against J. E. (Ted) Jones and Wayne Patterson, operators of the Yucca theatre in Roswell.

In the earlier case, brought by the city of Roswell against Mr. Jones and Fred Morley, the state supreme court held in a split opinion, handed down April 12, 1937, that Bank Nights were not lotteries.

Since then there have been changes on the supreme court bench.

Lucky Strike, a game which has been operating at E. M. Loew's Mohawk theatre, North Adams, Mass., has been declared illegal and a lottery in a decision by Judge John E. Magenis in district court. Appeal from the decision has been made to superior court at Pittsfield.

Judge Magenis found Bernard Payne, manager of the house, guilty of promoting and conducting a lottery on three counts but placed a nominal fine of $100 for one offense and $10 for the others.

Theatre games are staging a revival in theatres in Wisconsin. In Milwaukee, the Fox is offering Lucky Seat nights at the Varsity on Fridays and Saturdays, with the award at more than $100.

In Green Bay, Standard Theatres conduct Bank Quiz at the Strand and County Store at the Packer, both on Friday nights. The Eastwood in Madison observes Quiz Nite on Wednesdays, while the Rialto in Kaukauna stages Bank Quiz Fridays and Saturdays. The Rivoli in a Crosse conducts Old Style Treasure Chest on Fridays with more than $100 as the prize.

Test Case in Omaha

The Omaha, Neb., city attorney's office has carried to the Nebraska supreme court a legality test of Prosperity Club, cash giveaway game, ruled legal by the municipal courts.

The city attorney has asked the supreme court to cite Omaha theatres using the game on a contempt of court charge, claiming that Prosperity Club drawings are in violation of the court's ruling three years ago declaring Bank Night a lottery.

A motion has been granted in equity court in Mobile, Ala., to strike out the complaint of Ricardo Montiel, manager of the Saenger theatre, in which he charged discrimination in enforcement of the lottery law. Mr. Montiel was indicted last January for operating Bank Night. In his complaint he cited the operation of Bingo under the sponsorship of churches and organizations.

Judge Frank E. Reader of Beaver County, Pa., has ruled that Bank Night is still a lottery although proxy cards are obtainable for theatre patrons unable to attend the award performance. The ruling was in a suit filed against J. C. Lund of the State and Strand theatres, of Aliquippa.

An action has been entered in municipal court in Racine, Wis., by Frank LaBoda who charges Warner Brothers Theatres of Wisconsin, Inc., with refusing to pay him $900 as agreed in connection with a Treasure Chest award at the Venetian theatre. He contends that he was declared the winner of the award on May 18th and names Ely Arkin, manager of the Venetian, and Jack Keegan, Milwaukee, district manager of the circuit.

Philip M. Berger, manager of the Treat theatre, Newark, N. J., found guilty by common pleas Judge Daniel J. Brennan of violating the gaming statute, in operation at the theatre of a game called Pay Me, will appeal.

The theatre management had devised the game in effort to avoid violation of the lottery law by not requiring an admission fee, or consideration, from the player. The court held that the lottery statute was not involved, but that the game was a violation of the all-inclusive gaming statute.

Fox houses in Denver have dropped their weekly Ford car giveaway and are using Bank Night, starting with $1,000 and adding $250 each week. All Fox houses in Denver are in on the giveaway with the exception of the Broadway, first run.

Game Tax In Effect

A law providing for a 15 per cent tax on Bank Night awards, passed by the 1940 Kentucky Legislature, became effective June 12th, according to reports of the State Revenue Department.

James F. Donoghoe, head of the department in Louisville, said the law applies to churches, clubs or any organization conducting raffles, bingo or any contest of chance involving the awarding of prizes, including motion picture houses. Managers of the games are required to deduct the tax from the award money.

Bingo figures in Cincinnati established a new high in May, when 263 parties, attended by 294,778 players, grossed $214,994.97. Awards amounted to $52,026.14, leaving a net profit of $162,968.83 to sponsoring organizations, religious, charitable and similar groups.

The number of parties increased 13.9 per cent over April, the previous high month, and attendance was 9.1 per cent greater.

Renew Altec Agreement

Under a renewal agreement, the 12 Wometco circuit theatres in Miami and Miami Beach, Florida, will be serviced by Altec Service Corporation. Altec district manager A. Fiore negotiated the agreement.

Movie Stars no Boon at Stage Box Offices

by MORT FRANK
in Pittsburgh

Actor's movie reputations alone are usually no boon at stage play box-offices except when they have a good play to support them, manager Harry Brown, of the Pittsburgh Nixon, stated this week in revealing that grosses for the city's only "legitimate" theater approximated $418,000 for its 1939-1940 season of 29 weeks.

In one of the most successful seasons of the past decade, the Nixon presented seven musicals, and four play premieres.

"Leave It to Me" Tops

Top box-office attractions were Victor Moore and William Gaxton, in "Leave It To Me," and Katherine Hepburn, in "the Philadelphia Story," both doing around $30,000. Next in draw were Helen Hayes, in "Ladies and Gentlemen," with $28,300; "George White's Scandals," with $27,300; Bill Robinson in "The Hot Mikado" with $23,200, on the first of two engagements; John Barrymore, in "My Dear Children," with $23,000; Raymond Massey, in "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," with $22,100, and "No Time for Comedy," with Katharine Cornell and Francis Lederer, $18,500.

Attractions featuring stars with straight movie records were Donald Cook, with Gertrude Lawrence, in the premiere of "Skylark," $14,500; Edward Everett Horton, in "Springtime for Henry," 12,200; Laurette Taylor, in "Outward Bound," $8,500; Ruth Chatterton, in "Tonight We Dance," $4,000; George Houston, in "Vagabond Hero," $3,100; Simone Simon, Mary Brian, Mitzi Green and Stepin Fetchit, in "Three After Three," $16,00; Paul Muni, in "Key Largo," $12,000, and John Garfield, in the premiere of "Heavenly Express," $5,500.

Unusual was the vitality of "Tobacco Road." In its sixth engagement, it drew $17,000 at $1.65 top, $3,000 more than its preceding year.

Although the longest in some years, the season was not the best in Nixon history by far. In the 1920's, 40-week seasons were not uncommon, and $40,000 grosses at $6.60 top were not unusual.

The current season, however, enabled Pittsburgh to retain its rating as the best road city in the country outside of Chicago, San Francisco and Boston.

Ten of the Nixon shows were $3.30 top, 14 $2.75, one $2.50, two $2.20, one $2.00, and one $1.65. More than 4,200 American Theater Society subscribers held seats sold at the price next beneath the lobby-window tariff.

Last year the Nixon had only two dark weeks between Sept. 25 opening and May 11 closing. Brown is anticipating an early start for the 1940-1941 season, his 26th here, if war conditions do not cut show tours. ATS is already ahead of last year's subscriptions at this date.

Other Nixon grosses, besides those featuring film players, were:

"White Steed," $8,000; "Hamlet" with Maurice Evans, $15,400; "Mamba's Daughter" with Ethel Waters, $16,500; "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," $7,500; "Earl Carroll's Vanities," $14,500; Cornelia Otis Skinner repertory, $2,500; "Streets of Paris," $17,400; second engagement "Hot Mikado" with Bill Robinson, $10,500; "Margin for Error," $6,800; and George M. Cohen in "Return of the Vagabond," $9,500.

Only competitor to the Nixon, the Pittsburgh Playhouse grossed more than $30,000 in its 23 weeks season, with six plays that previously won Broadway reputation, and an original musical by Charles Gaynor.

N. Y. Organizes To Aid Defense; Coast for Relief

The motion picture industry this week started to throw its organized support into war defense and war relief.

At a meeting held in the New York office of George Schaefer, RKO head, advertising heads of affiliated and independent circuits formed a committee to cooperate with the screen industry's activities in behalf of the Government's defense program.

To Cooperate with War Department

Those present included Harry Mandel, advertising director of RKO Theatres; Aubrey Schenck of Fox Theatres; Oscar A. Doob of Loew Theatres; Harry Goldberg of Warner Theatres, and Harry Brandt, of Brandt Theatres. Mr. Doob was made chairman of the committee.

The committee will cooperate with the War Department's defense plans, sending to hundreds of motion picture theatres a series of short articles to appear in their weekly programs. The first of the articles, which will appear in Loew's Weekly of July 11th, which has 900,000 circulation, says in part:

"The Government of the United States offers young men opportunities for education, for learning trades or crafts, and for travel while earning a salary and maintenance, in the Army. Men who serve but a single enlistment of three years are now offered the same educational advantages as are given the picked men permitted to select the Army as a life saver."

Coast Group Named

Samuel Goldwyn, chairman of the Motion Picture Red Cross Committee, Hollywood, this week announced the full membership of the organization, which will guide all war charity activities at the studios.

The publicity directors committee includes Howard Strickling of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Harry Brand, Twentieth Century-Fox, and Robert Taplinger, Warner Brothers.

Propose Special Stamps

Bette Davis has proposed to the Motion Picture Relief Fund that the film industry issue special stamps to be put on sale throughout the country, enabling purchasers to obtain autographs and pictures of stars. The proceeds would go to the Red Cross. Twentieth Century-Fox is also considering a plan to charge a nominal sum for photographs sent out through its fan mail department, likewise in the cause of charity.

Stage Aid for Allies

Determination to use the full strength of the theatre to save England was promised Tuesday by Miss Rachel Crothers, playwright and president of the American Theatre Wing Allied Relief Fund, at the New York World's Fair, where stage stars participated in a special program.

The group headed by Miss Crothers plans a number of public benefits to raise funds for the care of refugee children from war ridden countries. Helen Hayes started the fund with a contribution of $4,000.

Managers Pool Interests

Managers of four theatres in Reading, Pa., have pooled their interests in raising $64,000 for Reading's Red Cross quota. The managers are J. Lester Stallman, Astor; Paul E. Glase, Embassy; George Peters, Loew's, and C. G. Keeney, Park.

Start Detroit Movement

A movement for a series of Red Cross shows, with all proceeds of the shows contributed to the charity, has been started by Edward Jasobson, manager of Krim's Harmony theatre, Detroit. Mr. Jacobson received permission from the Board of Education to have announcements made over the public address systems in the seven schools of the neighborhood.

Youngsters are admitted free but are asked to make any donations they liked to the Red Cross nurses at the door.

"Ramparts We Watch" Opens July 12th in Washington

The first feature length production of the March of Time, "The Ramparts We Watch," will have its world premiere in Washington on July 12th, according to Louis de Rochemont, producer. Like the regular issues of the March of Time, the feature will be released by RKO.

"The Ramparts We Watch" was over 18 months in the making, during which time many thousands of feet of film were shot. Part of the excess material has been and will be used in the monthly issues of the March of Time. "Ramparts" is said to introduce a new technique in feature films with a story of the war years, 1914-18, in a typical American community. Much of the picture was made in New London, Conn., chiefly with a cast of non-professionals.

Dropping Stage Shows

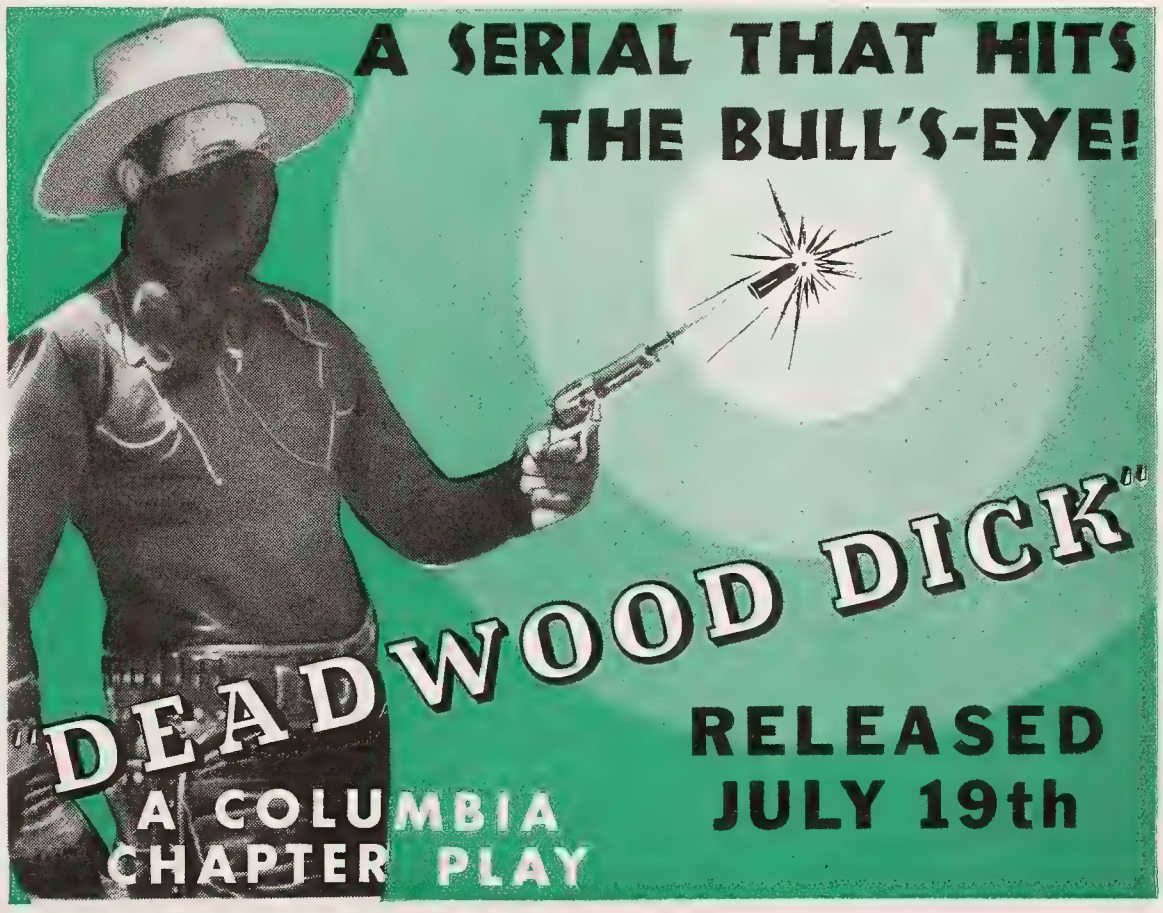
The Stanley theatre, Pittsburgh, a Warner Stanley house, will discontinue stage shows for the summer.

George Weeks Forms Producing Company

Phoenix Productions has been formed with George Weeks as president and Anna Belle Ward as vice-president and associate producer. Mr. Weeks was formerly vice-president of Monogram in charge of sales and Miss Ward is assistant general manager of the Elliott-Ward Enterprices, theatre circuit, at Lexington, Ky.

The company plans eight westerns in a series to be known as "The Range Busters," for Monogram release. John King, Ray Corrigan and Max Terhune will be featured.

Adler Injunction



The United States District Court, Chicago, last Saturday, ordered an injunction issued against the Adler Letter Company and the Patio Theatre Company, of Chicago, and an accounting made by the Adler company to Wagner Sign Service. The action followed an order of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals in the same city on June 14th, denying the Adler company's petition for a rehearing of litigation in which the notched flange letter signs of Adler had been found to infringe a Wagner patent. The Patio Theatre Company had been a user of an Adler sign of this type.

Ban "Merry Wives"

Bernard Shore, publicity director for Edgar E. Lloyd, announces that the New York State Board of Film Censors has banned the Czecho-Slovakian film "Merry Wives," ruling that the film is "immoral, indecent and tending to corrupt morals." Mr. Lloyd is the distributor. The film was awarded first prize at the 1938 Venice Film Biennale.

Maurice Brown Nominated

Maurice Brown, of Lorain, Ohio, manager for the theatres owned by Mrs. Nazera Zegiob, has been nominated as state senator.

OBITUARIES

Ben Turpin, 71, Comedian, Dead

Ben Turpin, the comedian with the crossed eyes, a star of the silent screen, died at the age of 71 in Hollywood July 1st.

One of the first of the slapstick comedians in motion pictures Mr. Turpin built his comedy routine around his fantastically askew eyes. He was the man who always did everything wrong.

He was born in New Orleans of French extraction and retained a slight French accent all his life. When he was in his late 'teens his father gave him a hundred dollars carefully saved for the event and told him to leave home and get a start on his own. He lost it in a crap game and became a hobo, then a burlesque actor which led to a "Happy Hooligan" role on the stage and films. It was while playing "Happy Hooligan" that the strain of crossing his eyes caused them to become permanently impaired.

The last film in which he appeared was "Saps at Sea," a Hal Roach production in which he had a small part. He was a janitor whose impaired vision had caused him to connect the electrical gadgets of a home in a bizarre manner.

Fred Noble

Fred Noble, projection operator for the DeSoto theatre at Mansfield, La., died on June 26th. He was in an automobile accident in Mansfield.

After being chief of division on the Trans-Siberian Railroad, he became chief of construction of the Sevea River Railroad, a project interrupted by the Russian Revolution.

He came to this country in 1920 and worked as an architect in San Francisco. Later he became associated with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as art director for nine years, designing sets for the Greta Garbo pictures as well as for other films. In 1935 he joined Walter Wanger.

George Hackathorne, Character Actor, Dead

George Hackathorne, motion picture character actor, who had played the title role in Sir James Barrie's play "The Little Minister" on the stage, died June 25th in St. Vincent's Hospital in Hollywood after a long illness. He was 44.

Mr. Hackathorne's theatrical career goes back 30 years to the time he played the part of "Willie" in "East Lynne." He also played juvenile roles in stock companies and once had his own singing act in vaudeville. He entered the motion picture field in 1916 and received acclaim for his playing of the cripple in "Merry-Go-Round" in the silent pictures. His last role on the screen was that of a soldier in "Gone With the Wind."

Colgate Baker, 68, retired newspaperman and playwright, died June 25th in the Bronx, N. Y. He was drama critic of the New York Review, a weekly theatrical paper, from 1908, when it was founded, until 1931, when it ceased publication.

Maurice Moscovich, character actor, died in Hollywood June 28th after working three days in RKO's "Dance, Girl, Dance," which Erich Pommer is producing.

IN COURTS

Court Upholds Patent Ruling

The United States circuit court of appeals for the Third Circuit, at Philadelphia, Thursday, June 27th, affirmed on appeal a lower court decision which held the sound picture equipment of Electrical Research Products, Inc., was not an infringement of British Acoustic Films, Ltd.'s two patents on mechanisms to produce uniform speed and "breaking" up on motion picture films, and that both patents were invalid.

Last September Judge John P. Nields, of the federal district court, Wilmington, Del., gave the original decision. In dismissing the appeals of the British corporation, the circuit court declared the "flyweel jockey roller" device patents, which were originally issued to Arnold Poulsen and Axel Carl Georg Peterson, are merely the adaptation of universally known mechanical expedients and not of inventive quality.

The court in its opinion added that even if the patents were valid, neither defendant (RCA Manufacturing Company was the other defendant) infringed upon them, since they did not use the device described in the patents.

Move to Impound 'Dictator' Stills

Charles Chaplin and Charles Chaplin Film Corporation in federal court in New York this week moved to impound stills and other material of the film "The Dictator," which were claimed to have been "surreptitiously" removed from the studio by Time, Inc., publisher of Life Magazine. Mr. Chaplin contends that premature publication of a still from the film in the magazine has endangered the sales and promotion program planned for the film.

Court Has Tax Case Under Advisement

The Conway County chancery court at Morrilton, Ark., has taken under advisement a demurrer of the city to a complaint filed by the Malco theatres, Inc., owners of the Rialto theatre there, against enforcement of two city ordinances, one to limit the number of houses which one owner may operate and the other to levy a tax on theatre chairs in addition to regular license charges.

After hearing attorneys for both sides, Chancellor J. B. Ward concluded that the question of license ($100 per year and a tax of 40 cents per seat on more than 300 chairs) being too large and unreasonable, "was a matter of fact and that proof might be taken by deposition by plaintiff and defendant to sustain their contentions on reasonableness and unreasonableness of the tax."

Dismiss Mann Suit

Harry Hollzer, federal judge, in Los Angeles this week has dismissed the suit of the Ned Mann Company against Walt Disney Productions, charging infringement of a photographic process. The court ruled insufficient evidence was presented to prove allegations but declined to rule on the validity of the Mann patent.

F. & M. Hearings End

The hearings on the Fanchon & Marco, Inc., suit for the return of $42,200 claimed paid in legal fees to three St. Louis lawyers ended this week after 51 court days, and Joseph J. Ward, circuit judge, in St. Louis took the case under advisement. Arguments by counsel, however, will not be made until September.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

DANGEROUS NEGLECT

Three theatremen whose work is known favorably to this department have lost their jobs. They are finding it difficult to secure others. One man has been out for a month, the second for three months, the third, longer than that.

Backed by years of experience, possessed of showmanship talents, they are conscientious and have clean records. But to all intents, there seems to be no market for these men in a business that admits to a lack of manpower upon which so much depends.

The unemployed showman of ability, sooner or later, is forced to take any kind of a chore-boy job, or to find a living in some other line. In either instance, exhibition suffers a loss it cannot afford.

It is too much to hope that this alarm will produce immediate results for the men in question. It is expected that the facts set forth will emphasize the dangers of manpower-loss, to be viewed with some part of the concern now occupied with other industry illnesses.

THE WHOLE OF IT

In keeping with our frequent beating here on behalf of institutional advertising is the piece in Advertising Age on "Simplified Sales Promotion for Retailers", a book by Edward Kaylin and Allen A. Wells, merchandising specialists. Set down for theatremen who regard this form of advertising as pointless, the following quotes from the article are offered for consideration:

"Institutional advertising, defined as 'that which sells the store rather than merchandise', is not the 'sheer luxury' which many believe it to be, the authors point out. This type of promotion justifies itself on a practical dollars-and-cents basis, they say, for 'the time has long since passed' when it was enough for a store to offer the right merchandise at the right time or at a special price. Customers who respond to that appeal may be somebody else's customers tomorrow.

"Since the object of institutional copy is to build and maintain a favorable impression, the authors point out that an institutional campaign must be constant and continuous. Tangible results come slowly, it is said, but when the proper approaches have been found and persistently used, 'gratifying results are practically assured'."

Obviously, the theatre dependent solely upon the draw of star names and big attractions bogs down when its supply of names and ace pictures is interrupted. It would then appear that the exhibitor fighting to maintain no less than a minimum profit-gross should take extra means to safeguard his investment. In this direction he would give due advertising attentions to the institution of motion picture entertainment, his one constant factor, and not pin his expectations entirely upon the shifting boxoffice values of individual pictures. Thus, a 52-week-a-year properly guided job of theatre selling can roll up a boxoffice momentum not to be halted by the sluggishness of a booking here today and gone tomorrow.

Taken as a whole, the merchandising of motion picture entertainment embraces more than the screen program. Reasonable prices, modern equipment, safety, atmosphere, health, comfort—even luxury—are also units of sales appeal to be spotlighted, as are the intangibles of patron-handling by highly trained service staffs.

Let it be said again: with everything else equal, it is yet to be disproved that, of two competing theatres, the one doing the better and most consistent job of institutionalizing will roll up the largest grosses over a period of time.

EXPLOITATION CURIOSA: Insurance against typhoon damage for a publicity tiein on "Typhoon" at the Granada, Norfolk, Nebraska, was taken out by Manager Dick Phillips. So what happens? Nothing less than a terrific windstorm during the run. And in Fairbury, in the same state, on the same picture, Jimmy Redmond tells about a tornado that hit town on the day ahead of opening to shake loose the stage of Bonham.

Theatremen who sniff at the oldies might be interested in knowing that, plugged widely by the World's Fair to attract more customers, the venerable "key" stunt for prizes of new cars is proving to be one of the main boxoffice attractors.

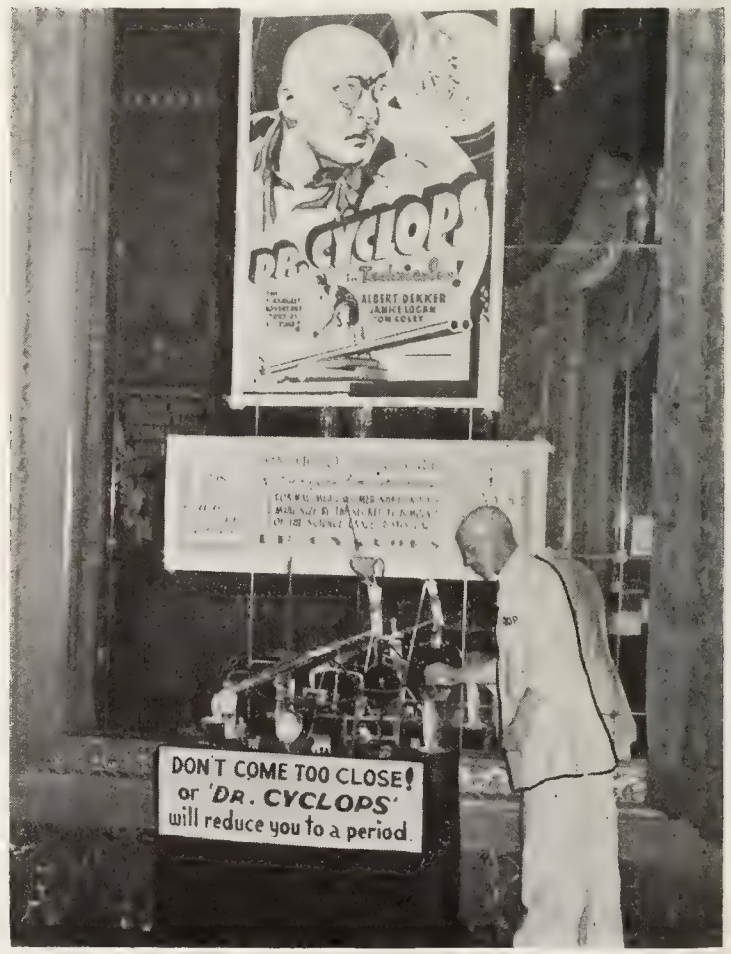
Round Table In Pictures



Ahead and during run of "One Million, B.C." at Loew's Grand Theatre, in Atlanta, Ga., was featured giant float constructed by Round Tabler Eddie Pentecost and illustrated above left. Girl and boy dressed in keeping with the picture were planted atop float with papier mache prehistoric animal. (Above) In main street window was the peep-hole gag arranged by Ted Irwin for "Danger on Wheels" at the Star, in Lyons, Kansas. On peering inside, folks were greeted with miniature race track complete in detail with wrecked cars, flying planes, etc.

Tieup between the Boston Loew Theatres and the Daily Record on a Cinderella contest, as reported by Joe DiPesa, featured a presentation of prizes on the stage of the State, where as shown, Round Tabler Fred Greenway does the honors. First prize included trip to New York and Washington.

Lobby stunt arranged by Elihu Glass at Fabian's Staten Island Paramount, in Stapleton, for "Cyclops" consisted of replica of a laboratory, equipment borrowed from local college. An amazing double of the inventor was located, and planted at table to do a bit of "experimenting." Dry ice used to simulate smoke was used for attractor.

Mayor, Councilmen Celebrate Opening of Warner Theatre

Presence of the Mayor, city councilmen, visiting stage and screen stars and other prominents viewed by an estimated crowd of 40,000, were among the highlights of the excellent campaign put together by Manager Jack Minsky and reported by Al Zimbalist for the opening of Warners' new Astor, in Philadelphia, a neighborhood situation.

Among the Round Tabler's featured promotions was an eight-page special newspaper, the "Astor Times," widely distributed in the drawing area. Outside advertising more than covered all costs, merchants cooperating additionally with window displays and posters. Since the paper was aimed to do a thorough job of circulation, Minsky refrained from the use of heralds and other items which he found would be duplicating items. The opening was adequately covered by all the downtown dailies and the neighborhood weeklies, the highlight tiein being a "Miss Astor" contest put on two weeks ahead with the Daily News, the promotion including a double-truck co-op layout.

"Miss Astor" Selected

Radio participation was obtained from the leading stations culminating in a broadcast at the premiere over WCAU, in which the invited guests took part. Other ceremonies signalizing the opening of the house to the public featured cutting of the tape across the front by "Miss Astor." Colorful street events led up to a parade of costumed units representing various veteran, civic and fraternal organizations, the procession highlighted by the participation of 20 different bands. For the benefit of the vast throngs out front, Minsky arranged for a loudspeaker system suspended from the marquee.

Preceding the inaugural show, Mayor Lamberton made a dedicatory address from the stage. This was followed by the presentation of a silver plaque to Warner Brothers from the merchants and residents of the area, accepted by Joe Bernhard, general manager, for the organization. Supervised by Ted Schlanger, zone head, with Paul Costello, district supervisor, Minsky's campaign was aided by a helping hand from Warner men, Irving Blumberg, Al Blumberg, Bill Lafferty, Dave Seaman, Jack Levy, Bill Wolf, Dick Reasley and Al Zimbalist.

Hosts Bohnen's Parents

Group of prominent localites attended a special preview of "Mice and Men" arranged by Sig Goldberg of the World, in St. Paul, Minn., to honor parents of Roman Bohnen, local boy who appeared in the picture. Blowups of wire received from Bohnen were used for display purposes in leading stores, numerous book store windows were prominently spotted and newspapers came through with stories and art on the opening, space also devoted to the premiere in the society column.

Fort Worth Sportsmen Endorse Gould's "All-Fishing" Show

Conceived by Manager Dan Gould for a two-day run at Interstate's Tivoli, Fort Worth, Texas, an "all-fishing" program of six added sport short subjects aimed for the attention of local sportsmen boosted mid-week grosses appreciably for the neighborhood situation. Put on a week ahead of the local fishing season, the promotion, a "first" of its kind for the circuit, was ably supported by sporting goods stores, newspapers and outdoors enthusiasts, the campaign by Gould breaking three weeks ahead with special trailers and stage announcements.

Displays were featured by a lobby exhibit of mounted fish, rods, reels, lures, nets, minnow buckets and fishing kits. A similar showing was obtained in a giant window at the largest downtown department store. The store assisted further on a distribution of co-op heralds to all customers 10 days ahead, contributed expensive fishing kits for stage giveaway each night of the showings, mentioned the program in all store advertising one week in advance.

Publicity was comprehensive with all papers carrying feature stories, extra breaks in sports columns. The outstanding sport news publication in that area also went for the program in big space, and Gould planted further mentions in all school papers. Announcements were made at the Junior Chamber of Commerce luncheon two weeks ahead, and heralds distributed at the meeting on opening day. Post cards were mailed to all members of the local Anglers Club. For additional attention, auto bumper cards were used and at the theatre, the staff wore lapel badges.

The six shorts making up the program were "Strike," "Fly Casting," "Big Fish," "Fisherman's Pluck," "Big Game Fishing" and a cartoon, "Andy Panda Goes Fishing." The feature was "Invisible Stripes."

Salmon Conducts Stage Wedding

Dignity was the keynote of the stage wedding conducted by Round Tabler Monty Salmon at the New York Beacon Theatre with neighorhood merchants contributing in exchange for lobby and trailer mention. Among the gifts promoted by the theatreman were complete outfit for the bride, bank account, flowers, hotel, beauty treatments, wedding cake, ring, etc., etc.

Wedding party included six bridesmaids, two flower girls and six ushers, who, to the strains of the wedding march, played by organist, walked from the back of the house down the aisles, girls on one side and men on the other, to the stage where local judge performed the ceremonies. Mixed choir, engaged for the occasion, rendered "Oh, Promise Me" and "Ave Maria" before and after the services.

Mayor Aids Tree-Planting In Honor of "Edison"

Since Sunbury, Pa., had been the scene of some of the early Edison experiments, Manager Lloyd L. Hause decided upon a civic celebration in recognition as advance on the date for "Edison, the Man" at the Strand. For this a tree-planting in honor of the inventor was held at the city park in cooperation with the Boy Scouts, Elks and civic leaders, the mayor turning over the first spade of earth. Event was preceded with a parade led by fife and drum corps in the downtown area.

From a member of the high school faculty, a collector of Edisoniana, Hause secured a number of the inventor's private papers, letters, autographed photos. As a lobby display, the collection attracted wide interest in the newspapers as well, which also publicized the parade in story and photo. Other publicity covered a double truck of co-op ads, strip serialization and editorial stemming from Edison's stay in Sunbury. Lighted heads of the inventor and Spencer Tracy featured the front displays.

Working plan, above and left, shows operation of Ted Irwin's animation for "Torrid Zone" at the Star, Lyons, Kansas. Attached to wheel in rear, brightly colored cardboard circle was divided in sections and lettered, as shown. Motion was provided by small electric fan, the blades fastened to wheel with small stove bolts. Concealed wire ran through fuse box to button which when pushed, broke the contact, and stopped wheel.

Six-City Vote Contest Aids "Our Town" Premiere

Six Fox West Coast California situations and the papers in each spot were tied in to the advance on "Our Town" at the Los Angeles Four Star by means of a "George" and "Emily" popularity contest, the winning pair in each city rewarded with a trip to Hollywood as guests of the Hal Roach studios and attendance at the coast premiere. The contest, named after the leads in the picture, was decided by voting ballots carried by the cooperating papers.

Representatives of the dailies accompanied the winning couples to arrange for story and photo coverage designed also for advance publicity on the attraction in each situation. Further buildup was secured by the personal appearances of the winners on their return from Hollywood to relate experiences on the trip.

Fox West Coast managers who worked on the promotion were Ernest Martin, San Bernardino; Stanley Kriner, Redlands; Lester Solberg, Riverside; Ray Lindsay, Pomona; Ed Penn, Santa Barbara; and Homer Gill, Bakersfield.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

"Mortal Storm" Reviewed By Movie Fans for Elder

Local movie fans were urged to turn reviewers as part of the advance campaign put on for "The Mortal Storm" by Manager W. H. Elder at Loew's, in Harrisburg, Pa., through the cooperation of daily newspaper. Cash and ticket prizes were offered to patrons writing the best reviews of the picture in 50 words or less, reviews to be written in the same form as that used by regular film columnists and critics. Contest ran during the first two days of the engagement.

Gun Collection Featured By Davis for "Virginia"

Borrowing a collection of guns from local Gunsmith Shop, Manager Bernard Davis at the Victor Theatre, in McKeesport, Pa., arranged a 40 by 60 display in advance of "Virginia City" opening, which was planted in front of theatre and moved to inner lobby during run. Gag copy on easel read "Park your guns at the door. Too much action and excitement. We don't want our screen shot full of holes during the showing of," etc., followed by cast, etc.

For "Pinocchio," Davis borrowed from one of his patrons a doll which was an exact reproduction of the character in the picture, this was put on display in his lobby ahead with proper credit card. Also planted in five and ten windows were scene stills and featured "Pinocchio" merchandise, music store came through with window on hit tunes and cards were planted in all bus terminals.

THEATREMAN SPONSORS "SLACK NIGHT" TIEIN

The wearing of slacks for the female sex became more popular in Wichita Falls, Texas, since the recent "Slack Night" put on of a Monday night at the Wichita Theatre by A. D. Deason, and proved successful enough to be repeated weekly.

Everyone wearing slacks was admitted at a special price, and the evening was highlighted by a fashion show of sports styles. Store which furnished all clothing and models advertised it heavily and also provided prize slacks for giveaway.

Schiner Puts On Milking Contest With Local Aids

Endorsed by city and state officials and sponsored directly with the local dairy in conjunction with National Dairy Month, a cow-milking contest arranged on the stage of Schine's Palace, Lockport, N. Y., proved to be one of the year's outstanding promotions conducted by Manager Seymour Morris.

Outlining the plan before the local Farm Bureau, Seymour secured the use of the organization's barns and trucks for advertising purposes, the bureau also sending cards announcing the event to all members. The state milk publicity department placed a representative at the disposal of Morris, and aided further with a short subject "The Miracle of Milk," run during the contest. The county milk association joined in by providing the cows and judges. The 4-H Clubs were invited to enter contestants, as were the civic clubs, to take part in a special invitation event. Presidents of other farm organizations in the area were asked to serve on the judging committee.

Co-Sponsor Gives Prizes

The co-sponsoring dairy, a leader in county, furnished the contest cash prizes and farm props used on the stage, such as stanchions, pitchforks, buckets, bottles, scales, etc. Dairy also supplied hay and shavings, mimeographed heralds distributed to consumers and wholesalers, attendants for the contest and banners for delivery trucks. Newspaper advertising and publicity was widespread with dairy coming in on co-op displays. Morris also publicized the event via trailer, programs, lobby display, extra posting throughout the county, radio announcements on the state publicity bureau's program over WBEN, Lockport, and WOR, Buffalo.

The contest was conducted in a box set, the theatre's flats reversed to convey a barn atmosphere. The action had to do with a night scene showing two hoboes entering the barn to find a place to sleep. Entered the farmer at "dawn" and discovering the "boes," began a conversation having to do with the contest, the visitors given brooms to clean up the place in return for a handout.

26 Entrants in Contest

The judges then came on, introduced individually by Morris, and 11 in number. There were judges for each contestant, three for weighing milk and labeling bottles. Each contestant was given a number, the same as placed on an individual quart milk bottle to be used in the contest. The competition was divided in three events, for men, women, mixed teams of boy and girl. Entrants were given 30 seconds, amount of milk in bottle determining winners. Top mixed team was decided by accumulative gross weight of both bottles. The expected comedy was forthcoming in the invitation event in which prominent locals competed.

The contest took 45 minutes in all, with some 26 contestants, the number limited by the Round Tabler. Seymour awarded the cash prizes with the event brought to a close by an address by the Farm Bureau head.

Widespread Tieins Mark Anniversary Of Harris Circuit

Using as a theme line, "the oldest operating theatre company in the world," the 35th anniversary of the Harris Amusement Companies of Pittsburgh, was recently celebrated by all of the circuit's units, with elaborate campaigns supervised by John H. Harris, general manager, and reported here by adman Ken Hoel.

In every situation, in Pittsburgh and out of town, the streets were bedecked and lettered shields placed on telegraph poles. Stores carried tiein windows, joined in cooperative advertising. Busses and private cars were also bannered. Congratulatory wires were secured from prominent locals for lobby display. Marquees were decorated and also served as a send-off for thousands of balloons, to some of which passes were attached.

Publicity was vast with papers carrying shots of the "first motion picture theatre." Stories and photos of circuit founder, John P. Harris, were planted as were features on locals who had attended the first Harris "nickelodeon." Other publicity was gained with invitations to underprivileged child groups to attend the celebrations at the various houses.

Photos of Founder Unveiled

Lobbies were colorfully decorated with photos of the original unit and of old time movie stars. Silk banners and stickers were also utilized to point up the lobby ceremonies on the anniversary which included cutting of birthday cakes. City heads took part in the celebrations and also addressed audiences upon the significance of the occasion. Highlight of the stage proceedings was the unveiling of enlargements of the founder's photo.

Local establishments in business over 35 years were invited to join the celebration. Patrons celebrating their thirty-fifth birthday on the anniversary day were guests of the theatres, as were couples married for 35 years on that date.

Contests and quizzes were included in the celebration programs as were old time silent features, of the type exhibited in the time of the first nickelodeon. For further atmosphere out front, old-fashioned penny slot machines were promoted.

The anniversary week was celebrated from June 16 to 22. Hoel reports fat grosses in all situations as a result of the comprehensive promotions with merchants and civic heads found more than willing to cooperate.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Tickell's Cooking Class

In conjunction with his usual Wednesday afternoon show, Round Tabler F. Tickell at the Capitol in Calgary, Alberta, Can., puts on a weekly cooking school class to run during the entire summer. Running for 45 minutes each session, the theatreman gives away a basket of promoted merchandise each session. In addition, as a grand prize Fred has promoted a refrigerator, cooperating merchant advertising the tiein in local dailies.

FIRST OF THE THIRD

Evidently in keeping with the season, the pace of the Quigley Awards continues to be hot, as results in the First Fortnight period of the Third Quarter show little slowing down. With three entries double-credited, the 48 Appointments go to 51 Round Tables, "who" and "from where" as here noted.

To be stressed is that entries on summer promotions, not intended especially for one picture, will receive due considerations for the Awards. Institutional exploitation of all kinds is distinctly eligible and, irrespective of the period of time covered, will be judged within the Fortnight received.

Animated Window Display Aids Addison on "Pinocchio" Date

Numerous were the window displays promoted by Herman Addison for "Pinocchio" at Schine's Avon, in Watertown, N. Y., among which was an animated setpiece of the well-known characters in the picture which was featured in a shoe store, arms and legs of the figures moving to attract. Tieup was also made with local ice cream dealer, which netted cards in soda fountains and other spots where "Pinocchio" cones were sold, all wrappers on the latter imprinted with title, playdates, etc. Also promoted by Addison were "Pinocchio" balloons which were distributed to the kids.

Record Patrons' Voices During Theatre "Sing"

So popular has the stunt been proven that the recording of patrons' voices during the theatre's "community sing" at the Vanity Theatre, in Brooklyn, is to be expanded into an amateur show under the supervision of Lew Preston, Endicott circuit general manager.

Through tieup with local studios, recordings of individual voices are made while the community sing reel was being run off and later these same recordings played back provide much amusement and laughter, according to Preston. Patrons participating are presented with the recordings.

LATE NEWSPAPER ADVERTISEMENTS

What Theatre Managers Say About "Rebecca"

Reprinted From The Motion Picture Herald*

Says William Noble of the Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma: "It is our opinion that 'Rebecca' is one of the best pictures United Artists has ever released. Intensely interesting from start to finish and enthralling and entrancing with no hint as to ending till the picture ends. Miss Fontaine was superb and exhibited all the characteristics of a great actress, while Olivier, Anderson and Bruce played their parts with exquisite skill. Our hat is off to UA for making one of the best pictures of the year and a picture that is bound to please all classes of patrons, big, little, old and young women and what comes with 'em."

Says Lloyd M. Mills, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Canada: "Boy, oh boy, are they eating it up! Grossed first week 15 per cent better than 'Hurricane" setting a new house record. Still capacity business on third week. Many more expected. Comments very good. Will take more, Mr. Selznick, when advisable."

Reprinted from The Motion Picture Herald*

The MOTION PICTURE HERALD is a leading trade weekly of the motion picture industry and is commonly referred to as its "Bible." In a special department called "What The Picture Did For Me," theatre managers from everywhere write in and report confidentially to other theatre managers on the merits and box office possibilities of every picture. The avobe reports are word for word and authentic.

Tues., Wed., Thurs., May 14-16

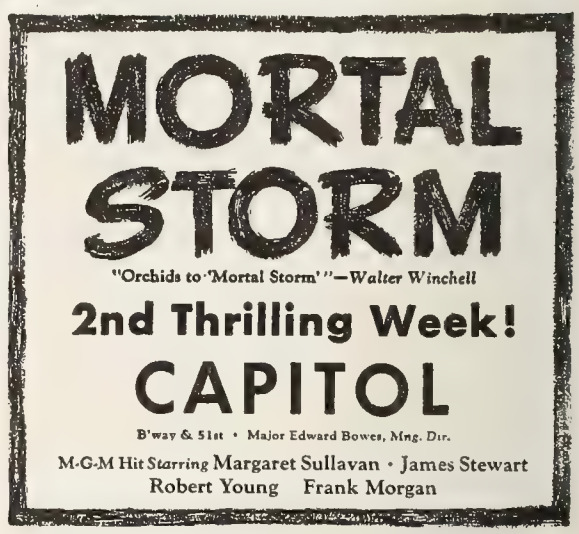
(Below) So as not to sluff off the romance appeal in "Ghost Breakers" at Loew's Penn, Pittsburgh, attention to this in copy and art was shrewdly mixed along with the emphasis on the comedy side. "Scare" stuff was subordinated to the laughs. Size: 125 lines on 4 col.



TODAY—Last Times: "OUR TOWN"

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger (†) symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

"During Alterations"

PROCESSES of readjustment of the production machine of Hollywood to a world being remade, abroad and at home, are becoming manifest, perhaps more rapidly than might have been anticipated.

Production is somewhat reconciled now, or at least acceptant, to the fact that dollars from overseas are to be few and a long time coming. Expectations of a peace in Europe before November, somewhat widely held, hold no expectations of promise for American picture revenues.

And at home, expectations of a peace in the anti-trust suit, and its consequences, are decidedly uncertain. There are those who consider that the end of that controversy is likely to be, in one fashion or another, delayed until after the Presidential election—with some indication that the defense may have a hope that it might settle more advantageously with a Willkie administration or, failing that, to be in no worse case than now.

So, it comes that Hollywood, which cannot wait out remote eventuations, is shaping its course for the now, with considerably more pointed an address at the entertainment job.

Along with that percolates a notion that production is after all a servant of the box office. Edward Small, United Artists producer, stepped forth this week with the assertion that "the business must undergo a major operation . . . readjustment must come swiftly, if it is not to come too late. . . . To start with, top salaried producers, executives, stars, directors, writers and all others will have to realize that they are not worth what they were worth yesterday . . . a personality worth $100,000 a picture six months ago is today actually worth only $60,000. . . . Everybody realizes what must be done . . . no one has been willing to step up and say, 'I'll take a cut to help save us all' . . . now, I am personally willing to take such a cut."

Likely as not Mr. Small spoke himself right out of the chances for Academy oscars with that.

When his remarks got about, and they did most rapidly, the behind-hand comment was bitter and heated.

Obviously enough he who speaks of less money, lower salaries, in the land-of-bigger & bigger, is something between a traitor and a revolutionist. Probably Mr. Small knew that, too, and would have been disappointed without the reaction.

Mr. Small spoke feelingly, indeed, also about exhibitors and double bills and giveaways, saying of the mutuality of interest that "we shall have to swim together or sink separately".

OUT of Philadelphia, a publicity release from the Saturday Evening Post, announcing another piece by Mr. Samuel Goldwyn, opened with the genial statement: "Did you know the panic is on in Hollywood? That everyone who works there is wondering how soon the whole structure is going to collapse?"

Hastily in the next paragraph the Post's publicity adds: "The questions are those of Samuel Goldwyn," and come, it seems, from his piece, "Hollywood Is Sick".

"And the whole trouble," he says, "is double features."

And besides that, says Mr. Goldwyn again, "half the battle will be won when—if—the present fight against block booking is won".

Anyway, Mr. Goldwyn is back to normal, which is to say: militant, and in print. He still says that there are not enough stories to make 600 pictures a year. Just now Mr. Goldwyn, who has other matters in hand, is not making any.

FROM Warner Brothers, again this week, expression of the entertainment policy which tends to grow.

"Like 'Four Daughters', 'My Love Came Back' has not received the ballyhoo that heralds so many other pictures," observed Mr. Jack L. Warner. "Its players have not until now been hailed as stars of the first magnitude. Its plot doesn't attempt to solve world problems or propound an important message—unless that it be a good laugh, and a good time is what we need right now."

Meanwhile, from Hollywood, too, came word that Warners, considering the semi-official French protest of February, '39, no longer in effect, have decided to distribute "Devil's Island".

So in these several and varied directions, one may observe inklings that Hollywood is in the process of fitting itself to today in the changing world—with, significantly, its principal working policy the production of entertainment.

PETTEY PIECE

A FEW years ago Mr. Tom Pettey came up from Washington journalism to a post pertaining to publicity in the New York office of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc. He performed competently and was presently assigned to the Hollywood office, with extended functions in that complex community. Recently he resigned to become the Hollywood representative of PM, New York's altogether remarkable and experimental 5-cent daily, which calls itself a newspaper while resembling a magazine. Last Sunday's issue contained Mr. Pettey's first major essay which was a piece about the Hollywood functioning of the MPPDA, charging " . . . the Production Code Administration is Overcrowded, Understaffed . . . "

Further the piece observes that "the public has grown up", also that "Breen, like every Hollywood producer, realizes that at the box office there isn't any substitute for sex."

It can be observed to PM and Mr. Pettey that the public has always been grown-up, as far as it can go; that neither Mr. Breen nor the producers have been looking for any substitute for sex, which is highly approved by the Production Code, axiomatically recognized as an element of human drama.

Mr. Pettey must have some special notion about sex in mind. There are also some other observations about this piece that could be made, are being made.

Price Cut Cuts Film

THE first run of a major distributor's picture was cancelled at an important circuit customer's premiere house this week because reduced admission scales were announced for the theatre. It happened in Chicago where RKO cancelled the opening of its "Tom Brown's School Days" at the Jones, Linick & Schaefer Oriental theatre because of a new reduced admission policy.

The Oriental, a 3,200-seat house, formerly had a scale of 35, 55 and 75 cents. Some time ago prices were cut to 30, 40 and 65 cents and it was after this cut that "Tom Brown" was booked. This week the circuit announced a 25 and 40-cent policy for the house and the cancellation followed.

Distributor representatives in Chicago said Wednesday that the cut, if continued, would eliminate the Oriental as a first run house. This would alter the availability situation in the Loop area and affect clearance elsewhere in the city.

Hearst for Kennedy

JOSEPH P. KENNEDY, Ambassador to Britain, was nominated for nomination to the Presidency of the United States Tuesday by the New York Journal and American.

It was done under a heading of "Qualified—and Available," with a quarter page halftone and an equal area of twelve point type with words that sounded very like William Randolph Hearst himself, or some person influenced by his style.

To some observers it appeared rather possible, or even probable, that this expression was made without the immediate knowledge of Mr. Kennedy. It was to be recalled that news breaks which might be considered to have a bearing on Mr. Kennedy's movements or plans for movements have significantly appeared in the New York Times, the Washington office of which is said to have been on right pleasant terms with him through his several commission functions there.

Meanwhile a degree of understanding with Mr. Hearst may be expected to have resulted from Mr. Kennedy's survey, analysis and recommendations pertaining to the Hearst papers, prior to the remedial liquidation program of a while back. It was a job of rather the same order, incidentally, as that performed, with rather less acceptance, for Paramount Pictures Corporation, ending in an ably suppressed report.

Mr. Kennedy is known to have contemplated somewhat abstractly, the White House, but there has been no indication that he has seriously considered any plans to live there.

Staggered Runs

SOMETHING that appears to be brand new in certain film clearance situations is being proposed by an MGM branch manager, Frank Downey, in Detroit. It is the staggering of subsequent run bookings, so that simultaneous runs throughout the city would be eliminated, and so that day-and date runs would occur only in one section of the city at one time. Thus, one film would play day and date on the west side of the city; another, that week, on the east side; and the next week, the situation would be reversed. The films having played thus in the two areas, they would be sent to the "key" subsequent runs.

Mr. Downey said his idea was not a zoning plan, and would not affect other producers' product; that it might take two or three months to work out, if accepted by "his superiors."

William F. Rodgers, MGM general sales manager, head of Mr. Downey's sales superiors, said in New York last Thursday, that the question was merely one of availability; that day and date runs had caused delay and difficulty; that the plan would change Detroit booking arrangements.

Paramount and CBS

PARAMOUNT acquired a half interest in Columbia Broadcasting in 1929 in anticipation of the advent of television, according to testimony of Ralph Colin, general counsel for CBS, at the third hearing on the nomination of Thad H. Brown for another term as a member of the Federal Communications Commission held Wednesday in Washington by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

At the second hearing two weeks ago Senator Charles W. Tobey charged that CBS finances had been irregularly handled by a half-dozen "insiders." Mr. Colin issued a statement denying the allegation and the story appeared in MOTION PICTURE HERALD June 29th.

On Wednesday Mr. Colin explained the details of the Paramount-CBS deals, after being rebuked by the Senate committee for "intemperate" language in his former statement. He explained that he would not have charged Senator Tobey with attempting to injure CBS and William S. Paley, its president, had he known all the facts.

The details of the transactions between the film company and the network, according to Mr. Colin, were as follows: In 1929 CBS called in its outstanding stock and issued two classes, A and B, to its stockholders. Then, certain individuals sold their A stock to the picture company. The exact price to be paid was not fixed at the time, but Paramount gave the certain CBS "A" shareholders 58,823 shares of its own stock under an agreement that, if CBS netted $2,000,000 or more in the next two years, Paramount would pay approximately $5,000,000 for the 50 percent interest in CBS it was getting.

CBS made the required profit but then Paramount did not have the available cash and resold the network stock at $82.21 per share and then bought back its own stock for about $4,000,000. CBS bought 14,156 shares of its stock but out of surplus and not from capital as charged. The profit to the "insiders" came, Mr. Colin said, when they turned over the stock which they had personally bought from Paramount to a banking syndicate. He asserted that there was no use of company money for the benefit of individuals.

Propaganda, or What?

THE Post Office in Washington on Tuesday delivered "franked" envelopes to members of Congress, inviting them to a "highly secretive" showing of a motion picture. The invitation bore a facsimile of the signature of Representative Ross Collins, Democrat, of Mississippi, and warned that, "Only Senators and members of Congress will be admitted."

The film was screened, and at the end, the Capitol's House Office Building caucus room was in a veritable bedlam. The legislators had just witnessed motion pictures showing what Germany did to the Low Countries when its armies steam-rollered therein. (Press dispatches from Europe recently described films made by the Hitlerites to show potential enemies, and others, the "efficiency" of the Nazi destructive forces, similar to the film of the German invasion of Poland that was shown to the Norwegian Parliament just before Hitler's forces took over Norway).

The expressions of the Congressional audience Tuesday night ranged all the way from "propaganda" and "warmongering" to talk of more money for defense.

Representative Donald Lawrence O'Toole, Democrat, New York, typified the opinion of a number of the audience with the statement that, the film was "purely German propaganda," but "I don't know whether the reason we were invited to see it was to instill in our minds the gallantry and efficiency of the German military machine or put fear in us."

The American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Pennsylvania have petitioned the state censor board to prevent showings of all foreign propaganda films. Motion Picture Variety Club Legion Post in Philadelphia heard of the showing of some German films. They advised a State Veterans' committee. The show was stopped.

"Outside" or "In"

"'WE don't need outside advice,' spokesmen for the Department of Justice let it be known today in discussing a request of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners for a voice in drafting the consent decree in the New York anti-trust suit," said Motion Picture Daily under a Washington dateline Wednesday. "Department of Justice officials let it be known they felt any such request came rather late. . . ."

That was delicate evasion of the real point, in the opinion of some observers.

The Government's lawyers in this instance incline to the opinion they have heard, are hearing, are negotiating with that side already.

Patriotic Service

INDEPENDENT and affiliated exhibition interests were one on Tuesday afternoon when both sides met in the large board room of the Hays organization, in New York City, and agreed that something should be done by theatres to help the Red Cross.

Accordingly, a committee was drafted to draw up tentative plans for a nationwide observance in theatres, probably in October, to aid the Red Cross war chest. Both national and regional committees would conduct the campaign, as with the industry's "Golden Anniversary" affair some while back. Exploring commenced the very next morning.

The committee: Col. Harry A. Cole and Nathan Yamins, of Allied States; Walter Vincent and Edward L. Kuykendall, MPTOA; Joseph Bernhard, Warner Circuit; Leonard Goldenson, Paramount Theatres; Charles C. Moskowitz, Loew's; Spyros Skouras, Fox-National Theatres; Leslie Thompson, RKO Theatres; Robert H. Poole, Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners, and Harry Brandt, New York ITOA.

The U. S. motion picture industry—producers in Hollywood and distributors in the Dominion—form a large part of the film committee organizing a $1,000,000 war benefit in Canada.

Paramount and its many affiliated circuits Tuesday, established a "Patriotic Service Department," in charge of A. H. Blank, head of Paramount-Tri-States Theatres, to clear all patriotic reels, patriotic newsreels, campaigns, drives, Red Cross appeals, Americanism programs and the like. Mr. Blank left his Des Moines headquarters for the Paramount home office in New York City.

Press Agents' Union

NATIONAL unionization of every publicity and advertising worker in motion pictures is about to be attempted—in Hollywood production, where they have been organized almost en bloc for months, in New York distribution, where they are now organizing, and in theatres and elsewhere in the field, where unionization is about to start.

Not generally known, because of the comparatively quiet nature of organizing in the east, is the fact that a full 90 per cent of the publicity and advertising workers in home offices have been unionized.

The eastern group of Screen Publicists and Advertisers Guild, which on Tuesday affiliated with the western Screen Publicists and Advertisers Guild, for the beginning of a national organization, will henceforth be known as the Screen Publicists Guild of New York. The first "national convention" will be held in Hollywood in August to draft a constitution and set up minimum wage and maximum hour requirements for their producer, distributor and exhibitor employers.

Film "Bootlegging"

REPORTERS around the Federal Courthouse at New York's Foley Square, bent on the business of covering the Government's film anti-trust suit and consent decree hearings, have noticed of late numerous operatives of the organized industry's Copyright Protection Bureau swinging in and out of doors enclosing the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Investigation revealed that the Bureau and the FBI are on the track of "something big" in the illegal film duping and film bootlegging business.

While the business is not as big as it was in the looser days of the film industry's beginnings, and for a time thereafter, authoritative sources disclose that the leakage to distributors from illegal duping and bootlegging of films runs into many thousands of dollars annually. In the east, particularly, duping plants and bootleggers have been operating for a long time.

Many of the duped prints are shipped out of the country, especially to South America, many are circulated among certain movie itinerant showmen, among certain non-theatricals, and among certain "regular" exhibitors deep in the hinterlands, where detection of such illegal operations is difficult.

The Copyright Protection Bureau is conducted by the eight major distributors to detect and suppress illegal exhibitions under the U. S. Copyright Act.

NAZIS SEIZING, BANNING U. S. FILMS IN DOMINATED TERRITORIES

New Ouster Cuts 20 Per Cent More from Foreign Gross; Revenue from British Isles Threatened by Invasion

Foreign departments of United States major motion picture companies this week heard that American films are being seized and banned in German dominated territory which now includes the bulk of the continental market. Such action by the Nazis would write finis, at least for a time, to American film activity in that area which formerly contributed about 20 percent of the industry's foreign gross and something less than ten percent of the foreign revenue received in New York.

Complains to State Department

First outside inkling that the Nazi government would seize, by one means or another, stocks of American motion pictures in the hands of either native or U. S. distributors in those sections of Europe under German domination came this week in the quiet visit of Ben Miggins, European manager for Twentieth Century-Fox, and F, S. Irby, of the company's legal staff, to the State Department at Washington, where they lodged a complaint concerning the treatment being accorded their Norwegian subsidiary.

The two film executives conferred with Thomas Burke, chief of the division of international communications; Paul T. Culbertson, assistant chief of the division of European affairs, and other officials of the Department regarding the situation.

It is understood that Fox had been informed that under the urging of the German authorities now in control of Norway, efforts were being made to throw the Fox Norwegian company into bankruptcy, although there was no legitimate cause for such action. State Department officials were told that if this effort is successful, it will mean that the film inventory will be seized, despite the fact that the pictures are not the property of the Norwegian company but of the American parent.

British Future Uncertain

From day to day increasing threats of an invasion of England is causing speculation on the future welfare of American pictures in the British market from which about $35,000,000 of the $50,000,000 remitted from abroad formerly came. Although only about 50 per cent of the film rental gross outside the United States and Canada is made in the British Isles, nearly 70 per cent of the money received in this country came from there.

The American companies operating in Germany in recent days have been Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The actual revenue from that territory has been small but all the companies have been doing business in nations which have come under Nazi control.

Executives of the three foreign departments which have offices in Germany said that no word had been received about any ban on American films. However, it was not denied that such action might be possible. Rigid control and censorship would delay reception of definite information. Until such information comes from abroad foreign departments are regarding the report as only a rumor.

As an argument against any sweeping prohibition against the exhibition of American films in much of Europe it was said that no other adequate product supply is available and the Nazis would hardly deprive the people of motion picture entertainment. It was reported that the place of films both as an entertainment medium and propaganda medium is fully recognized by the Germans.

A cable from Lisbon giving theatre conditions in France, however, reported that although theatres have reopened throughout France only old French pictures may be shown. No American features were reported. The German army has opened special theatres to show German films and newsreels. Balkan countries which have swung into the Axis viewpoint also show the German war newsreels.

The report of the ban against American films cited Twentieth Century-Fox's "Four Sons" (released June 14th) for the prohibition against that company's product and MGM's "The Mortal Storm" (also released June 14th) and "Escape" (not released yet) as reasons against that company. No indication for action against Paramount which has not produced any of the so-called "anti-Nazi" films was given.

The Twentieth Century-Fox foreign department announced it had no confirmation of any discriminatory action and was still shipping prints, accessories, publicity information and similar material to Germany and countries dominated by Nazis.

Paramount and MGM also reported that they had no information about any German ban against their product and considered it only a rumor.

Difficulty in South America

Report of the Nazi ban followed rumors of difficulty on certain American films in South America. Exact knowledge on this subject was also denied by the companies and the foreign department of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. It was said, however, that many countries in South America have an "absolute neutrality policy" with regard to the war. And the exhibition of any film favoring or attacking either side in the European war cannot be shown in many Latin American nations.

"Confessions of a Nazi Spy" was held up by censorship in several South American Countries. And it was said that "The Mortal Storm" and "Four Sons" would probably experience similar, or greater difficulty.

Protests by foreign countries, however, have stopped production or circulation of several American pictures. Changing conditions have removed one restriction of this nature. "Devil's Island," made by Warner Brothers, was withdrawn in February, 1939, after a protest by the French Consul in Los Angeles. The film is scheduled to open its first New York run on Saturday.

Restrictions and regulations through the years had all but ended a profitable continental European market for American films even before the Hitler invasion. In some countries local product was always preferred to American films and in almost all exchange rules and other laws hampered operations by the American companies.

Gross Percentages

Scandinavian countries and the Balkans formerly contributed some revenue. Operations in Italy were concluded in January, 1939. No new films have been shipped into Spain since the Civil War began there in 1936. Continental Europe in "good times" turned in about the following percentages of the total foreign gross: France and Belgium, five percent; Holland, one percent; Scandinavia, three percent; Italy, five per cent; "greater" Germany, two percent, and other European countries, four percent. In terms of actual remittances to the United States continental Europe was considerably less important, with the total received from that territory about $3,000,000, in normal times.

In terms of screen time American films dominated Europe last year in the following percentages according to figures released by Nathan D. Golden, chief of the Film Section of the Department of Commerce; Norway, 62 percent; Denmark, 71; Holland, 63; France, 45; Finland, 54; England, 77; Switzerland, 55; Greece, 57; Jugoslavia, 66; Turkey, 70; Bulgaria, 41; Albania, 75 (in 1938); Poland, 60 (in 1938), and Portugal, 80.

The majors have adopted a policy of not shipping prints to territories where conditions make satisfactory operations impossible. With headquarters in Spain or Portugal it is not possible to reach many "free" European territories, for few remain and those that do are relatively unimportant. Business continues in Sweden but it is extremely difficult to ship to that country which is shut off by Russian and Russian dominated lands and German controlled territory.

In South America where American films must compete with German propaganda pictures which are given away for little or nothing, more friendly governments have helped the industry. The granting by the United States Government last month of a $20,000,000 loan to Argentina was reported to help relations immediately and aid in counteracting German films.

For years the Latin American film market has been dominated by U. S. product and about ten percent of the foreign film gross comes from there. French and German and local pictures have also been popular. The war has cut the supply of French pictures and it is hoped that anti "fifth column" drives on the part of local Latin American governments will cut down the influence of German films, especially of the newsreel type, which, it was reported, are furnished free to theatres.

The U. S. Department of Commerce reported that, according to its commercial attache at Rio de Janeiro, efforts of the Brazilian government to foster a domestic motion picture producing industry have so far been unsuccessful. The investment in the Brazilian film industry was reported to be $1,118,000 but the present total value only $150,000. The single studio in Sao Paulo has been closed.

SOUTH AMERICAN TRADE IMPROVED

General trade with South America for the month of May was about double the figure for the same period last year, according to the United States Department of Commerce. Shipments to other Latin American countries were also up substantially. Trade of the Latin American nations with the United States was also higher than a year ago but the increase was not as great as the U. S. exports. The chief South American buyers of U. S. products are Argentina and Brazil, each buying over $10,000,000 worth in the month of May.

In May, the Commerce Department reported, trade decreased with England, France, Norway, The Netherlands, Belgium, and Russia, and increases with Canada and Italy were shown.

ALLIED EASES ON DIVORCE, CONSENT NEGOTIATORS TURN TO ARBITRATION

Exhibitor Unit Reported Yielding on Major Point If New Code Has "Teeth"; Consent Decree Conferences Resume

How to enforce arbitration, how to finance it, and to whom it should be applied; what block booking and blind selling provisions should be devised; and what clearance and overbuying provisions should be included in a new trade code, again occupied representatives of the majors and the Government as they met Tuesday afternoon in the Bar Association Building in New York City to reconstruct the motion picture industry by a consent decree which would avert a prolonged anti-trust suit. Meanwhile, on Monday, the trial itself, brought by the Department of Justice against the majors, was postponed once more, this time to Monday, July 15th.

Allied Reported Easing

As speculation on the course and progress of the conferees rippled through the New York sector of the film industry this week, there was spread the knowledge that National Allied States Association, until now resolutely pressing for theatre divorcement as part of a consent decree—had indicated it might yield, if it could be assured of a new trade practice code with "teeth."

In the MPTOA, on the organized exhibitor side opposite Allied, it is felt that, "even a faulty and imperfect consent decree may be better than trying this suit," according to a statement released Tuesday in New York over the signature of MPTOA president, Edward L. Kuykendall.

"Nobody knows, not even the lawyers, what sort of specific proposals will come out of these negotiations, if anything," he added.

Meanwhile the negotiators, Tuesday, were engaged in a day of the fiercest wrangling since negotiations began five weeks ago, principally over the subject of discrimination in selling circuits and independents.

Too, on Tuesday, the day conferences on the consent decree were resumed, reliable sources disclosed that Allied, always very close to the Department of Justice, was, probably alone of all exhibitor organizations, receiving direct reports of the day to day proceedings.

Tuesday, also brought from the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners, a telegram to Thurman Arnold, in Washington, requesting "the privilege of making constructive suggestions" in the matter of the contents of the consent decree.

"We don't need any outside advice, retorted a Department of Justice spokesman."

Insofar as Allied States is concerned, the Department officials indicated not so long ago that since Allied caused the suit to be instigated, it was entitled to say whether the proposed out-of-court settlement would be a satisfactory remedy for the conditions complained of.

As the meetings resumed Tuesday, reports from special committees on clearance and overbuying were studied; and, also, the reports of the principals of the attorneys, on attitude towards the committees' suggestions.

It was also said, at the start of the meeting, that trade showings and block-booking, as problems to be solved with special provisions, would be disposed of that day, or shortly thereafter. It was known that two different reports on these points were submitted to the main committee.

Arbitration continued to be a subject upon which there was no agreement in major points —those points being cited above. However, it was said both sides had agreed upon placing part of the cost of arbitration upon the exhibitor: 10 cents per seat, as advocated by the Department of Commerce report on a trade practice program, made several months ago, and rejected at the time by the Department of Justice as an attempt to influence it.

The adjournment of the trial was obtained from Federal Judge Henry Goddard, the trial judge, by Stephen Doyle, special assistant attorney general. It was reported that there would be no adjournment of the conferences over the summer.

Trade Shows Seen Wanted

Last week as the conferences droned on, the framework of the consent decree appeared evident to some observers. Thus, it was conceded that the Government wanted trade shows, rather than blind buying; decentralization of chain and circuit booking departments, rather than overbuying. It was said that the block booking to be permitted might amount to five to ten pictures. It was said, too, that some company attorneys were pressing for an "escape" clause, to help their clients avoid carrying out the consent decree terms if the decree fails to cover all contingencies.

Speculations reached heights last week, as they had the week before, the secrecy with which the negotiations were being conducted, being an impellent. One speculation was that the distributors had offered the Government their willingness to agree to a 25 per cent unrestricted cancellation privilege, in return for being allowed to sell as they always did.

It was rumored, too, that two companies—Columbia and Universal—had proved obstacles to a reconstruction of the selling system. They would not agree to sell in small blocks, and to trade show in advance.

U. S. Files Schine Particulars

The United States Department of Justice's anti-trust suit against a large independent circuit went one step forward this week, when it charged the Schine circuit, in Buffalo Federal Court on Monday, with maintaining local monopolies in 37 cities and towns. The bill of particulars, lengthy, was filed by George Grobe, United States attorney. Most of the cities are in New York and Ohio. They are:

Ashland, O.: Athens, O.; Ballston, N. Y.; Bath, N. Y.; Bellefontaine, O.; Bucyrus, O.; Cambridge, Md.; Canandaigua, N. Y.; Carthage, N. Y.; Corbin, Ky.; Cortland, N. Y.; Easton, Md.; Fostoria, O.; Geneva, N. Y.; Gloversville, N. Y.; Hudson Falls, N. Y.; Hurlock, Md.; Illion, N. Y.; Kent, O.; Laurel, Del.; Little Falls, N. Y.; Lockport, N. Y.; Milford, Del.; Mt. Vernon, O.; Newark, N. Y.; Norwich, N. Y.; Ogdensburg, N. Y.; Oneonta, N. Y.; Paris, Ky.; Pennyan, N. Y.; Perry, N. Y.; Ravenna, O.; Richmond, Ky.; Salamanca, N. Y.; Saranac Lake, N. Y.; Seneca Falls, N. Y.; and Tiffin, O.

The Government listed the following theatres which, it charged, had been given preference or protection in film bookings by distributors:

Strand, Ogdensburg, N. Y.; all distributor defendants; Capital, Newark, N. Y., all distributor defendants; Strand, Delaware, O., Paramount and United Artists; Strand Hudson Falls, N. Y., all distributor defendants; Rialto, Lockport, N. Y., 20th Century-Fox, Universal, Warners, Vitagraph, Columbia, Paramount and RKO.

Strand, Carthage, N. Y., all distributor defendants; Malone, Malone, N. Y., all distributor defendants; Vine, Norwalk, O., Paramount, 20th Century-Fox, Warners, RKO, Universal and United Artists; Forum, Norwalk, O., Capitol, Norwich, N. Y., and the Van Wert, Van Wert, O., all distributor defendants.

Acquired Houses Listed

Theatres acquired by Schine which after acquisition, have been granted priority or preference over competing theatres by distributor defendants were listed by the Government as the Colonial, Norwich, N. Y.; Strand, Ogdensburg; Capitol, Newark; Strand, Delaware, O.; Strand, Hudson Falls; Strand, Carthage; Forum, Norwalk, O., and the Van Wert, Van Wert, O.

Names and locations of competing theatres over which theatres acquired by Schine are alleged to have been granted priority are the Star, Delaware, O.; Palace, Lockport, N. Y.; Plaza, Malone, N. Y.; Memorial, Mt. Vernon, O.; Moose, Norwalk, O.; Smalley, Norwich, N. Y., and the Ohio, Van Wert, O.

The Government charged that all distributor defendants have "consistently refused to license motion pictures on a local competitive basis to the Plaza Theatre at Malone and that the defendant Twentieth Century-Fox has likewise refused to license to the Memorial Theatre in Mt. Vernon, O."

The claim also was made that the refusal to sell a second or subsequent run to the Plaza at Malone was made at the request of Schine defendants.

Names and locations of theatres over which it is charged unreasonable protection was granted to Schine defendants by distributors are the American, Canton, N. Y.; Playhouse, Clyde, N. Y., and the Avalon, Lowville, N. Y.

Houses that claim to have been charged more for comparable or less favorable runs than Schine are listed by the Government as the Capital, Auburn, N. Y.; the Palace, Corning, N. Y., and the Madison and the Monroe, both in Rochester.

It is further charged that the following were prevented from using films which were licensed to Schine in excess of the reasonable exhibition requirements of the theatres, or from obtaining those films while they are still new:

Aleck P. Papayanakos, Canton, N. Y., delay of 60 to 75 days in exhibition after first run, manner in which this result was accomplished not being known; Reliance Theatres, Inc., Lockport, extent of loss of product not known, accomplished by contract with Schine; Michael Boumansour, Malone, no product received because of contracts with Schine, and Emerson W. Long, Mt. Vernon, O., no product received, how accomplished not known.

PARAMOUNT NEWSREEL ON "AMERICANISM"

A Paramount newsreel with Chicago's Mayor Edward J. Kelly in a "starring role" has been completed in cooperaton with the City of Chicago. The newsreel was made coincident with the issuance by City Clerk Ludwig Schreiber of stickers for automobiles. The sticker reads "I Am a True American." In the newsreel, which will be released as part of a regular Paramount Newsreel release in Chicago, Mayor Kelly delivers a short talk on what it means to be an American.

FIRST WEEK OF NEW TAX FINDS NO BOX OFFICE DROP, FEW COMPLAINTS

Many Exhibitors Still Studying Reaction Pending Final Decision on Admissions; Patron Response Is Favorable

Both public and theatre owners over the entire country have taken the application to operation and payment of the new Federal ticket tax for national defense in their stride. There were hardly any complaints from either side, and there was no marked drop in attendance resulting therefrom.

"There is every indication that it (the new tax law) will be completely revised by next January, that much heavier taxes will be levied then, that this tax will be brought down to at least the 11-cent admissions," said a statement issued Tuesday by the MPTOA, over the signature of Edward L. Kuykendall, president.

Last week's report on a national survey, published in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, July 6th, pages 14-15, showing that some 95 per cent of theatre owners would increase their admission prices by passing the tax along to the public, still holds. A few did lower actual admission prices by absorbing the tax, but apparently these did not number more than five per cent of the country.

Many owners will study the situation at their box offices for another few weeks to make final decisions.

A Few Changes Noted

In some places, "downstairs" orchestra business suffered to balcony, where orchestra seats were within the tax range, and, therefore, their prices went up, as against the lower scaled balcony seats not subject to the tax.

A number of independent and circuit operators increased prices even beyond the tax, in order to avoid the handling of pennies. Thus, a house charging 25 cents, and subject to a three-cent tax, increased admission prices to 30 cents.

Stressed in many towns was the patriotic nature of the proceeds of the tax, and to this the public acted favorably.

Where exhibitors reduced admissions below the 21-cent minimum exemption, some unfavorable reactions, even press publicity resulted, influenced, no doubt, by the defense-minded tempo of the nation.

Initial figures on the tax returns will not be available until after August 1st for exhibitors file their returns with the local collectors for the Treasury Department monthly.

The only reports now coming in to Washington are those dealing with business activity generally, but there are indications that increasing employment as a result of the defense program will keep theatre attendance up. Meanwhile, it was said that Treasury officials are pleased over the apparent general maintenance of admission prices at June levels, with the new federal tax added.

Local Reactions Favorable

Reactions from cities throughout the country follow:

The majority of local Cleveland subsequent run independent theatres in the 25-cent admission classification are advancing their price to 30 cents, and 30-cent houses, in a majority of cases, have gone to 35 cents. These prices, however, include the three per cent state excise tax on gross admissions, heretofore absorbed, as well as the new federal defense levy.

TAX DIGEST OF THE WEEK

Collections on the amusement tax in Mississippi in the first half of 1940 set a new peak for a like period since the levy was started about four years ago. The total was $223,087, against $207,409 in the same period of 1939.

Louisiana's proposed amusement tax which did not apply to racetracks but placed a graduated tax on theatre admissions and a 25 per cent tax on night clubs is out of the running, according to reports from the capital, Baton Rouge.

New Mexico reports April theatre receipts at $211,606, a gain of $13,788 over March.

A tax of 10 cents a square foot tax on billboards has been imposed by the city council in Hornell, New York. Under provisions of the law, billboard owners are required to pay a 50-cent fee for an application and a $2 license fee for each board in addition to the 10 cents a square foot billboard tax.

The first few days of increased admission rates at Seattle theatres has failed to arouse much comment on the part of audiences. The raised scales are accepted by the public as a "necessary evil."

With one exception, all San Francisco theatres, have added 10 per cent to admission charges regardless of whether the total makes even change. The lone exception is the United Artists, which absorbed the tax in the 35 and 40 cent prices, and reduced the evening top price from 55 to 50 cents.

Business Holds to Normal

Reaction at Philadelphia box offices was that the public apparently is willingly paying the tax for national defense. The tax had absolutely no influence on business, theatre managers reported.

Theatre managers in Minneapolis report that the higher amusement taxes, which have been passed along to the patron by all theatres in that area, have been paid without protest.

In Dallas, Interstate and Southern Enterprises kept their admissions at round figures, raising them in some cases and reducing them in others. The general tendency seems to be a slight increase in the larger surburbans and a slight cut in the smaller downtown first-runs.

Several Kansas City suburban theatres with 25-cent changes are expected within a week or so to start absorbing the tax of three cents rather than passing it on as has been the case heretofore.

Detroit patrons have voiced little or no objection to the payment of the tax, theatre managers report. The added tax has not hurt business, a survey disclosed.

A few exhibitors in Western Pennsylvania who passed the tax along to the public and added a penny or two are meeting with resistance, according to reports received in Pittsburgh. Approximately 95 per cent of theatre owners in the territory passed only the tax along and to this patron reaction was favorable.

Film patrons in the Gulf States grumbled a little about the tax, it is reported, but paid and apparently will fall in line, although a slight decrease in neighborhood attendance is expected.

In Oklahoma City, Standard Theatres Corporation reduced admissions at the Ritz, East Side suburban, from 25 to 20 cents, while the Tower, first run North Side house, cut admission from 40 to 27 cents plus tax. Little effect on business is reported.

No adverse reaction to the tax is the report from Spokane.

Several neighborhood houses in Rochester, N. Y., which retained 15-cent balcony prices report patrons are buying balcony tickets instead of paying the 28 cents for downstairs seats.

Lincoln, Neb., theatres have noticed no objection whatever from patrons. Cashiers say there are few who do not understand the tax, and even calls for explanation are minor.

With a two per cent state admission tax on tickets costing a dime or over already passed along to the patron, Denver theatres followed the same policy with the new federal tax.

Business is reported at an even keel in Columbus, Ohio, despite the tax. The J. Real Neth Theatres, operating the neighborhood Cameo, Clinton, Eastern, Lincoln, Markham and State, has increased admissions from 25 to 30 cents, as has Frank Yassenoff, who operates the Drive-In.

Buffalo Admissions Raised

The principal downtown theatres in Buffalo have raised admissions five cents. A similar raise has occurred in suburban theatres but most city neighborhoods have added only the three cents tax. Little opposition is reported.

"No effect" is the general comment of exhibitors in Birmingham, Ala., on the tax situation.

The Fourth of July holiday gave Albany, N. Y., theatres their first real opportunity to watch operation of the tax, it was reported from that city. While the delay in providing penny change was more noticeable than beforehand, the audience reaction was substantially the same.

In Tampa, theatre managers say the customers are taking the tax with a smile and reported only one sqawk. One customer requested his money back when he learned of the tax.

Milledgeville, Ga., theatres dropped admission prices for adults after six o'clock to 20 cents, thereby eliminating not only the federal tax but an additional five cents on the ticket fee.

In Louisville, Ky., operators of the five major business district theatres, Rialto, Strand, Mary Anderson, Loew's and Brown, announced price increases to 48 cents, an addition of four cents; balconies 36 cents, increased from 33, and afternoon prices to 30 cents from 27. Children admissions stay at 16 cents. Suburban prices will vary.

The Rialto, Lewistown, Pa., has reduced the 40-cent top on stage shows to 36 cents, so that the total with the four-cent tax passed on, amounts to 40 cents. The regular price is 30 cents to which has been added the three-cent tax.

Brennan Wins Award

E. R. Brennan, manager of the Kenosha theatre, Kenosha, Wis., a Standard Circuit house, has won the circuit's plaque for outstanding showmanship three successive times and the award now is his permanently. In addition to the plaque, Mr. Brennan was presented with three cash awards and his assistant, George Kuehnl, also received a cash award for the best idea contributed by a theatre employee.

World's Fair's 500 Films the Largest Assemblage Ever Shown in One Place

The strongest single piece of evidence ever to give testimony of the worth of the screen in presenting to the masses the sales messages of business and propaganda messages of governments was submitted to the press on Monday by the New York World's Fair in a report listing 500 films being shown daily in the Fair buildings, films of practically every conceivable type, from short documentaries and cartoons to so-called "super-productions"—and not a single admission is charged in any of the round 50 theatres, auditoriums and other places of exhibition.

Claude R. Collins, head of the Fair newsreel department, who made the survey, said, "The pictures are of a far better quality and are generally exhibited in better surroundings than at last summer's session."

Foreign governments are showing 368 pictures, 321 of which are 35mm with sound, and 46 are 16mm, some sound, some silent. States have 28 pictures, all 16mm. In the commercial buildings, there are 73 pictures, 44 of them 35mm with sound and 29 in 16mm, either sound or silent.

The longest is the "Land of Liberty" two-hour feature made for the Government by Cecil B. DeMille for the MPPDA membership, and contributed.

In order to see all of the program, one would be required to spend every hour of every day of the full operating period of the Fair viewing nothing but motion pictures.

Paramount Holds Chicago Meeting

Operating activities, merchandising and exploitation ideas and a comprehensive plan for close cooperation with the Government and other agencies to further patriotic endeavors were discussed Wednesday by Paramount theatre partners and executives from the Midwest and Far West at an all-day session at the Drake Hotel.

Under the proposed plan all patriotic drives, Red Cross pleas, short subjects dwelling on Americanism which might be issued by governmental agencies, newsreel shots and special shows, will have a uniform presentation in all Paramount theatres.

The new U. S. defense tax and its reaction by patrons in various parts of the country was also discussed.

Present at the meeting were: Sam Dembow and Harry Goldenson, jointly in charge of theatre operations for the Paramount home office; Harry L. Royster, assistant to Mr. Dembow; John Balaban of the Balaban & Katz circuit; Jules J. Rubens, Balaban & Katz Great States Theatres; A. H. Blank, Ralph Branton, and Myron Blank, Tri-States Theatres; Earl Hudson, Detroit; Harry L. Nace, Phoenix, Arizona; Harry David, Salt Lake City; John J. Friedl, Minneapolis; Tracy Barham, Cincinnati; Edward Hyman, Detroit, and Claude Lee, New York.

Paramount Books "Syracuse"

"The Boys from Syracuse," Universal production, is scheduled to open at the Paramount theatre in New York on July 31st. This will be the first time in three and a half years that a film other than a Paramount picture will play that theatre. The film's premiere will be in Syracuse Thursday.

Loew's Declare Dividend

Loew's Inc., has declared a dividend of $1.62½ per share on the $6.50 cumulative preferred stock, payable August 15th to stockholders of record on July 29th.

Skouras and RKO Pool Seven Cocalis Houses

Seven Cocalis houses in the Bronx, N. Y., Wednesday, July 3rd, were acquired by RKO and Skouras Theatres in a pooling arrangement. Of the seven, RKO will operate the Pelham, Castle Hill and Marble Hill, and Skouras will operate the Ward, Square, Pilgrim and Interboro.

The other four Cocalis houses in the Bronx, the Rosedale, York, Allerton and Beach, will remain Cocalis operations, at least temporarily.

Operators' Local 306 will supplant Empire State Operators Union at the seven theatres passing from Cocalis. Although all 33 operators employed at the Cocalis houses have been admitted to 306, they will lose their jobs because of a ruling that projectionists employed by a major circuit must be members for at least two years.

At the remaining four Cocalis theatres, the circuit will terminate its present Empire State contract and enter into one with 306. In this case, however, the present operators will continue on their jobs but will change union affiliation.

Brandt Forms Another Company

Triumph Pictures, Inc., a California-chartered company whose officers and proponents are Harry Brandt, New York exhibitor leader and president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, and Nat Wachsberger, distributor of foreign films, in America, was formed this week, to produce four features a year.

The company has actress Luise Rainer under contract for three pictures.

Financing will be done by the partners. Mr. Brandt is president of the company; Mr. Wachsberger is vice-president.

Smith Returning to U. S.

Harold Smith, European representative of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, is scheduled to return to New York on the liner Manhattan which is due this week. Mr. Smith's former headquarters were in Paris.

Steffes Absent as Allied Unit Meets

With approximately 100 independent theatre owners in attendance, Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest gathered in Minneapolis Wednesday in special session at the Nicollet hotel to formulate policies and plan a form of organization for the unit which is now without the guiding hand of W. A. Steffes, who has asked for a six months' leave of absence. For the first time since Allied was organized, Mr. Steffes was absent, regaining his health after a severe heart attack, at his lake farm near Aitkin, Minn.

Directors Chosen

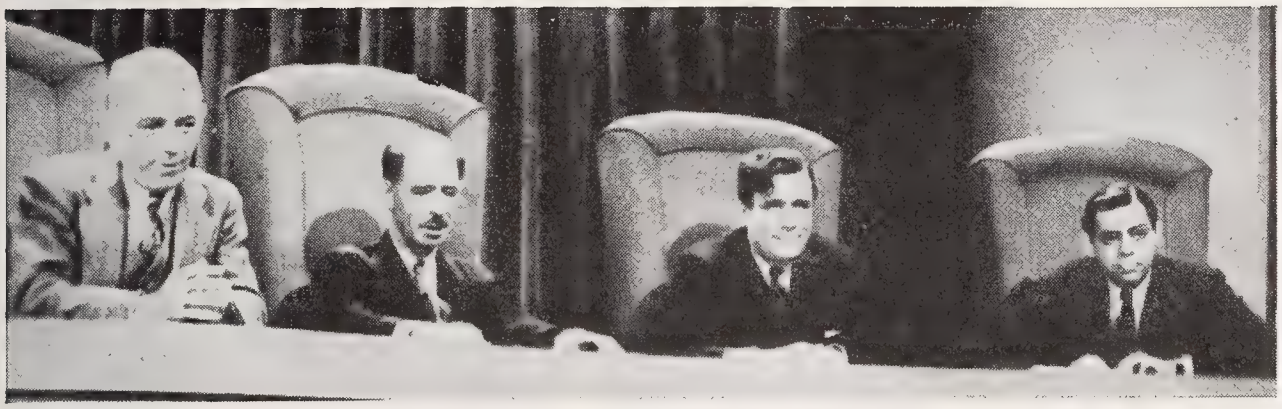
The first order of business was the ratification by the convention of a nine district organization, proposed by the Board of Directors. Directors chosen were Clarence Kaake, Duluth; C. H. Danielson, Mabel; Andy Anderson, Detroit Lakes; William Glaser, Faribault; R. G. Risch, Appleton; Don Buckley, Redwood Falls; E. L. Peasle, Stillwater; Sol Lebedoff, Minneapolis and Hiller Hoffman, St. Paul.

Their initial job was to elect a permanent secretary, with Ben Ashe, present acting secretary, slated for the job, although the names of Sol Lebedoff, Minneapolis exhibitor, and Charles Weiner, formerly Monogram head in Minneapolis, were in the running. A president and other officers were also to be chosen.

The principal address of the meeting was by Henderson M. Richey, exhibitor contact for RKO. Mr. Richey told the exhibitors that with 30 per cent loss in business due to war in Europe, producers would go bankrupt unless theatre men again proved they had talent for showmanship. He said picture quality varied very little from year to year, and that films could be sold to the public if theatre owners really adopted proper exploitation.

He pointed out that George Schaefer of RKO had contributed greatly to motion picture progress by employing the Gallup organization to make a scientific study to determine what the public wants in pictures and said this same scientific approach to other exhibitor problems would go a long way toward solving present difficulties. Mr. Richey contended that clearance problems, arbitration, block booking, double features, other problems could be solved through the scientific approach.

Mr. Ashe proposed that the organization back a law applying the defense tax to bowling alleys. Other matters discussed at the convention were percentage pictures, to which Allied generally speaking is opposed; block booking, double features, the 16mm. film problem, and a demand for a 25 to 33 1-3 per cent reduction in the film rentals. There was some discussion of a buying pool.



Radio Pickup Ban Lifted

The American Federation of Musicians on Tuesday removed the ban against the remote pickup of dance bands from restaurants, night clubs and hotels affecting the National Broadcasting Company. KSTP, St. Paul, NBC affiliate, settled the strike with the musicians local. A ban was still in force against Columbia Broadcasting System and Mutual because an agreement had not been reached with WRVA, Richmond, musicians.

NEW COMPETITION SEEN IN 'ONE-NIGHT STANDS'

Four Groups Push Plans for Stage and "Little Theatre" Summer Touring Units

Exhibitors in several hundred cities and towns will have competition from stage roadshow units on one or more nights a week this fall and winter, if plans already annnounced materialize. Plans of the three groups, the American Theatre Society, the American National Theatre and Academy and CBS' Artists' Service, have been published. The National Playgoers Guild also has announced a similar scheme.

See Benefits to Films

An intensive effort will be made this season to bring hit stage productions to communities which have had no professional stage plays. Success of these plans would bring some competition to motion pictures in those towns but sponsors pointed out that a revival of the stage, in the long run, would benefit films by providing story material, personalities and an appreciative audience. One "streamlined" roadshow plan is being offered this year as an aid to films, a substitute for the second feature on a double bill. The story was published on page 28 of the June 8th issue of Motion Picture Herald.

The American National Theatre and Academy, headed by Robert E. Sherwood and Brooks Atkinson, secretary, has submitted a plan for a "People's Theatre" to some 1,200 "Little Theatre" groups in as many communities. The organization of local units is proposed and the plan outlined provided for five productions the first season and admission prices from 25 cents to $1.50, as detailed in the Herald of May 4th.

The American Theatre Society, Warren P. Munsell, business manager, has announced four plays for the fall season on a guarantee or local sponsorship basis.

CBS To Enter Field

The Columbia Broadcasting System's Artists' Service, Ralph F. Colin, general manager, for several years has been considering roadshow play units for the 360 communities where its artists give concerts. If local cooperation can be obtained the plan will be put into effect.

The most recent organization to be added to the list of organizations attempting to develop the stage theatre business in the field is the National Playgoers Guild, which is a play booking organization rather than a producing company. It is headed by Hal Olver.

The National Playgoers Guild will arrange bookings on four plays on a flat guarantee basis. The Guild will receive a stipulated sum for a given performance and additional gross will go to the local organization which sponsors the play.

A national survey of available facilities and interest in plays has been made by the Guild, according to Fred Foley. It was reported that many small communities have theatres or school halls "that would put Broadway theatres to shame" and that there was found keen interest in legitimate productions.

The National Playgoers Guild, according to its plan, will offer four plays for bookings in the first season.

The schedule includes "Missouri Legend," a story about Jesse James, produced on Broadway two seasons ago; "Words With Music," a musical; "Outward Bound" and "The Second Man," originally produced in 1927. It was reported that more than half of the 60 towns, necessary to provide a four months' season, have signed for the plays.

Mr. Ford of the Guild said that requests for details have been received from all over the country.

The Theatre Guild has protested against the use of the word "guild" in the title of the Playgoers Guild but Hal Olver held that the use of the term could not be restricted.

Equity has announced that more than 40 summer stock theatres, mostly in competition with motion picture theatres, are operating this season under its rules. A large number of other summer theatres do not subscribe to Equity contracts. It was reported that if conditions are profitable for summer stage plays the number of stock theatres will double within a few weeks.

It was said the organization would not go into California; no other information on territories was given.

Ricketson Interested

Frank H. Ricketson, Jr., of the Fox Intermountain Theatres, Inc., was reported to be interested in the plan, believing that the existing film theatres should sponsor the plays rather than allow local organizations to compete with the theatre, it was said.

Two men have been on the road for some time making arrangements for the Guild play bookings and two additional field men were sent out by the organization on Monday. The plays, according to the plan, will play some towns for one night and others for two. Top admission price will be $2.20.

Last season the Legitimate Theatre Corporation tried to bring plays to smaller cities and towns but it was reported that the venture was not successful. Percentage bookings for the plays have been found to be unsatisfactory but a local sponsorship or guarantee basis made a profit for the company.

A legitimate play season of 10 weeks with a number of film players in leading roles has been announced for the Chapel Playhouse at Guilford, Conn. Pauline Lord has already appeared there in "The Late Christopher Bean." Others scheduled to appear during the season include Lili Damita, Ruth Chatterton, Gloria Stuart, Frankie Thomas, Ann Corio, Laurette Taylor, Constance Collier, Tonio Selwart, John Beal and Beverly Roberts.

Saenger, Metropolitan Circuits Report Profits

Saenger Theatres Corporation, operating theatres in the south, has reported net income of $758,822 for 1939, against $667,140 for 1938, according to figures filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Metropolitan Playhouse, Inc., New York City circuit this week reported a net profit of $29,976 for the year ended January 31st, compared with a net loss of $50,900 the year before.

RKO Louisville Bookings

RKO has booked its 1940-41 features and shorts into the Strand and Rialto Theatres, in Louisville, Kentucky, for first run, Ned Depinet, the company's vice-president in charge of sales, announced over the weekend. Fred Dolle and Charles Krebbs of the Fourth Avenue Amusement Company represented the circuit, in the negotiations.

FROM READERS

To the Editor of the Herald:

The past week in the Springfield Theatres, Mr. Phil Chakeres has instituted a drive for American Red Cross Funds.

This drive was organized on the same basis as the Will Rogers collections, with a special American Red Cross trailer and a trailer of our own joined together, asking for contributions from the audience to their local American Red Cross chapter. This has certainly met with hearty approval of all the local citizens in the response that we received through contributions and the various newspaper articles was certainly very gratifying.

I believe this policy should be followed by every theatre in the United States today. I know that the readers of your publication will be interested to know that each one can do his part by helping the American Red Cross.—M. H. Chakeres, Chakeres Warners Theatres, Springfield, Ohio.

JOINS PROTEST ON "GYPSIES"

To the Editor of the Herald:

I want to thank you for the article in the May 25th Herald listing the names of film companies selling or renting film to "Jack Rabbit" exhibitors for free shows. I operate a show in a small town in the "dust bowl" where we have not raised a good crop for years and for the last two summers have had to compete with a free show twice a week in adjoining towns. People will drive miles to see a free show and some of them are quite late releases.

These gypsy shows are given in small towns near here each week. They are given outdoors, using the side of a building for a screen. I understand the business firms contribute a certain amount each week and people go from miles around.

It seems very unjust for the producers to rent or sell these films to gypsy exhibitors, as a free show is always detrimental to the theatres. They charge us a high film rental and also set the minimum admission price. If they would sell the year-old film to exhibitors at a reasonable price and allow us to charge five and ten cents admission it would help us to put over a show for those who cannot pay the higher prices, yet enjoy the better type of picture.

I wish every exhibitor in the United States would sign an agreement not to buy any product from film companies who sell 16mm film for free shows. I am keeping the list of films published and when the salesmen call I shall certainly refer them to this list.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan.

Beier, former branch manager of Preferred Pictures in Philadelphia, for his newly organized Independent Ace Film Exchange, Inc., in Philadelphia. PENNSYLVANIA, MISSOURI PLAGUED BY 16mm 'GYPSY SHOW' COMPETITION

Kansas Exhibitors Estimate 'Jack Rabbit' Circuits Have Doubled; Censor Board Involved in Philadelphia Fight

Theatre owners in many small Pennsylvania cities and towns are quite concerned over growing itinerant 16mm film competition, and from Kansas and Missouri comes word of an equally serious nature—all of which follows the report in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on May 25th that a greater number than ever of itinerant showmen, using 16mm motion pictures for the most part, had taken to the roads for this season, like the gypsies in annual migration.

In 425 Towns

It is estimated that in five years the number of "Jack Rabbit" circuits in the Kansas City territory of Kansas-Missouri has doubled, and that today three-fourths of them are using 16mm film.

Serving some 425 towns in the area, these portable outfits represent a strong competitive factor. Added to it are a growing number of schools equipped with 16mm. projection; some dozen new municipal auditoriums built with WPA Government funds in the past three years, and CCC camps.

Some exhibitors have protested to film companies, and there has been some, but not much, effort to have the subject taken up vigorously by exhibitor organizations—without result, so far.

One CCC camp played a picture before the nearby exhibitor (in Kansas) with a $30,000 investment played it. The exhibitor protested to the distributor and, it is understood, secured an adjustment. Another exhibitor, in Missouri, was advertising a picture in his calendar for mid-July at 25 cents; a portable operator played it in a nearby small town at the end of June for 15 cents.

There has been a considerable tendency evident in the last year or two to shorten the time between regular release and release via 16mm on feature pictures.

Another basis of complaint of exhibitors is the merchants' free shows during the summer months. This practice is widespread, and many of the portable operators give such showings. For exhibitors within a 10 to 20-mile radius the results are disastrous on those nights.

Pennsylvania Troubles

Any attempt on the part of organized or unorganized exhibitors to depend on the Pennsylvania State Board of Motion Picture Censors in an effort to curb the exhibition of 16mm films in that State will make little impression upon the Board, according to Mrs. Edna R. Carroll, chairman of the Board.

During the past week, Vine Street in Philadelphia, motion picture row, has been buzzing with reports of a survey made by members of the film industry which is reported to have showed that 16mm films were being exhibited by itinerants throughout the eastern part of Pennsylvania in violation of the law in that practically all of such films were being shown without first being reviewed by the Board and without a State seal, thus evading the $2 per reel State tax.

The reported survey, said to have been made by a film delivery concern, on assignment, pointed out that while there was no 16mm situation in Philadelphia proper, suspecting only that such shows are held only at 2601 Parkway, a new mid-town apartment house project, the competition is acute outside of the city. Such shows mushroom at night clubs, outdoor amusement parks and at drive-in open-air theatres in the up-state areas.

Mrs. Carroll appeared very much surprised when these allegations of non-censored films were called to her attention and emphatically denied that such a situation existed.

"The distributors here of 16mm films are in complete cooperation with the Censor Board," she said, "and all their product passes through the Board as soon as they receive it from New York.

"It is not unusual to find violations during the Summer season," she added, "when the demand is greatest for such films. However, the legitimate exhibitor in a territory is usually the first one to report any such violation to us. Thus far this season, no such violations have been called to our attention. Exhibitors know that we are only too happy to cooperate with them when such violations exist. The law specifically provides that the showing of a film without a State seal is in violation of the law."

Fined $25 to $50

Violators, she explained, are tried before a local magistrate in the particular town where the film is exhibited, and the fines usually range from $25 to $50.

Mrs. Carroll added that since last Summer, when such violations were wholesale, exhibitors cooperated with the Board in reported instances and that now the exhibition of 16mm is in control, insofar as censor registration is concerned. While there might be still some "bootlegging" of 16mm films, Mrs. Carroll added, they are mostly "radical" films for showing before "radical" groups, and such instances have been uncovered by Censor Board investigators and curbed.

Regardless, "regular" exhibitors are disturbed over the growing competion from 16mm films, but this is no concern of the State Board, said Mrs. Carroll, who was emphatic that the Board would take no part in any movement to curb the exhibition of 16mm films in the State, other than where it concerns a violation of the law. And even in those cases, she added, the "crusade" last Summer disclosed that 16mm exhibitors were "only ignorant of the law" and there was no willful purpose, for the most part, to violate the law.

The survey purportedly made by the film industry in Pennsylvania not only contained a proposal to curb 16mm exhibition through the offices of the Censor Board, but also included a plan for the control of nickel-in-the-slot movies, although such machines have not as yet been introduced here.

The proposed plan of Allied States to curb 16mm films drew no comment from Sidney Samuelson, business manager of Allied in the eastern Pennsylvania territory and member of the national organization's 16mm committee.

About 15 circuits of free shows, five towns in each one, are in operation in Nebraska using 16mm film. Regular exhibitors have argued against them for some time, even to the point of seeking regulatory legislation, but legislators refused to pass it claiming the free show was a strong business puller in small towns for merchants and it would be political suicide to stop them.

Theatre competition from 16mm films exists in the Cincinnati territory, but not to a particularly alarming extent as yet. There is, however, occasional evidence of increases in the number and frequency of showings which are sponsored largely by religious and charitable groups, fraternal and civic bodies, and, in some instances, by private enterprises.

Showings are not, for the most part, on a regular schedule, but sporadic, and admission, if charged at all, usually is very low, or audience gratuities in lieu of admissions often are invoked, with proceeds diverted to a religious or similar cause.

"There isn't much we can do about it now," is the gist of exhibitor opinion, "unless we attack the issue at its source by discouraging distribution or agitating legislation on the ground that 16mm exhibitors be compelled to pay a license and be subject to the same regulations as a theatre operator."

Sixteen millimeter films are creating no problem in the Southwest, exhibitors there declare.

"We have made a careful check," said Robert O'Donnell of Interstate Circuit. "There is practically no use of this class of product in our territory save in a few instances where park shows are being given free with an advertising angle."

R. I. Payne, of R. E. Griffith Theatres, reported no trouble in their towns with 16mm.

No 16mm films have invaded Spokane or adjacent territory, according to leading exhibitors. There are some portable 35mm machines being used in the small towns, however.

The showing of 16mm films has proved no bother so far to exhibitors in the Birmingham, Ala. territory. Apparently the exhibitors have been able to control the situation or else there has been no demand for the old films. Exhibitors agree that these films could be a nuisance if shown to any extent.

There is no marked objection to the use of 16mm in the Western New York area, according to exhibitors.

Convicted for Stolen Prints

Two convictions in the Chicago territory have been obtained by the Copyright Protection Bureau for traffic in stolen prints, Jack H. Levin, director of the bureau, revealed Monday in New York. A. J. Calderara, an independent distributor, and Walter Johnson, former employe at the Public Theatre, Chicago, pleaded guilty respectively to charges of receiving stolen property and acting as accessory. Both received suspended sentences but Johnson was placed on probation for six months and Calderara for three.

The bureau picked up a stolen print of Universal's "Sutter's Gold" last October in New York City. It was traced to Rochester and then to Calderara in Chicago. Johnson admitted that he stole the print from the Public theatre and after keeping it under cover for three years, disposed of it to Calderara, according to Levin.

A criminal conviction in Chicago for violation of the Federal Copyright Law was obtained less than a year ago.

SCHOOLS TO GET MPPDA FILM

"Land of Liberty," the feature picture assembled by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America and shown at the New York World's Fair last year and again this year will be placed at the disposal of American schools without charge at the close of the Fair in October.

SHELL OIL AND CHESTERFIELD USING SHOWS TO SELL THEIR PRODUCTS

Canadian Film Society Tied With Petroleum Company in Booking Plan; Cigarette Radio Orchestra Touring in West

Two more national advertisers are going to try 'road shows' to help sell their products: Shell Oil, in Canada, and Chesterfield Cigarettes in the U. S., following other large concerns which variously down through the years tried such projects with unsatisfactory results.

Specifically the Chesterfield plan, of sending out road units to play in competition with regular established theatres, has been tried the most by national manufacturers. In most instances the vociferous complaints of theatre owners forced abandonment.

Exhibitors in the midwest particularly face additional competition this summer from free Chesterfield broadcasts. The cigarette company will route Glenn Miller and his orchestral unit in local theatres or auditoriums.

Mr. Miller is being booked by the sponsors themselves, Liggett and Myers, which in itself is unusual. Most road tours are booked through agents.

In all cases the public will be admitted without charge. The tour started in Cincinnati June 18th, where the troupe stayed three days. The show has also played Detroit, Lincoln, Neb., Omaha, and Des Moines so far. Mr. Miller will be in and around Chicago for the next three weeks, returning then to New York.

In most instances, the shows are on Miller's regular broadcasts. The bookings are in addition to the dates made for him by General Amusement Corporation, which handles the regular Miller bookings at clubs, dance halls and other places. In some places the Chesterfield bookings will clash with the General Amusement dates.

Shell in Canada

In a big drive to enlist support of parents and teachers for the education-by-films movement, the National Film Society of Canada has tied in with the Home and School Association of Ontario, to plan a series of shows with the aid of Shell Oil. Applications for such showings are said to have come pouring in to the NFS, and present expectations are that audiences throughout Ontario alone will total 30,000.

The Society has arranged with Shell Oil Company of Canada to sponsor the showings, providing projectors and projectionists. The non-theatrical exhibitions appear to have possibilities of competition for regular established movie houses.

Reports from the NFS claim that films for such campaigns are steadily becoming more available. The Society's film library, operating seven branches throughout Canada, has 128 films in stock. During the past season 1,341 reels have been circulated reaching an estimated audience of 180,000. One result has been to encourage many Canadian schools to establish their own film libraries.

Evaluations of films has also been attended to by the Society by the setting up of evaluating committees in Vancouver, Regina, Toronto, Ottawa and Halifax, to concentrate on Canadian produced documentaries.

In their drive for more educational films the Society has urged commercial firms throughout Canada to produce advertising films, "for purposes of goodwill," such products to be viewed by the evaluation committees to assure their worth and appeal to schools and educational groups. The hope is that a situation can be developed such as in England where private industry spends an estimated $1,000,000 a year on educational films. These are usually technical films dealing with the manufacture or use of the products marketed by the private interests; they contain no advertising as such except a credit title acknowledging the firm which produced the film.

In England the 'documentary' film field is top-heavy with private productions, big business having considerably more money available in advertising allotments than the government has to spend on such products. Such films often make a break into the film market that proves profitable to the producer-advertiser; for instance, "The Londoners," a 'documentary' dealing with the life of the average Londoner, produced by Great Britain's gas industries, played 40 large houses in London alone before going the complete circuit of England and Scotland.

It is on this basis that the National Film Society hopes to get 'documentaries' established in Canada.

To Exchange Cultural Films

Documentary film work in Canada got another foothold when it was announced in a recent issue of Food For Thought, the publication of the Canadian Association For Adult Education, that the National Film Society of Canada would act as Canadian representatives for the International Film Center, New York. Purpose of the deal, it was pointed out, is to stimulate the exchange of cultural films between the two countries.

The International Film Center has forwarded four documentaries to Canada: "Recovery Road," "The Disinherited," "School," and "Design for Education," dealing with child welfare and progressive education subjects.

Importations Restricted

Importation of documentary films into Canada from the United States has been very restricted up to now since the U. S. Government had no unit set up under the International Convention of the League of Nations to certify educational films so they could be imported free of duty. Hence the only group in Canada legally able to bring such pictures in duty-free was the Department of Education.

Though no mention has been made yet, it is believed many of the documentaries now being turned out by the National Film Board of the Canadian Government will be shipped into the U. S. on an exchange basis.

Announcement has come, too, from the Canadian Legion that films will be used this coming fall in their proposed educational program for members of Canada's armed forces. Several documentaries have already been shown the soldiers, among them "North Sea," "Come to Paris" and "The City."

SPONSORED FILMS GAIN CIRCULATION

The technique of breaking down exhibitor resistance to advertising on the screen by making sponsored pictures with a minimum of direct selling and offering them to motion picture theatres as product with intrinsic entertainment value has been exemplified in recent months by two subjects of widely varying content.

. . "The Middleton Family at World's Fair," six reel feature in color produced by the Westinghouse Manufacturing Company, has played in 1,300 theatres as a second feature since its release in December, according to Modern Talking Picture Service, Inc., distributors. An additional 550 theatres were booked through the use of a merchandising tie-up built around the donation of Westinghouse refrigerators to exhibitors for giveaways. Total circulation of the film to date, including non-theatrical, is put at 2,300,000.

The second example, also distributed by Modern Talking Picture, is "Your Town," single reel subject sponsored by the National Association of Manufacturers. This film was offered to selected exhibitors with the promise of exploitation help from the NAM member companies in their towns. This aid ranged from placing posters in the member company's plant to a plan under which the manufacturer reimbursed all or part of the admission price to those of his employees who attended the theatre during the showing of the short subject. The film has played more than 2,500 houses, including major and affiliated circuit theatres.

Now It's the Fire Department

More competition to the established motion picture theatre was seen this week in Southern New Jersey. Exhibitors there looked askance at the granting of permission by the Burlington City Council to the local fire department to show films at the city park.

Outdoor Screenings Menace

Latest summer competition to Eastern Pennsylvania exhibitors is the showing of motion pictures by outdoor amusement parks. Centers of this development are Allentown and Sunbury.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Studios Continuing

Despite the urgency of the war situation, and although the Board of Trade has yet taken no practical steps towards materializing its new legislation, British production continues at least no less actively than before the invasion of the Low Countries.

At least eight of the major studios have films on the floor at the moment of writing. They will probably continue so to do, unless it becomes physically impossible to make motion pictures.

Although major organizations like MGM have for the time being abandoned their production activity others have been pursuing an opposing policy. "Freedom Radio" is on the floor at Sound City for Columbia release. Product for 20th Century-Fox is scheduled by Gaumont-British-Gainsborough. William Sistrom is due here to materialize plans for RKO-Radio product.

Purely British organizations such as Grand-National and Anglo-American have films in production. The Pascal unit continues work at Denham and the finished product, together with a Crazy Gang comedy being made at Shepherds Bush, will be released by GFD.

The situation is likely to be assisted by the benevolent attitude which the Government is adopting towards the industry on the thesis that production, distribution and showing of films will swell the national revenue, and by a new impetus which is currently being given the Ministry of Information's film department.

Corfield Active For British National

A notable figure in the determination of British production to carry on is John Corfield of British National Films, who has announced a number of films for production, one of them in the immediate future.

Corfield and his fellow directors have decided that in spite of recent events British National are to continue production as heretofore. They have, claims Corfield, the benevolent approval of the Ministry of Information.

First of the new programme has been launched already and tentatively titled "This England," is an ambitious epic of the English countryside, a dramatic history of the land. It will trace the drama behind the rustic scene, from the Norman Conquest, through the Armada and the times of Napoleon, down to the imminent threats of 1940.

Directing this epic, which will probably be made in Technicolor, is David Macdonald, one of the most successful and imaginative of the younger band of British directors who, since he came here with Raoul Walsh, has gone from success to greater success. The leading stars will be Emlyn Williams and John Clements, who will appear throughout the story in the roles of respectively a "gentleman farmer" and a laborer.

Following "This England" David Macdonald will start work on the Walter Greenwood subject, "Love on the Dole." Other films on the British National roster include "Crooks' Tour" and "Old Mother Riley in Business."

"This England" is being made at the Rock Studios, Elstree.

The British National pictures will, of course, be release by the Anglo-American Film Company.

"Under Your Hat" Nears Completion

Likewise continuing production at full pressure are Grand National whose "Under Your Hat," Jack Hulbert-Cicely Courtneidge comedy, is now in closing stages of production at Worton Hall Studios.

Recent scenes have been shot upon a lavish set which would seem to imply that Jack Hulbert is determined that war or no war British films shall contain one of their most aged cliches, a giant cabaret, "La Poule," ostensibly in the South of France.

The publicity department of the production company, regarding this contribution to the screen, records also that the set was visited recently by fifteen French technicians who were evacuated by the BEF from Dunkirk, and that every night shooting is stopped so that Miss Courtneidge can turn on her radio and allow the staff to listen to the midnight news broadcast.

Crazy Gang Comedy Set

The war in its most jocular interpretation is the setting of the Crazy Gang comedy "Balloonatics," which has just been launched by Gainsborough at the Shepherds Bush Studios, with the resident Gainsborough impresarios Maurice Ostrer and Edward Black, producers, Marcel Varnel, director, and Val Guest and Marriott Edgar, scenarists.

The Crazy Gang—Messrs. Flanagan & Allen, Nervo & Knox, Naughton & Gold—are supported by the "artful ancient" of British films, Moore Marriott, who here plays the role of handy man of a German concentration camp, and who has a secret plan tattooed on his back.

"ERSATZ" PLASTER IS RIVER MUD

Down at Sound City, rustic film making resort in the Thames Valley, Anthony Asquith is directing Clive Brook and Diana Wynyard in "Freedom Radio," which Columbia will release in England and in the U. S. A. Latest technical achievement of the unit, and for which Paul Sherriff is personally responsible, is the using of mud from the river which runs through the grounds of Sound City as a substitute for the plaster which is not so easily come by in these days. Rather than go to the trouble of securing plaster at £10 a ton, Sherriff used twenty tons of river mud, dredging, molding and dressing it into its proper form. The total cost of the set was £10, being £170 less than it would have been had plaster been used.

Record of Evacuation To Be Made

Thorold Dickinson, whose most recent opus "Gaslight" has secured a critical and popular success in London's West End, has now gone to work on a film for the Ministry of Information. Together with the cutter, cameraman and several others who worked with him on "Gaslight," Dickinson has been producing a picture dealing with the evacuation of children to Somerset and Devon. It will be, says Dickinson, a "persuasive" record of evacuation aimed at those families who have not yet considered it necessary to get their children away from the dangerous areas.

Pascal Proceeding With "Barbara"

With location scenes from industrial Sheffield and rustic Devon in the can, Gabriel Pascal is now in full swing shooting "Major Barbara" on the floor of the Denham Studios.

Wendy Hiller in the title role, Robert Morley as Undershaft, Andrew Osborn, Emlyn Williams, Marie Lohr, Sybil Thorndike, Robert Newton, Walter Hudd, David Tree, are among those who are now hard at work under Gabriel Pascal's direction.

On the floor of one studio stage has been built a set, realistic in its sordidness, representing a derelict pub in the East End, converted for use as a Salvation Army shelter. Vincent Korda, art director of the company, has left out no detail; glass windows bear the name of the ex-pub, "The Surprise," and gospel messages of hope ornament the walls.

Crowd artists, in the part of souls either saved or about to be, Salvation Army officers with big drums and brass instruments, form the background of the Shavian dialogue spoken by Marie Ault as Rummy Mitchens, Emlyn Williams as Snobby Price, the out-of-work painter, and Sybil Thorndike, as the Salvation Army chief and who has modelled her make-up on the appearance of General Evangeline Booth.

Shaw has written special dialogue and scenes for Mog, the street girl, who was never seen in the original play, and for Todger Fairmile, the ex-pugilist who turns Salvation Army gospeller.

George Formby In Tenth Comedy

The tenth film to be made by British Box-Office Champion No. 1, "Spare a Copper," is in full swing at Ealing Studios under the directorial eye of John Paddy Carstairs. George Formby's role is that of a War Reserve policeman in the pre-War era.

A full size "Wall of Death," typical side show at London fair grounds, has been built in the studio for sequences to be shot for the film. Location shots have also been taken at a speedway in Essex. Formby, keen, enthusiastic motorist, himself plays in most of these sequences rather than use a double, and is currently practicing the control of a miniature car which has been built for him and which has a top speed of 35 miles per hour.

BRITISH POST 'OPEN FOR BUSINESS' SIGNS AS BOMBERS ROAR OVERHEAD

Exhibition and Other Trade Branches Gird for Emergency Operation; Preparations Made to Assume New Tax

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

The British exhibitor—and in the main his trade counterpart—is no less phlegmatic than the rest of his countrymen, and recent cataclysmic events on the European front have found him anything but scared. With war, in the form of massed bombings, already carried to these shores and the shadow of more bloody developments looming over the frontiers he is carrying on as usual.

No Theatres Closed

Despite the massed raids on Britain which have been carried out this week, first taste of the forthcoming Battle of England, not a single picture house has been closed, not an office or organization in Wardour Street which yesterday was open but is open today. Though there is no particular production boom, pictures—some half dozen or so—are on the stages of British studios.

Little indication can be given of how long this state of deliberate and calculated normalcy can continue. The more physical advent of warfare to Britain would certainly have a restrictive effect. In the face of imminent emergencies the industry meanwhile is oiling up its machinery.

While less than a dozen theatres, exclusively in protected or drastically evacuated areas have closed down since the war, it is not insignificant that a round half dozen new picture-houses have been opened since September, 1939.

Not the least helpful blessing for which the industry continues to wait is the proposed amendment to the existing Quota Act. Everything, it is believed, is now cut and dried. Agreement has long been reached with American interests. A formula for the Quota has been devised. First bricks were ready for the Credit Bank, which is now shelved. However, obviously because the Board of Trade has urgent things on its mind, the new legislation has remained in the icebox.

Recent changes at the Ministry of Information's Film Division, including the weeding out of certain bureaucratic growths and the grafting on to the main body of such practical trade personalities as Sidney Bernstein, indicate that action is at long last to supplant inertia.

Tax Increase Soon

On the exclusively financial terrain details are now being finalized of the machinery whereby the industry will, either in the form of the new purchase tax or in the shape of increased theatre tax, pay its share of the incrased revenue demanded by the State from its trades and industries. An unofficial estimate is that this will total five and a half million pounds, and that it will be delivered in the form of increased entertainment duty.

With the probability that in the near future the intensification of air raids will dislocate railways and roads, efforts are being made by exhibitors jointly to create machinery whereby films, current and up-to-date films, would be available for district distribution from local dumps.

Rationing of paper supplies has given both distributors and exhibitors a minor headache in regard to posters, a vital and much used vehicle of local advertising and publicity. There are restrictions on the size of posters and restrictions on where they may be posted. Now there has come a dose of legislative aspirin to help cure that trade headache in the shape of official approval of the use of the backs of posters as ground for new printing. Supplies exist, it is stated, for at least one and a half to two years.

In certain areas plans have been matured for the use of cinemas as shelters for air raid victims or homeless evacuees. In Salford, as instance, local picture house proprietors have arranged to leave the keys of their premises overnight with the police headquarters.

Already war has found its first victims in the exhibitor camp in picture houses on the East and South East coasts. Already these areas have suffered from evacuation. Holiday business is and will remain non-existent. Now much of the coast has been declared a protected area, closed to visitors and others who have not immediate and urgent business there. A conservative estimate is that exhibitors in these areas have dropped seventy-five percent of their normal trade.

London itself—and not Greater London, which is a different consideration—is feeling the strain of war conditions. West End business is non est and trade in the inner suburbs, is but a shadow of that in pre-war days. With a view to meeting the situation a move has been launched for setting up some scheme under which the affected exhibitors could get preferential terms from the renters. According to Theo Fligelstone, who launched the new move, the fifty and forty percents of the past are no longer economic. What is needed, says fellow campaigner Dobbin, is a sliding scale with an economic break figure. First step in the situation is the consideration of the problem by the London Executive with the probability of an approach to the renters for the setting up of machinery.

Meanwhile, on the national front the economic fight for lower film hire goes on. Local campaigns against the seventy percent "Wind" have been continued in the very few and far between areas where the Metro film has been screened. Posters have invoked the public not to pay more to see films than they have normally done. Trailers in local picture houses have told them that if they wait they will see "Wind" at the prices they pay for other films. In Southport, however, a campaign was not adopted because it was agreed that the 3s 6d-4s, 6d prices were so "ludicrous" that no campaign would be necessary.

It is believed that these local campaigns have had a definite effect on trade. Accountants' figures, it is claimed, reveal that a forty-fifty percent house is the best the Metro film has commanded in the few places where it has been shown. In one area officials of the Associated British Circuit who made a "deal" with Metro have protested against the funds of the CEA being used to finance campaigns against members of the Association.

"Hand-to-Mouth" Bookings

All over the country exhibitors despite that they are carrying on with surprising normalcy are taking the CEA advice seriously and booking from hand to mouth, refusing save in rare instances to pay the fifty or even forty percent they used to pay in pre-war days. It is true that in some reception areas picture houses are doing better today than they have ever done. In the towns whither civil servants and others have been evacuated in thousands there is an atmosphere of incessant prosperity which may balance the red-ink in the South and East Coast areas. In general, however, trade is down ten to twenty percent at least in the average district, thirty percent in others, and so on down a scale which is dependent on circumstances. It is the future, both immediate, and distant, which is uncertain, and which is preventing exhibitors making commitments they may not be able to meet.

Most concerned at the taxation prospects and the general indications of the situation are exhibitors in popular areas who depend upon the sixpennies and ninepennies for their livelihood. They are watching the purchase tax situation with a careful eye, conscious of the fact that any increase of admissions or theatre tax must be graded so as not to interfere with those prices which on authoritative figures produce the bulk of the trade's revenue, and some thirty-seven percent of the annual theatre tax total. There is a possibility that if prices are increased to bring in higher theatre taxes many ninepennies may be reduced to sixpence rather than, as would be needed, raised to a shilling.

With such problems the industry here concerns itself, facing a problematical future with complete calm. It was generally expected that any large scale bombings would mean an immediate order to cinemas to close. We have had more than two hundred bombers over England and Wales in the last two nights. Yet not a single cinemas but is open as usual. The industry hopes this is an augury.

BRITISH ANNOUNCE OPTIONAL QUOTAS

An order in council was to be issued this week by the British Board of Trade introducing the monetary quota as an alternative to the footage quota, either to be used at the option of the distributor. The adjustment will obviate the necessity for the introduction of a new Films Act.

Sir Andrew Duncan, president of the Board of Trade, addressing the Films Council on Monday, said the Government would introduce the monetary quota immediately. He expressed regret that war conditions made it impracticable to proceed with the proposed Film Credit Bank.

Exhibitors' representatives warned Sir Andrew that if a sufficient supply of films was not forthcoming they would later press for an appropriate reduction in quota percentages. The Board of Trade ruled that so-called Empire films may qualify for renters' quota credit, which removes a major obstacle to American production in the Dominions.

RKO Signs Hitchcock

Alfred Hitchcock, one of England's top directors, has been signed, by special arrangement with Selznick International, to direct two RKO Radio features. First of his assignments will be "Mr. and Mrs. Smith," starring Carole Lombard, followed by "Before the Fact."

Pride and Prejudice

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

The Bennet Family

The Victorians are here to stay. It is slightly over a year as the crow flies since Emily Bronte's "Wuthering Heights" was filmed. Now another of the famed Victorian novelists is represented—Jane Austen with her "Pride and Prejudice." In addition to similarity of origin and era a further common denominator of the two stories is that Laurence Olivier has the leading male role in this as he had in "Wuthering Heights."

Where the former was emotional melodrama, Jane Austen's story tells of the "Bennet" family with its five daughters, their misguided but well meaning mother and their endearing and understanding father. It is emotional but not melodramatic. It is especially a film of romance and secondarily a comedy of manners.

Leo, the Lion, has seen to it that the "Bennets" and the other Jane Austen characters have what is known as marquee distinction. The five daughters are played by Greer Garson, Maureen O'Sullivan, Ann Rutherford, Heather Angel and Marsha Hunt; the mother by Mary Boland, and the father by Edmund Gwenn, whose sensitive and understanding performance adds immeasurably to the film.

While the story is as Miss Austen penned it the actual screen play was based on the dramatization of her novel by Helen Jerome which was presented on Broadway in 1935 by Max Gordon. The script is the work of Aldous Huxley and Jane Murfin. Produced by Hunt Stromberg the film was directed by Robert Z. Leonard.

The setting is rural England and the dress is of course Victorian. "Mrs. Bennet" and the other matrons of the neighborhood spend most of their waking, and probably sleeping, moments in thinking of devices to get their daughters married to eligible young men, and "Mrs. Bennet" has five. Thus intense interest is aroused when "Bingley," of considerable wealth, his sister, an inbred snob, and a guest of theirs, "Darcy," of even more considerable wealth, establish themselves on a nearby estate.

Two romances start, the more important of which, that involving Miss Garson and Mr. Olivier, is the key to the whole film. Loving each other they defeat their own purposes, one by snobbishness, the other by pride until they have built up an almost insurmountable wall between them. That wall comes crashing down when kindness supplants snobbery.

The comedy, of which there is a-plenty, along with the sad, has a modern flavor.

Sporting Blood

(MGM)

Racing and Romance

Herewith a tale of horse racing and the people making up that sport; coupled with a modern dress version of the story of warring families whose son and daughter, respectively, fall in love.

Robert Young is seen as the son of a man who had run away with someone else's wife; Maureen O'Sullivan and Lynne Carver as the daughters of the man who'd lost his wife, Lewis Stone as the elderly horse fancier who'd been wronged, William Gargan as Young's trainer.

Reconciliation between the families is effected at last, through romance and marriage and a victorious horse race.

Based on an original story by Grace Morton, the story has as its element of suspense in the racing angle the breaking of a trait in a horse trained not to pass another on the track. Lawrence Hazard, Albert Mannheimer and Dorothy Yost wrote the screen play. Albert E. Levoy produced and S. Sylvan Simon directed.

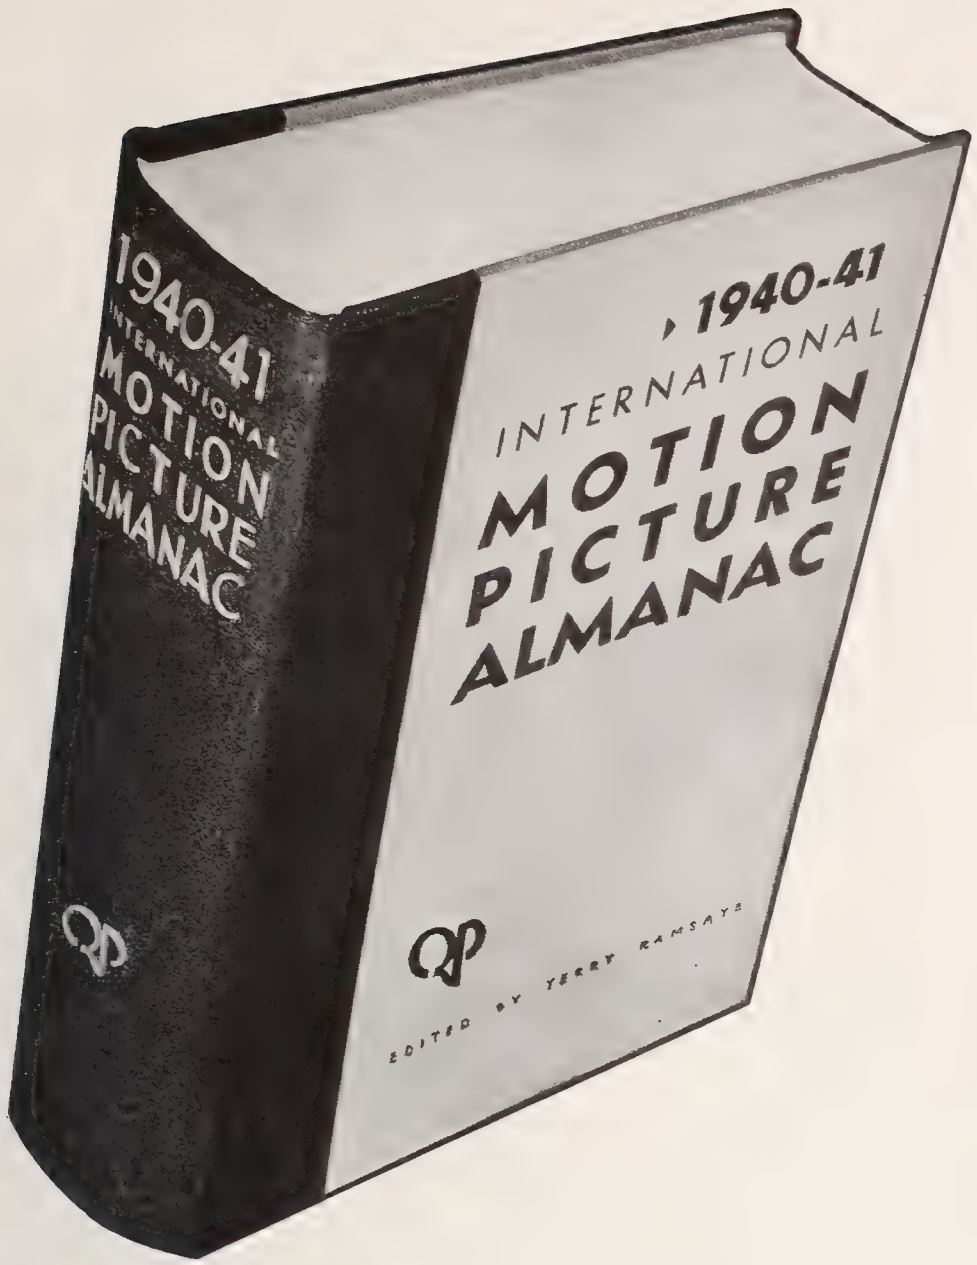
They Drive by Night

(Warner Brothers)



Melodrama

"They Drive by Night" is a fascinatingly wrought piece of cinema merchandise which combines rough and ready action with a refined adventure into insanity. It is a story of the trucking industry, of two brothers' fight for existence, of the desires of one man's wife for another woman's sweetheart. Told vigorously albeit bawdily in spots, the story received the uproarious approval of a Hollywood preview audience, which at times interrupted the picture with applause.

George Raft, Ann Sheridan, Ida Lupino, Humphrey Bogart, Gale Page, Alan Hale, Roscoe Karns, John Litel, George Tobias and Henry O'Neill comprise the cast, top honors of which were awarded by the audience to Miss Lupino who enacts the role of a woman crazed by her love for a man other than her husband.

One Man's Law

(Republic)

From the Western Standpoint

Don "Red" Barry almost single handedly steps forth in this mustang melodrama as defender of the underdog, being at the moment made miserable by an axis coalition of land grabbers. Justice, right and charity triumph over the opposition forces.

Don grins his way pleasantly through all his predicaments and displays an easy and natural talent for winning friends and influencing enemies. Janet Waldo offers looks and ability above the usual requirements for the superfluous "girl" element in these man and muscle presentations. Dub Taylor, as Barry's saddle companion, contributes some laugh moments. Associate producer-director George Sherman has run off the gallopings and fist fights in a smooth style, set from past experience with similar stagings. Camera craft work compliments the handsome western backgrounds.

"Jack," a nomadic adventurer, comes into "Trailcross" with a considerable reputation as a western strong arm man. The residents engage "Jack" as their front in meeting the inimical conduct of some townsfold in a nearby spot concerning the contemplated construction of a railroad through "Trailcross." To be worthy of such an honor, the town has to raise a sum of money to meet building costs. Through "fifth column work" on the part of one of the district leading citizens, who has real estate interests in the rival town, "Trailcross" is subject to periodic visits from neighborhood bad men. The subscription fund is stolen but following "one man's law," "Jack" regains the money and routs the rowdies.

Return of Wild Bill

Western

"Wild Bill Saunders'" return, to set the record straight, is a homecoming, a distasteful one as it turns out. For the peaceable man who lives up to the title of "Wild Bill" arrives at the family homestead a few moments after his "father" has been mortally wounded.

Another in the series starring Bill Elliott the film is on a par with previous "Wild Bill" episodes, having in its hour of story, plenty of action and the usual percentage of romance. Besides Elliott there are Iris Meredith, George Lloyd, Luana Walter and Frank La Rue among others.

"Wild Bill" returns at the urgent request of his father, who has been threatened by the "Kilgore" brothers who lead a gang that is terrorizing the ranchers. "Wild Bill" ferrets out the murderer of his father and with him out of the way proceeds to wipe out the rest of the gang, to be climaxed in a general gun battle.

Spies in the Air

(Film Alliance of U.S.)

Aeroplanes and Amours

This spy scare scenario from the English studios has been the recent object of court suit consideration and newspaper reporting when its American sponsors were forbidden the use of the title, "Fifth Column Squad," because of previous authorial claims. Whatever label the film displays showmen in the States, contemplating a screening, should be advised to be on the alert for customer complaints about sound-quality and production value.

Although primarily exploited as material conducive for war time and "fifth column" handling, the plot is just as importantly concerned with a triangle-marital arrangement. The usual formula is followed with the husband too busy with his charts to notice that his best test pilot has designs on the wife who in turn reciprocates the illicit advances as a welcome release from the boredom of her married life. When the "other man" is revealed as the spy who has been stealing the secret air plans and selling them to a foreign nation, the audience should not be too surprised.

Seen at an afternoon performance at the Rialto theatre, a New York City show shop catering to action addicted audiences, where a full house, mostly composed of male ticket buyers, was manifestly annoyed by the fogginess of the sound track. An explanation for the size of the gathering may be found in the fact that the program also featured showings of the Baer-Galento prize fight films.—J. F. C.

Murder in the Air

(Warner Brothers)

Spy Melodrama

Following the trend of pictures dealing with sabotage and espionage Warner Brothers' "Murder in the Air" parallels closely other films that have been made to reveal the activities of foreign spies and their dangers to this country.

Ronald Reagan returns as the Secret Service Agent assigned to uncover a ring of espionage operatives and Eddie Foy, Jr., continues as the faithful companion of Reagan and co-working government man. Lya Lys returns to the screen as a foreign spy with James Stephenson as head of the spy ring in this country.

Based on an original screen play by Raymond Schrock the story deals with an inertia projector—an intricate machine capable of stopping invading planes at a distance of four miles. Much of the picture's action and continuity arises from the attempts of the saboteurs and espionage agents to steal the plans from America and turn them over to belligerent countries.

Reagan as "Brass Bancroft" is able to join the spy ring, capture the leaders and their operatives, regain possession of the plans and save the government a valuable protective weapon. All with the aid of "Gabby," of course.

Reviewed at the Palace theatre in New York where the picture, sharing a double bill with "My Favorite Wife," played to a full house. The developments of the plot were watched with interest.—George Spires.

A Way in the Wilderness
(MGM)
Passing Parade and Pellagra

Inspirational material for this newest sermonette from the Passing Parade pulpit is concerned with the medical research work of Dr. Joseph Goldberger in his bout to discover the cause and cure of the plague diagnosed as pellagra. Dr. Goldberger's work began back in 1914 among the underprivileged classes of the south. After experimentation and research, conclusive proof of the connection between dietary deficiency and the dread disease was offered when Dr. Goldberger and his wife allowed themselves to be innoculated with the blood of a pellagra sufferer in order to scotch the theory that the illness came through germ sources. The picture is a preachment for good feeding for all classes and emphasizes the message that, despite the Goldberger discovery, pellagra is still rampant. The medical miniature is soberly presented and its honesty of presentation should deserve a respectful hearing from adult and school audiences.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Smith Quiz Specialty

The second round of what's the answer is presented under the wise crack tutoring of Pete Smith. The manner of the quizzing is along the style of his previous intelligence contest. First comes a bit of comic horseplay wired with the sound of the "Smithian" humorous patter, then the question is raised and finally after a modest interlude for brain racking the answer to the query is delivered. Audience participation is again solicited through the medium of score tabulation on the matter of correct replies. Test topics include matters about the Panama Canal, an article of infant wear called a "Gertrude," the white of an egg and my lady Godiva. Even if the audience is not composed of brain trusters, it should have an amazing time watching the introductory interludes for the queries and listening to Mr. Smith's patter. —Running time, 9 minutes.

Folks who have been bemoaning the closing of the pioneer enterprise days in the historical progress of this country should see this Color Parade rebuttal of such an opinion. For the subject goes on a hop to visit the pioneering work done in the Alaskan Manatuska Valley and offers evidence that the direction of such activity has shifted northwards. It will be remembered that in 1935 it was to this locale that some two hundred "Dust Bowl" families traveled to begin a new life. From crude, almost primitive, beginnings the settlers have raised a sturdy and profitable experiment in rehabilitation. From the evidences of rich crops farmed from the Alaskan soil and the cozy community life demonstrated in church, school and hospital facilities, the pioneer families would seem to have hit a rich strike in new life. Interesting, entertaining and especially inspiring in these dark, discouraged times is this excellent documentary miniature.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Porky's Baseball Broadcast
(Vitaphone)
Looney Tune Gag Fest

Similar in method and procedure to the madcap Merrie Melody, "Screwball Football," is this rendition of a Looney Tune baseball account. This time, in black and white, with Porky Pig behind the mike, a diamond contest is inspected. Typical of the business is the line about tickets for the game selling like hotcakes with a fadein showing such literal transaction. There are other gag situations strung out during the visit. The burlesqued game should bring the loudest guffaws from "batter up" fans. However, even the non sportive element should get a chuckle or two over the zany lines and sequences.—Running time, seven minutes.

Circus Today
(Vitaphone)
Merrie Melody Romp

Everyone is supposed to like a circus and, if such preference is true, any audience should like this cinematic carnival. The Merrie Melody excursion to the world of the big tent is done in the fashion of tongue in cheek treatment and the burlesqued handling of the circus acts and animal talent is delivered in a flippant, breezy style. Children in particular should relish the debunking in the broader business and the adults, too, on the higher levels.—Running time, seven minutes.

Governor Opens 'Maryland' for Fox

Governor Herbert R. O'Connor of Maryland, state and city officials and Baltimore society joined Hollywood stars headed by Tyrone Power, Annabella, Brenda Joyce and Nancy Kelly in the "world premiere" for Twentieth Century-Fox's "Maryland" at Baltimore, Wednesday night, at the New and Centre theatres.

Two-Day Party

The dual showings climaxed two days of intensive activity. When Brenda Joyce and Nancy Kelly arrived in Baltimore Tuesday noon they were greeted at the airport by Governor Herbert R. O'Connor and his staff. A program of welcome was broadcast over station WFBR, and the stars were whisked to City Hall to meet Mayor Howard Jackson. In the afternoon they met the newspapermen at the Lord Baltimore Hotel.

A highlight was a Paddock dinner held at Sagamore Farms, the Alfred G. Vanderbilt estate, near Baltimore. Baltimore society, state and city officials attended, and Governor O'Connor made Miss Joyce Honorary Governor of the state.

Tyrone Power and his wife, Annabella, made the trip down Chesapeake Bay with the other stars to Annapolis where all were guests at a luncheon at the Executive mansion. Upon the arrival of the Governor's yacht, "DuPont," at Annapolis Station WFBR broadcast a welcome.

At the premieres, the stars made personal appearances and the program was broadcast from the lobby of the New theatre over Station WFBR.

Twentieth Century-Fox officials who went to Baltimore included Herman Wobber, general manager of distribution; William Sussman, central division sales manager; Charles E. McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity; Rodney Bush, publicity and exploitation manager; and Earl Wingart, William Chambliss and Eddie Solomon of the publicity department. Larry Ginsberg of the coast publicity department accompanied the stars from Hollywood.

All arrangements were handled by Morris Mechanic, managing director of the New and Centre theatres and Charles McCarthy's publicity and advertising staff.

Following the premiere, Fox reported that the production will have 63 advance bookings in key cities. Openings were held Thursday in Albany, Kansas City, Los Angeles, Hartford, New London, Santa Barbara and El Paso. There will be 23 other pre-release dates, and the remainder of bookings fall on the national release date, July 19.

Hold World Premiere of "My Love" in Milwaukee

Warner Brothers "My Love Came Back" had its world premiere Thursday, July 4th, at the Warner theatre in Milwaukee to climax a two day celebration in that city featured by the appearance of Jeffrey Lynn, who co-stars with Olivia de Havilland.

With the addition of 63 dates over the weekend the film has been set for 258 prerelease engagements between now and July 20th, date of its national release.

A statement of Jack L. Warner, head of Warner production, personally endorsing "My Love Came Back," forms the basis of a cooperative advertising campaign in 75 cities in the United States and Canada. The advertisement, for which Warners will pay the full cost, will appear in local newspapers' news section, instead of amusement pages.

Now before the rehearsal cameras, the forthcoming Frank Capra picture, to be released through Warners and being made on that lot, is to be titled "Meet John Doe," representing three changes in title. The film was originally, and tentatively, called "The Life and Death of John Doe," then "The Life of John Doe."

Starring Gary Cooper and Barbara Stanwyck, the cast also includes Edward Arnold, Walter Brennan, James Gleason, Irving Bacon, Rod LaRocque, Ann Doran, Henry O'Neill, Granville Bates, Warren Hymer, Andrew Toombes, Pierre Watkin, Russell Simpson and Stanley Andrews.

Actual shooting was scheduled to start July 15th, with Mr. Capra producing and directing.

Monday the fund collection committee of Edward Mannix, Bert Allenberg, Carl C. Cooper and Edward Selzer met and formulated a program for the collection of emergency relief money.

Last week-end members of the executive committee met and heard from Norman Davis, head of the American Red Cross and Dr. A. H. Giannini, chairman of the Los Angeles divisional committee. The latter declared that the quota for the film industry "must be doubled."

Also held was a meeting to work out details for a cooperative campaign suggested by the Screen Actors' Guild, Screen Writers' Guild and Screen Directors' Guild.

Members of the industry committee organized to serve as a central authority are Mr. Goldwyn, Frank Capra, Mr. Allenberg, Fred Beetson, Walter Wanger, Ralph Morgan, Kenneth Thomson, Y. SHAKESPEARE IN HILLBILLY

Bob Burns, the Arkansas comic, has revealed his latest brain-child, follow-up to the Bazooka. This, however, calls for an audience—since it's to be a hillbilly version of "Romeo and Juliet."

Mr. Burns, when queried, said he might star in the stage production he contemplates—but as Mercutio rather than Romeo. And, further on the project, planned for New York's Broadway, he adds: "It's all about feudin', and our mountain folks of Tennessee and the Ozarks retain the customs and language of their Elizabethan ancestors of Shakespeare's time.

"The country has gone for streamlined 'Hamlet' and swing 'Mikado.' Now it's our turn to bring them hillbilly 'Romeo and Juliet.'"

Bugle Call

Immediate return to England of all British actors in Hollywood between the ages of 18 and 31 years was suggested this week by the British Embassy in Washington. Few top players are involved and an unknown number of lesser. The great majority of British actors and artists now in this country are above 31 years, the latest age at which men have been called to the colors.

It was indicated the suggestion was merely that and not an order and was made because of the many offers of service which have been received from Englishmen in the United States since France capitulated.

Offered to Serve

All Britishers returning to England will be utilized where their services can be used "in the most advantageous manner," it was said.

The call to arms was contained in a confidential release sent to newspaper correspondents, in which the Embassy said:

"Since the outbreak of the war, British actors, of both stage and screen, and others connected with the profession, resident in the United States, have repeatedly offered their services to the British Government and have sought advice from the Embassy as to the desirability of their return to the United Kingdom for service. Until recently, they have been advised to stay here, as there is no shortage of man-power in the United Kingdom.

"In view of recent conditions, however, British actors of all ages have again come forward with renewed offers of service; these offers have been considered according to age and qualifications, with a view to the utilization of their services, whether here or abroad, in the most advantageous manner. Broadly speaking, those between the ages of 18 and 31 years (the present 'military age' in England) should return as soon as they can make the necessary arrangements; those above this age should continue in their professions until they receive further instructions."

United Press reported from Hollywood that British movie actors who fall within the age classification of the British Embassy order include Richard Greene, Louis Hayward, Robert Coote, Bruce Lester, Hughie Green, Ian Fulton and Patric Knowles.

No well-known British actors now on Broadway are affected by the order. The Associated Press declared Laurence Olivier, 33, is over the age mentioned, as are other British stars now in New York. It is possible that a few of those affected are in Summer theatres scattered through the East.

They're now calling those outdoor, drive-in, auto movie shows "ozoners."

New York's Station WOR has quite a problem of international ethics on its hands. During one of his recent broadcasts, WOR's Ed Fitzgerald did a human interest story on the Subbis at the New York World's Fair.

Now, the Subbis, in case you don't remember, are a nomadic tribe of Irak, with certain customs.

According to strict tribal custom, a Subbi is not allowed to drink liquor of any sort. It is also taboo for Subbis to refuse a gift. (Incidentally, the Subbis have not gone to war in 5,000 years!)

The Subbis were so helpful to Ed Fitzgerald that he decided to give them some sort of present. Seeking to avoid a trite gift, he gave them a formal scroll with an order for a case of good vintage wine.

The staid old New York Times is actually going in for frivolity, for fun and frolic from Hollywood, reporting from the movie capital the movie story of how some producers are so fearful of ridicule that they go to extremes to avoid anything that may be spotted as a "movie boner."

For this the merchants receive "screen credits," whatever they are, also some publicity, for which, and the $20, they pledge to help in the dressing, makeup and other effects to transform local boys and girls into Hollywood glamour stars. Automobiles are loaned by a local agency and on the night of the "Hollywood Premiere" the young participants roll up in limousines to the front of the theatre, which is bathed in light from huge flood lamps. Camera bulbs boom as the "stars" walk to the lobby microphone and Gibbons introduces them to a breathless public. The deal is worked on percentage, as arranged by Gibbons.

HOLLYWOOD CASTING STRIKE ENDS; PRODUCERS, WRITERS SIGN CONTRACT

Central Office Employees Return to Work After Agreement with Casey; Short Term Pact Signed by Guild

After striking and picketing for more than three weeks, and largely crippling the routine hiring of extras, the 47 office workers of the Central Casting Corporation, in Hollywood, on Monday returned to work, assured that remaining differences between them and the producers would be adjusted. The walkout ended soon after the arrival on the Coast Friday, July 5th, of Pat Casey, producers' labor contact. The office workers, belonging to the American Federation of Labor Office Employees Local 20978, agreed to resume work if Mr. Casey would participate in all future negotiations.

Closed Shop Conceded

The producers had been reported willing to concede a closed shop, minimum wages, and other items except the union demand that the casting directors be included in its ranks.

The agreement to end the strike, pending negotiations, was reached between Mr. Casey and Mrs. Elma Goodwin, union business agent. It was said that, in addition, to the casting directors' issue, other points to be settled were seniority rights, casting directors' maximum hours, and restoration of a 10 per cent pay slash for some casting directors.

The strike was called after Howard Philbrick, general manager of the casting corporation, told representatives of the union seeking recognition, that they needed certification from the National Labor Relations Board, as the proper bargaining agency for the corporation's office workers. There followed this dictum a walkout of 47 out of 50 of the office employees; picketing of the corporations; and threats by the union that it might also picket studios which called extras directly.

Producers, Writers Agree

Meanwhile, last week occurred another salient Hollywood labor event: the agreement between the producers and the Screen Writers Guild on a short term contract, climaxing years of struggle by the guild for recognition, which it won some time ago, and then for a contract, the tentative agreement on which was reached last Tuesday.

Representatives of both sides issued a statement, reading: "This (short term contract) is subject to ratification by the boards of the several companies and by the Screen Writers Guild membership. The executive board of the guild announces that a date of a membership meeting of the guild will shortly be fixed, at which meeting details of the proposed agreement will be made public."

The shortness of the pact was regarded as a victory for the guild, the length of the proposed contracts being an issue during all the negotiations.

Petrillo Intervenes

James C. Petrillo, the new president of the American Federation of Musicians, on Friday, July 5th, intervened in the strike by the Philadelphia musicians' local, 77, against the Warner circuit there, a strike now in its eighth month. In Mr. Petrillo's first official act affecting motion picture theatres he met on Friday, with Frank Phelps, Warner labor contact, and with A. Rex Riccardi, secretary of the Philadelphia local, in the federation's New York home offices.

It was explained that the meeting was an opportunity for Mr. Petrillo to acquaint himself at first hand with the situation, and with the views of the Warner people. It was reported there would be further meetings, probably late this week.

$10,000 for Strike

The federation has donated $10,000 to help their local win the strike, which was brought to compel the Warner circuit to reemploy and maintain musicians in certain of its Philadelphia houses with stage shows. The general result of the strike to date has been the dropping of stage shows and music entirely from the Warner theatres in that city.

Mr. Petrillo's participation in the negotiations are the result of the local's request that he do so, and its resolution empowering him to act for it.

The federation, in convention in Indianapolis, last month, turned down a request from the local, for national aid in the form of a declaration that Warner Brothers was "unfair," and in the enlistment of all other unions, nationally in a strike against all of the Warner enterprises.

Bioff Stays in Jail

Willie Bioff, West Coast representative of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, and chairman of the Conference of American Federation of Labor Studio Unions, lost one more in a long procession of legal attempts to break out of jail, when his attorney, Walker Butler, was told on Friday, July 5th, in Chicago Criminal Court, that the facts he had presented did not warrant issuing a writ of habeas corpus for Bioff's release. Mr. Butler had cited cases to prove that reception of money from illegal enterprises was not a violation of the state laws.

Bioff is finishing a 1922 six-month jail sentence.

In St. Louis, trial of John P. "Big" Nick, deposed head of the city's projectionists' local, 143, and of Clyde Weston, its deposed business agent, will begin in that city's United States District Court on August 5th, before Judge Caskie Collet. The pair are charged with racketeering while heading the union.

Meanwhile, in that city, Local 143 this week completed transferring 75 operators in the de luxe theatres operated by Fanchon and Marco and the neighborhood houses owned by the St. Louis Amusement Company but also operated by Fanchon and Marco.

Other Labor Field Items

Independent exhibitors in Minneapolis are reported ready to ask the projectionists for wage concessions. They claim business is off some 25 per cent.

In Cleveland, the local projectionists' union has already turned down approaches for wage reductions, by independent exhibitors.

The National Labor Relations Board in Washington is examining files sent to it last week by Walter Spreckels, regional director of the board in Los Angeles. The files are on the jurisdictional tiff between the Motion Picture Painters Local 644, and the Scenic Artists Association. The board is to decide whether a collective bargaining agency election should be held.

Seeking Exchange Union

The AFL office workers' union in New York is reported endeavoring to unionize all exchanges and home offices in the territory.

The Artists Representatives Association, in New York, may become a national organization, to include Coast variety agents. The directors of the association were to meet in New York this week, on the matter.

Congressman Hits 'Red' Actors, They Demand Apology

Actors who had asked Government aid for their unemployed were answered on Monday by Congressman Wm. P. Lambertson, Republican from Kansas, who charged that Communists rule them; that they have had an opportunity to "clean house" since last Summer, but didn't use it; and that there would never be another Federal Theatre Project while "Red" rule lasted.

Apologies Demanded

His charge was inserted in the Congressional Record and carried by wire to the rest of the land, and immediately, there arose a clamor of counter charges and demands for apologies by some of the actors named as "Red."

Mr. Lambertson's tenor of comment was an echo of that which rang through Congressional halls last spring, and which ended the WPA project. Congressmen at the time stepped past the New Deal tendencies of some of the plays by the project, and plunged into the deeper implications of Communist propaganda indicated by certain other plays presented by the project, and, more, by the affiliations and expressed opinions of some of the directors and personnel.

Mr. Lambertson, in Monday's statement, said, "Deserving actors and actresses all over the country" were lacking, and would continue to lack, the benefits of a work relief unit such as the project, because the Communists had "taken over" key positions in the theatrical profession.

"Seven Communists" are on the governing council of Actors' Equity, Mr. Lambertson charged, naming Sam Jaffe, Phillip Loeb, Emily Marsh, Hiram S. Sherman, Leroy Maclean, Edith L. Van Cleve, and Alan Hewitt.

"Other key positions in the profession have been taken over by Communists," he continued. "George Heller is now executive secretary and treasurer of the Radio Actors Guild (sic). The new executive secretary of the American Guild of Variety Artists is Hoyt Haddock, a former C.I.O. organizer, of distinct Communist sympathies, whose appointment was protested by the American Federation of Labor."

Mr. Lambertson described Mr. Jaffe, of Actors Equity as an "avowed Communist"; cited his election to the unit's council "as recently as May 14th" in proof the actors were still as they were; and charged that Mr. Jaffe was elected "in preference to an outstanding American actress, Talullah Bankhead."

It seemed to the Congressmen that the voting power in the Equity was now "in the hands of Communists and fellow travelers in the New York City area."

Actors Reply

From their New York posts, the actors named by Mr. Lambertson issued denials of his charges.

For Actors Equity, Alfred Harding, editor of "Equity Magazine," replied that the seven persons called Communist by the Congressman had "neither by their speeches at Equity council meetings, nor by deeds outside of Equity activities" shown that they were Communists.

He then pointed out that, even if the seven were Communists, there were 48 non-Communist members on the Council; hence, the votes of the seven could not be presumed to govern the organization.

Messrs. Jaffe, Loeb, and Sherman jointly told the newspapers, "It would be a cinch to prove the Congressman guilty of hysteria and inaccuracy.

"The day that Congressman Lambertson has restored the Federal Theatre to full activity, we will resign from the council of Actors Equity," the statement from the three men said.

Alan Hewitt denied that he is, or had been, a Communist, and asserted Mr. Lambertson was "day-dreaming."

Bert Lytell, president of Equity, said Tuesday he would "welcome an investigation of Actors Equity." Th Equity Council on the same day adopted a resolution denying it was Communist.

Few Closings in Kansas City Area

Summer closings in the Kansas City area are fewer than in 10 years. This has been due not to good business but to cool weather, although theatre grosses would have been down further if the area had its normally hot summer. Receipts are off almost 25 per cent, and have been since early spring; yet prospects are better, since the wheat harvest in Kansas is greatly over expectation, and spending as the result of the defense program is expected eventually to aid general business conditions.

Less than ten theatres have been closed for the summer so far. Fox Midwest is closing half a dozen secondary houses, two of them as of July 13th, which is much later than usual for these and the others. In a few country towns matinees on five week days are being eliminated for the summer. H. J. Griffith Theatres, Inc., closed the Carlton, Manhattan, Kan., earlier this spring, but this was not a summer closing; no other closings are planned. Commonwealth Theatres are not closing any. Herman Lee has closed the Lee at Hillsboro, Kan., for July.

In Kansas City the Orpheum, RKO's first run, closed for the summer following roadshowing "All This, and Heaven Too."

NEW SEASON STORY SCHEDULES FULL, HOLLYWOOD BUYS 20 IN MONTH

Originals Lead June Purchases; Season's Total Spent for Plays Is $1,100,000; Five Books and One Serial Bought

Hollywood producers in June purchased only 20 stories for feature filming, a new low, compared with 43 acquisitions during June of last year. Of the 20 stories bought last month, 12 were originals, five were books, one a published magazine story, one radio script and one London stage play.

Many Titles Specified

One reason for the all-time low in story purchases at this new product-formulating period, is the great extent to which the studios this year specified titles and stories in advance, in their annual product announcements. Of 504 features promised for the 1940-41 motion picture season by the motion picture companies in recent weeks of sales conventions, 460 were pre-titled and pre-specified.

Usually, the companies "peg" only half their stories in advance, and assign stories later as the season progresses. Admitted need for certain studio and producing economies, as a result of the big drop in rental income from abroad, apparently caused the producers to go more into the story vaults that have millions of dollars worth of story material lying around—in some cases for years.

It was also announced during the past month by Sidney R. Fleisher, film negotiator for the Dramatists Guild, that film companies spent some $1,100,000 for 18 stage productions which played on Broadway during the 1939-40 season. This is compared to the $760,000 that film companies spent for 14 plays during the 1938-39 theatrical season.

Kaufman Play Unsettled

Also despite frequent reports that "The Man Who Came to Dinner" has been sold for motion picture production the Dramatists Guild spokesman denied that any such deal had been negotiated and it was said the producers of the play, George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart, were considering producing the film themselves.

Following in the trend of topical and timely subjects Twentieth Century-Fox has purchased the Leland Jamison magazine story "Attack" running serially in the Saturday Evening Post. The story concerns a hypothetical war against the United States and the preparations of the Navy and air force to meet any invading fleet. The studio has borrowed George Bruce from Edward Small to write the screen play.

Meanwhile capitalizing on the experiences of Madeleine Carroll and Robert Montgomery during the current war in Europe, Paramount has announced the purchase of an original story which recounts the plight of two prominent actors caught in a revolution in the Far East. Miss Carroll and Robert Preston will have the leading roles. The author is William H. Pine, production assistant to Cecil B. DeMille. The story has been titled "Gay Be Our Laughter" and Henry Hathaway is tentatively set to direct.

Stories purchased in June, with all available credits, follow:

ATTACK, a magazine serial recently appeared in Saturday Evening Post. The story was written by Leland Jamison and has been purchased by Twentieth Century-Fox.

BALLOON BUSTER, THE, an original story by Dudley Nichols concerning the first World War and the exploits of the American ace, Frank Luke. The story has been purchased from RKO Radio by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

The story is based on the life of Mrs. Edna Gladney of Fort Worth, Tex., who, as head of the Texas Children's Home and Aid Society, adopted more than two thousand children. Irving Asher will produce the picture.

Book Club Selections Transferred to Screen

The Book-of-the-Month Club this week said that four of its recent selections are to appear as motion pictures. The first will be "I Married Adventure," Osa Johnson's book, which Columbia will release soon. Warners have acquired "Captain Horatio Hornblower" and "Mr. Skeffington," and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will produce "Escape." Also scheduled for production by MGM is one of the Club's selections. "Madame Curie," "Gone With the Wind" and "Northwest Passage" were also selections.

"Pride" Book Promotion

An elaborate book promotion tieup has been arranged by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for "Pride and Prejudice," starring Greer Garson and Laurence Olivier. Five popular priced editions of the Jane Austen novel have been published which will probably form the basis for tie-ups with bookstores, public libraries, drug stores, newsdealers and book agencies.

MOVE ON TO PLACE 16mm SHOWS IN 250 DEPARTMENT STORES NATIONALLY

Building Equipment and Supply Companies Reported Pressing Idea for Store Auditoriums to Compete with Giveaways

A plan to create a free-show 16mm 'theatre circuit' in department stores throughout the country is being discussed in Trenton, N. J., with some important factors reportedly interested, including the Johns-Manville Company.

Apparently the sales idea being transmitted to the stores is the reputed losses suffered by the stores as a result of local theatres giving away dishes, pots and pans, refrigerators, electrical equipment and merchandise of all kinds, practically all of which is bought wholesale out of town by the exhibitors. Unknown numbers of local merchants and department stores have complained down through the years against the giveaway practice which, it has been said, unfairly makes inroads into their business.

Film Source Undetermined

The Homa-Sote Corporation, of Trenton, manufacturing building equipment, in cooperation with the Raymond Loewey Company, a New York decorating concern, are said to have plans in hand for the installation of the necessary equipment for showing 16mm films in the stores. Sources of film supply could not be determined—but it should be no easy matter to obtain films from the hundreds of sources outside the regular industry, if they cannot be obtained from the industry itself.

It is also learned that 200-seat auditoriums would be built in the department stores, at a reputed cost of $15,000 per unit. Johns-Manville Company, it is said, is interested in the material supply end of the proposition.

Favorable reaction is understood to have been received from many stores, which are said to have responded to the sponsors' citation of the merchandise giveaway practice in so many hundreds of theatres throughout the country.

Projectors Available

Sixteen millimeter sound projectors are numerous on the market, at least half a dozen large projector manufacturers of portable equipments being on the alert for developing new fields for their machines, even manufacturing special units according to any requested specifications.

Competitive potentialities of the project are obviously tremendous for theatres, scores of which depend to a considerable extent on "shoppers' matinees," which so many shopping-weary women attend before journeying homeward. It is reasonable to assume that many of those women shoppers would respond readily to a department store's standing invitation to be its guests, without charge, at a movie performance right on the premises. Also there is the matter of enticing women from neighborhoods with the free movie idea.

While most of the large motion picture producer-distributors do not circulate their releases in 16mm prints, there are some which do, as MOTION PICTURE HERALD pointed out May 25th (pages 15 and 16). Then there are many smaller companies which encourage non-theatrical business, and still numerous others which are on the so-called "fringe" of the regular film business. However, as stated, the big source of supply are the non-theatrical distributors of educational, documentary, entertainment and advertising reels. It seems logical to conclude that the department stores would be flooded with hundreds of reels from manufacturers of products being sold by the stores with no rentals for the films being required.

MOVIE-OF-THE-MONTH CLUB

Tri-States Theatres are using a Movie-of-the-Month Club giveaway plan in their two first-run theatres in Omaha, Neb. The plan was conceived by E. R. Cummings, Tri-States district manager in Omaha, and has been copyrighted.

Under the plan the patron buys a $2 booklet containing either five 40-cent (night) admissions or eight 25-cent (matinee) admissions. A free ticket in the book is good for admission to the Movie-of-the-Month, which is the regular bill at one of the two houses, but is designated by Tri-States officials as the Movie-of-the-Month.

Drop Auditorium Board

The Kansas City council has abolished the board of governors that has operated the Municipal Auditorium the past year, and will name a director who will be aided by an advisory board representing civic and business interests. The former governing board included no one from the entertainment field.

San Francisco Fair Competition

San Francisco exhibitors report decreased boxoffice receipts, especially in neighborhood houses, because of the Golden Gate Exposition, now in its second year there. The attendance for the first three weeks of the Fair was reported 10 per cent ahead of the same period last year.

Italian House in Detroit

An Italian language picture theatre is to be erected in Detroit this Fall by Paris Bucci.

VAUDEVILLE AND STAGE SHOW SEASONAL SLUMP

Dropped in Large Cities but Many Circuits, First Runs Plan Summer Bookings

Vaudeville, that once pervasive entertainment medium, on the future of which many show business prophets have lost their standings as prophets, this week, from a glance at certain key city situations, appears to display the usual variability.

In New York, Boston, Atlanta, Philadelphia, it is being curtailed, or dropped, or has been dropped, in many theatres, for the summer. In St. Louis, however, it has been revived successfully; in Rochester, it has been used in four Schine circuit houses; in Detroit, several theatres have been using it; it is in vogue among Chicago neighborhood houses; Wisconsin theatres are trying it, and, in Newark, at Proctors Theatre, vaudeville "came back" for the first time in three years.

In St. Louis stage shows with name bands have attracted crowds to the St. Louis and Fox theatres. Ted Lewis and troupe, playing the former, drew $12,000 in one week last month, at a 40 cent top admission. The usual gross is $2,600, with a top admission of 35 cents. Kay Kyser and his "College of Musical Knowledge," at the Fox, also last month, drew crowds over one block long, before daily openings; and they broke all existing house records, drawing 127,000 persons, who paid over $43,000. Following them, at the same theatre, Orrin Tucker and Bonnie Baker attracted $25,000 to the box-office. Others who appeared in the St. Louis vaudeville trend, were Lou Holtz and Ethel Shutta, at the St. Louis.

Four in Rochester

In Rochester, the four Schine houses trying vaudeville were the Riviera and State, with vaudeville on Friday nights; and the Monroe and Dixie theatres, using it on Saturday nights. All are neighborhood theatres.

A recent check of Chicago neighborhood theatres showed several using vaudeville on weekends, apparently as substitutes for the usual premiums, and other ideas. Among theatres in that city using vaudeville recently were the Warners' Ogden and Stratford theatres, the independent Alex Theatre, and the Balaban and Katz Congress.

The use by the Newark Proctors' Theatre of vaudeville took the form of "stage jamborees" on Mondays and Tuesdays.

In Wisconsin, the Fox circuit has been experimenting with the vaudeville medium, using the William Morris agency.

In Detroit, the Fox and Michigan theatres have tried vaudeville; also the Harper Theatre.

In New York, the Brandt circuit, though it has dropped its vaudeville for the summer season, is planning enlarged use of it for the fall, at the Flatbush, Brooklyn; the Windsor, Bronx; and the Carlton, Jamaica; and, perhaps, at more Brandt houses, and at other independent houses. William Brandt, operator of this type of entertainment for the Brandt circuit, is said to be visualizing the assurance to vaudeville artists of a large group of independent neighborhood houses, through which the artist or troupe could be assured of a ten week booking. A plan for such was formulated last year; but only partly fructified.

In Philadelphia, vaudeville's outlook is less hopeful, Warner theatres having dropped the medium; the Fays and Carmans theatres dropping it for the summer; and the Towers Theatre, in nearby Camden, New Jersey, cutting vaudeville to weekends.

In Atlanta, the Capitol Theatre is now employing vaudeville on weekends only.

In Boston, the Keith's ended vaudeville, temporarily, on May 26th.

Consolidated Shows $179,299 Net Profit

Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., and its subsidiaries, report a net profit for the quarter ended March 31st of this year of $179,299, after the usual deductions, but before the surtax on undistributed profits. It is equal to 45 cents a share on the 400,000 shares of preferred stock, at $2.

The figures quoted compare with $217,733, equal to three cents per share on 524,973 shares of common stock, for the March quarter of 1939, after dividend requirements.

Osa Johnson to Make Personal Appearances

Osa Johnson is booking personal appearances in connection with showing of her biographical picture, "I Married Adventure," covering adventures with her husband, the late Martin Johnson in years of exploration in tropic jungles. The picture is to be released by Columbia July 24th. The personal appearance tour is, however, being booked and managed, apart from the picture deals, by Clark H. Getts, who has been in charge of Johnson affairs since 1937 when the explorer lost his life in an airplane accident while on a lecture tour.

Mrs. Johnson has not appeared in picture houses since the accident.

Two Variety Club Gifts

Two Variety Club tents have donated financial gifts to aid underprivileged children and to help purchase school equipment. The Washington Variety Club presented a check of $200 to the Washington Council of Church Women to send underprivileged children to summer camp. Rudolph Berger, welfare chairman of the Variety Club presented the check to Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the Council. The Indianapolis Variety Club, tent No. 10, presented to the Indiana University medical center and the Indianapolis public school system substantial checks to launch the blood bank at the University and to help purchase equipment for a department of psychiatry for the schools.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

BLONDIE BRINGS UP BABY: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—Seemed to please a fair audience. Played June 22.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

DOCTOR TAKES A WIFE, THE: Loretta Young, Ray Milland, Gail Patrick—Here, gentlemen, is a swell show that is doing all right for us. We played it the best days of the week and can truthfully say that the audience just ate it up. A swell comedy. Running time, 88 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HIS GIRL FRIDAY: Cary Grant, Rosalind Russell, Ralph Bellamy—A real comedy which failed to draw paying business. Played June 19-20.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

OUTPOST OF THE MOUNTIES: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—Fair to fair business. Played June 15.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AND ONE WAS BEAUTIFUL: Jean Muir, Laraine Day, Billie Burke, Robert Cummings—Didn't do much on this. Running time, 70 minutes. Played June 12-13.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

BROADWAY SERENADE: Jeanette MacDonald, Lew Ayres, Frank Morgan, Ian Hunter—Inasmuch as musicals are not popular with our patrons, we did some extra business on this picture.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DR. KILDARE'S STRANGE CASE: Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres, Laraine Day—As good as any of this series yet made. Just a swell show that everyone liked. Good any day of the week. Running time, 77 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FLORIAN: Robert Young, Helen Gilbert—Excellent. Very beautiful horses and they are plenty smart. Running time, 93 minutes. Played June 16-17.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

FORTY LITTLE MOTHERS: Eddie Cantor, Rita Johnson, Bonita Granville, Judith Anderson, Baby Quantanilla—Good draw first night. Fifty per cent drop-off for second, on Bank Night, too. Baby good. Cantor fair. Reaction of audience fair. Running time, 87 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

FORTY LITTLE MOTHERS: Eddie Cantor, Rita Johnson, Bonita Granville, Judith Anderson, Baby Quintanilla—Fair picture; fair business. The baby stole the show. Running time, 90 minutes. Played June 25.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SUSAN AND GOD: Joan Crawford, Fredric March, Rita Quigley, Ruth Hussey, Bruce Cabot, John Carroll—Surprisingly good draw for a feature that was supposedly too citified for the farm trade. Nothing objectionable in this, nor will church groups protest, as some critics might lead you to believe. Will say, though, that this failed to please. Running time, 117 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

TWENTY MULE TEAM: Wallace Beery, Leo Carrillo, Anne Baxter, Marjorie Rambeau—Very good draw and pleased everyone. A fine show for small town and rural patronage. Running time, 85 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

WATERLOO BRIDGE: Robert Taylor, Vivien Leigh—Good picture but poor business. Has a tragic ending. Running time, 107 minutes. Played June 26-27.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WOMEN, THE: Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Rosalind Russell, Paulette Goddard, Mary Boland, Joan Fontaine, Virginia Weidler—This picture was not so good for our patronage and they had to sit there and take it (poor fellows). Some very good acting but the comments were "who were the men?" Running time, 134 minutes. Played June 29.—F. G. Mills, Director of Motion Pictures, Prison Theatre, Forida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

YOUNG TOM EDISON: Mickey Rooney, Fay Bainter, Virginia Weidler, George Bancroft—Swell picture and to excellent business. Running time, 85 minutes.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash Loggers and mill workers patronage.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

BISCUIT EATER, THE: Billy Lee, Cordell Hickman—I consider this one of the most natural pictures I have had anything to do with and it drew heavy in all my situations, beating "Swanee River." Lots of people said it was the best picture I have shown in five years. Having been made in this South Georgia country I guess is the reason everybody liked it so well.—Running time, 81 minutes.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

DR. CYCLOPS: Albert Dekker, Janice Logan—Here's a picture the circuit type of managers like to play with. I gave this one a swell ballyhoo and she paid off like a stream of sevens in a crap game. I used the reducing lens gag in a local department store and nearly had to call out the police to keep them from breaking their window. The press book is loaded with gags. A little elbow grease on this one and you've got the jack pot. Running time, 76 minutes. Played June 22-25.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

HONEYMOON IN BALI: Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll, Allan Jones, Helen Broderick, Carolyn Lee—We substituted this picture for "The Women" and was really enjoyed by all who saw it. The little girl stole every scene and she had a right to do so because she was a natural and good. Running time, 95 minutes. Played June 30.—F. G. Mills, Director of Motion Pictures, Prison Theatre, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

Republic

DARK COMMAND: Walter Pidgeon, Claire Trevor, John Wayne—One of the best pictures that Republic has made. Plenty of action and the plot holds your interest. That Walter Pidgeon is tops for my money. There's an actor that seems to be at ease in any role. The patrons didn't like to see him as a villain but they still enjoyed him. Claire Trevor and John Wayne were both good. That kid Wayne has a pleasing personality and the women kind of "go" for him. Running time, 96 minutes. Played June 1-4.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

ROVIN' TUMBLEWEEDS: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Mary Carlisle—Just fair story. Picture suffers from being too similar to "Grapes of Wrath" and "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" and with few of the virtues of either. Still no complaints and business above average, so what. Played June 21-22.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ROVIN' TUMBLEWEEDS: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Mary Carlisle—This man Autry sure draws the crowds. Why? I don't know. He certainly can not act and his singing is not so hot. But the people like him, so that's that. Running time, 61 minutes. Played June 14-15.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

SOUTH OF THE BORDER: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Again Republic scores with the best box office team we have ever seen, Gene Autry and Smiley Burnette. We played this picture on Sunday-Monday, which was the first western we ever played on those days. We broke all box office records for those two days, even out grossed "Jesse James." May Republic keep giving us this Autry-Burnette team which is the only real medicine I have ever seen for a sick box office.—Harry F. Blount, Plaza Theatre, Potosi, Mo. Rural patronage.

VILLAGE BARN DANCE: Richard Cromwell, Doris Day, Lulu Belle and Scotty—Our folks liked this one. Running time, 74 minutes. Played June 7-8.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

WAGONS WESTWARD: Chester Morris, Anita Louise, Buck Jones, Ona Munson, George Hayes, Guinn "Big Boy" Williams—Above average western from Republic. Cast includes Chester Morris, Buck Jones, "Big Boy" Williams and "Windy" Hayes as well as Anita Louise and Ona Munson. Pleased good business. Running time, 70 minutes. Played June 28-29.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WOLF OF NEW YORK: Edmund Lowe, Rose Hobart, James Stephenson—Had first run on this and did excellent business. It was very well liked and left a very good taste in my mouth. Played May 19-20.—Eddie Mansfield, Regent Theatre, Kansas City, Mo. General patronage.

RKO Radio

MEXICAN SPITFIRE: Lupe Velez, Leon Errol, Donald Woods—Here is a comedy just loaded with belly laughs. Leon Errol is perfect and what a character actor besides a comedian that knows how to get laughs galore. The comedy never lets up and the audience was in stitches. This one is a cinch to please. Running time, 67 minutes. Played May 4-9.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CHARLIE CHAN IN RENO: Sidney Toler, Phyllis Brooks, Ricardo Cortez—We single billed this but feel we would have been well advised if we were to have double billed this. Business on average.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Henry Fonda, Claudette Colbert, Edna May Oliver, Eddie Collins—Well liked. Eddie Collins brings out some good laughs. Running time, 103 minutes. Played June 8-9.—E. C. Bohlig, Opheim Theatre, Opheim, Mont. Small town patronage.

EARTHBOUND: Warner Baxter, Andrea Leeds—A dud which failed to please the few who attended. Was a good picture in the silent days but Fox sure messed it up. Audience complained the musical score was so loud they couldn't hear the lines. Running time, 67 minutes. Played June 19-20.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

EVERYTHING HAPPENS AT NIGHT: Sonja Henie, Ray Milland, Robert Cummings—Very satisfactory but business small. Played June 12-13.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

FOUR SONS: Don Ameche, Mary Beth Hughes, Eugenie Leontovich, Alan Curtis, George Ernest, Robert Lowery—The rape of Czecho-Slovakia is the background for this most excellent, well played picture, and imagination can supply just what the picture portrayed. As the mother, Eugenie Leontovich, the great Russian actress, makes her film debut in a marvelous and very entertaining manner and she is a star of the first magnitude. Miss Hughes and the four brothers were excellent in their performances and the picture should please all adult audiences. Running time, 88 minutes. Played June 27-July 3.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

FREE, BLONDE AND TWENTY-ONE: Lynn Bari, Joan Davis, Henry Wilcoxon—An average program

picture. Running time, 67 minutes. Played June 9-10. —Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

JOHNNY APOLLO: Tyrone Power, Dorothy Lamour, Edward Arnold, Lloyd Nolan—Fair to poor. Not up to ability of cast at all. Took very bad beating on this. So far only three of Fox's big pictures have done business for me and I've played twelve. Running time, 93 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

STAR DUST: Linda Darnell, John Payne, Roland Young, Charlotte Greenwood—Feature pleased. Patrons seemed to get in the mood of this show from the start. Free carnival in next town hurt business on this. Running time, 85 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

20,000 MEN A YEAR: Randolph Scott, Preston Foster, Margaret Lindsay—Could not get them in the second night on this. The shorts had to put it over. No good. Running time, 84 minutes.—E. C. Bohlig, Opheim Theatre, Opheim, Mont. Small town patronage.

RETURN OF THE CISCO KID, THE: Warner Baxter, Lynn Bari, Henry Hull, Cesar Romero—Very good picture. Not the draw some westerns are. Business only fair.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

United Artists

HOUSE ACROSS THE BAY: Joan Bennett, George Raft, Lloyd Nolan, Gladys George, Walter Pidgeon—Miss Bennett was excellent; Nolan, Pidgeon and Raft perform in adequate standard fashion and were also excellent. The plot is enthralling and alluring and the picture is very entertaining and will please the usual theatregoers but had Raft recovered his freedom and his girl, the taste in the mouths of the audience would have been much sweeter. The picture starts off with excellent, well pleased patronage and good for a second week at one of the neighborhood houses. Running time, 107 minutes. Played June 20-26.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

MAN IN THE IRON MASK, THE: Louis Hayward, Joan Bennett, Alan Hale, Joseph Schildkraut, Warren William—Very good production, although not a very late production. Went over in a big way here. Running time, 109 minutes. Played June 8-9.—F. G. Mills, Director of Motion Pictures, Prison Theatre, Florida State Prison, Raifrod, Fla. Prison patronage.

OF MICE AND MEN: Burgess Meredith, Lon Chaney, Jr., Betty Field—Very well liked and fairly good business. Lon Chaney, Jr., should rate same consideration for some award for the difficult role he played so wonderful in this. Running time, 107 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

Universal

LA CONGA NIGHTS: Hugh Herbert, Dennis O'Keefe, Constance Moore—Here's another dandy comedy from Universal and well made with a peach of a cast. Hugh Herbert is one of the funniest men I have ever seen (in character) and the public starts laughing the minute he appears on the screen. From then on they relax with that knowing smile that they are going to enjoy themselves and the picture doesn't let them down for a minute. Let's see more like this. Running time, 60 minutes. Played June 15-18.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

NEWSBOYS' HOME: Jackie Cooper, Wendy Barrie, Edmund Lowe, "Little Tough Guys"—Strictly a boy's (or young man's) picture. The picture generally was good but some spots were rather dramatic for our "patronage." Running time, 82 minutes. Played June 15-16.—F. G. Mills, Director of Motion Pictures, Prison Theatre, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

ZANZIBAR: Lola Lane, James Craig—Played this little piece of hokum on a week-end for our action fans with excellent results. If your audience is not over critical, this would be a honey. Plenty of animals for the kids and action for the adults. Running time, 61 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

BROTHER ORCHID: Edward G. Robinson, Ann Sothern, Ralph Bellamy, Humphrey Bogart—Good picture and good business. This gangster picture has a lot of comedy. Running time, 91 minutes. Played June 23-24.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GAMBLING ON THE HIGH SEAS: Wayne Morris, Jane Wyman, John Litel—Fair action show but didn't seem to satisfy my action patrons. Is good enough for double feature program. Running time, 60 minutes.

—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesvile, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

VIRGINIA CITY: Errol Flynn, Miriam Hopkins, Randolph Scott, Humphrey Bogart, Alan Hale—Rather late date on this hurt business. Had fair business considering date. Picture pleased my rural patrons. Running time, 120 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

MORE SO TODAY

Just about one year ago, speaking before theatre circuit conventions, your Chairman struck upon the subject of happiness as concerns the theatreman and the welfare of his operation. If world conditions have since changed to make even more significant today what was pointed out in the Summer of 1939, then to be spotlighted again are the following quotes from the convention addresses:

"People flock to the motion picture theatre to seek happiness. And you, the manager, guide them to this happiness. You and you and you and the thousands of other theatremen over the country who package this commodity in advance to be sold to ready buyers.

"The theatreman who deep in his consciousness believes he is an important contributing factor to the production of happiness is not only a better theatreman but a happier man because he realizes the importance of the part he plays. Now, hastily, before I am accused of playing Pollyanna, or charged with any desire to cover up the not always enjoyable routine of operation and its difficulties, let me not paint a picture of a manager who springs from his bed in the early morning because he has nothing to do in the next 12 hours or more but clap hands and dance about.

"Your theatreman is a normal being and functions as one. As such, he is little different from the people who patronize his theatre. He has his moments of depression, his highs and his lows. Thus, he understands the need of doing everything possible to surround his entertainments with highlights of excitement to ease the mind of its burden and to bring further joy to the hearts of those who are joyous.

"He knows that whatever the day brings forth, no matter in what mood people go into the theatre, a significant part of his work is accomplished when those same people emerge refreshed, revitalized, entertained.

"We are providing happiness at a price within reach of all, happiness that might not be had were there no motion picture theatres. But to say this is enough is not so. That would be the point from where your manager takes off. This missionary, knowing in his heart that he has something to present to delight the thousands in his community, must by this knowledge and consciousness permeate his every action with the glow of such fulfillment. He makes this evident in his advertising, in his publicity, his personal and civic contacts. . . . "

St. Catharines, Ontario, is a small Canadian community, its Centre Theatre a "subsequent" situation, and "Four Feathers" a picture that had played to extended time in the town's first-run. Hardly deterred by these factors, Manager H. M. Yudin launched a vigorous promotion to include radio dramatization, fife-and-drum corps parade through the business section, and a more elaborate front than usual. The date played to capacity houses.

Writes the Round Tabler:

"In your contact with managers, you must know the difficulties we encounter in buying pictures and the time that elapses before we can play them. I am reporting my campaign to encourage other second-run managers to exploit pictures even though they have had previous first-run exploitation."

The industry's battle to offset war jitters expands to a wider front as more big guns of exhibition go into action. Intensifying the barrages laid down by RKO and Loew's, Tri-States inaugurates "Cheer-Up Week" over the circuit. On another page is to be noted the attack in Minneapolis, where Minnesota-men gain important newspaper support in clarioning "Go See a Movie".

DOES SOUND FAMILIAR

First, E. V. ("Dinny") Dinerman, RKO Keith's, Cincinnati, Ohio; second, S. B. Hale, Jr., Lyric, Spearman, Texas; third, Charlie Smakwitz, Lincoln, Troy, N. Y. These are the winners in United Artists' contest for the best exploitation campaigns on "Zenobia". And all three are active members.

Checking back in the files, it appears more than a coincidence that Round Tablers finish up front in competitions of this kind. Or have we said that before.

Round Table In Pictures

Reported by R. E. Russell at Loew's Poli, in New Haven, was assistant Jack Brassil's bally for "His Favorite Wife." Store dummy, dressed in latest fashion with back banner reading "This is my favorite wife", was planted on rollers and pushed about town by theatre attendant.

Entire front and lobby was decorated in advance by Ken Henry for his date on "Virginia City" at the Embassy, Port Chester, N. Y. Props consisted of money bags borrowed from Railway Express and local banks, background spotted with cut-outs of Errol Flynn in various action poses and scene stills.

Street bally conceived by Al Rey for "Doctor Takes a Wife" at the Stanley, in Philadelphia, consisted of man dressed as interne wearing stethoscope and carrying imprinted kit. "Doctor" distributed heralds, one side carrying pictures of the stars, reverse prescription reading: "A spring tonic and laugh treatment with Loretta Young and Ray Milland."

LOCAL THEATER BANS ANY MENTION OF WAR

The Gopher theater today began a four week experiment in entertainment by eliminating from its screen every mention of war.

War shots will be eliminated from news reels, and features and short subjects will be booked for their avoidance of the subject.

The experiment is in line with the campaign to boost movie attendance to avoid "janglenerves" arising from war news.

Gopher Theater Bans War News From Screen

The Gopher theater began operating today on a plan of banning all war news from the program. Anything that pertains to the war will be excluded from newsreels and short subjects, Roy Slantz, manager, said. "We feel a lot of people go to a show to enjoy themselves and relax," Slantz said. "They are hearing an dreading and talking about the war so much ahey want a place to go where they can forget it." This experiment will last for four weeks.

Illustrated, at top, is six-column feature in the Minneapolis Star-Journal, written by a prominent local psychiatrist and planted by Ev Seibel, head of the circuit's Minneapolis ad forces, to note handling of war news by Minnesota Amusement-men. The second break, front-paged by the Times-Tribune, stresses war news ban at the circuit's Gopher, Minneapolis, by Manager Roy Slentz. Public interest in both campaigns was "terrific," according to Charlie Winchell, circuit ad and publicity chief.

Benefit for Camp Fund Tied to "Swiss Family"

Recently tied in by Glenn Nelson at the Harris, in Findlay, Ohio, was a benefit hookup with the Y.M.C.A. for "Swiss Family Robinson" proved as profitable for the Round Tabler as similar cooperations he is in the habit of effecting with leading organizations in his sector.

Knowing that the organization was interested in raising funds for their boys' camp, Glenn approached them with the idea of running the special show. A percentage of each ticket sold was applied to their camp fund and in order to protect his box-office, Nelson requested that all tickets be turned in or their equivalent in cash by noon of the day the picture opened. With 100 boys out selling the tickets three weeks ahead of opening, the picture and benefit received much word-of-mouth publicity and mention in cooperating newspapers. To encourage the boys in their effort, paper also ran listings of their sales standings from time to time.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Steinbuch's "Storm" Contest

Reported as the first time cooperating daily paper had been cracked on a movie contest in six months was stunt put on by Ev Steinbuch at Loew's State, in Cleveland, for "Mortal Storm" with cash and guest tickets to those submitting best answers to the question: "Why is freedom a priceless possession?"

Lobby Stunts Prove Successful for Conner

For a novel lobby display, Marlowe Conner at Warners' Avalon, in Chicago, has procured an old-fashioned large tea kettle which he filled with water and into which he put some dry ice to produce a steaming effect. Kettle was placed on a shelf fastened to an easel with copy reading: "We're all steamed up over next week's show," etc.

Second lobby stunt consisted of writing desk with pen, etc., and postcards showing a photo of Ginger Rogers with handwritten message as follows: "Something to write home about, Ginger Rogers in 'Primrose Path,'" etc. Space on reverse side for message and address, cards available for patrons were mailed gratis.

MANDEL TIES CARTOON TO RKO UNDERLINE

Through a promotion engineered by Harry Mandel, RKO Theatres director of advertising and publicity, the Walt Disney cartoon strips in the New York Journal-American now carry playdate underlines opposite cartoon titles.

For a recent Donald Duck date, for instance, the copy ran: "See Donald Duck now showing at RKO Theatres in Manhattan, the Bronx and Westchester."

"Lincoln" Engagements Aided By School Participations

Theatremen able to secure cooperation of schools for dates on "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," found the picture received favorably enough to allow closer contacts with classes. In Chicago, as an instance, with a set of records of the stage play purchased for the purpose, Marlowe Conner obtained permission to play the records before school assemblies. The Round Tabler accompanied the program with a 30-minute talk on the date at the Avalon, a first-time incidentally that Conner was allowed to go directly to the students.

Other exploitation featured imprinted change envelopes holding five new Lincoln pennies, copy reading: "Five reminders to see," etc. Envelopes were used for change by restaurants, candy and drug stores, in addition to the theatre.

In Robinson, Ill., Manager Peter Nepote of the Lincoln, spotlighted his "Lincoln" campaign with a proclamation from the Mayor urging wide attendance. Thus unusual civic cooperation was given due attention in the press, which also noted the personal appearance of a local 90-piece high school band promoted by Nepote for the premiere. American Legion and other war organizations took part in the ceremonies.

The manager was also successful in having the grade and high school classes dismissed earlier so that the students might attend the special matinee organized with the cooperation of the school heads.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS

Another incident in the tumultuous career of the fabulous Marquee Mike, as depicted here by his creator, Glenn Franke of Cheviot, Ohio.

Star Impersonators Meet On Bridge for "Bridge"

A stunt designed to arouse curiosity was that arranged by M. R. Berman, manager of the Orpheum, in Springfield, Ill., for "Waterloo Bridge," by means of a personal notice run opening day on page two of local newspapers. Copy read: "Dear Roy, I will be at Waterloo Bridge, our bridge on South Sixth Street, this afternoon at 2.30. Must see you there at that time. Do not fail me. I am desperate. This is my last request. Your own, Myra."

At the appointed time, folks who had gathered witnessed the happy meeting of Berman's chief of service and a girl employee, dressed to impersonate Robert Taylor and Vivien Leigh, the Roy and Myra of the film. Waiting newspaper photographers took pictures of the "reconciliation" which were used together with stories the following day.

Berman also arranged for a petition to be drawn up addressed to the Mayor and city's commissioners asking that the name of South Street Bridge be changed to Waterloo Bridge. Signs were placed on the bridge reading: "Why shouldn't this bridge be renamed 'Waterloo Bridge'."

Contest angle was brought in with tickets going to those submitting best answers to the question: "Which gave you the greater thrill, Vivien Leigh and Clark Gable in 'Gone With the Wind,' or Miss Leigh and Robert Taylor in 'Waterloo Bridge'?" Another feature of the campaign was arranged in cooperation with leading paper, whereby its popular cooking school was held at the theatre one morning during engagement, with autographed photos of the stars distributed to everyone attending.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Baby Carriage Street Stunt Ties Traffic for "My Way"

Since Hamilton, Ont., is a Saturday town when the downtown streets are packed with shoppers, the date on "If I Had My Way" at the FPC Palace, was brought to public notice with a baby carriage stunt conceived by Manager Stroud and assistant, Bert Brown. Bannered, the go-cart was turned loose under the direction of a "typical husband" who kept dropping his week-end purchases all over the streets and tying up all movement while he collected his shopping. As the crowds gazed at the troubled parent, they also had time enough to study the carriage with the theatre credits.

Unique Tire Tiein Used for "Russell"

Since the picture opened the following day, Ted Kirkmeyer secured a lot of smart advertising for "Lillian Russell" at the Egyptian, in Ogden, Utah, by offering free admissions at the Saturday matinee to youngsters bringing old auto tires lettered with the attraction and theatre. The offer widely publicized in the papers and over the radio, brought juveniles in sufficient number to form a line some 300 feet long at the boxoffice. Additional laughs were secured by the fact that many of the youngsters were smaller than their "admission tickets." In order to insure large lettering on the tires, Kirkmeyer had a signman on hand to revamp the amateur jobs of the children so that the title would stand out. The painting went on all afternoon out front to the accompaniment of a constant crowd of bystanders.

Admission costs were secured by the Round Tabler on a tiein with the city's largest dealer who paid 10 cents for each tire. Heaped out front and bannered for further attention, the tires later were turned over by the dealer to the yacht club for docking purposes during the annual regatta starting on the opening day of the date. In appreciation, the club announced the picture over their public address system.

The campaign covering a number of other effective tieins, was climaxed on the Saturday night ahead with a Lillian Russell Costume Ball at the city's amusement park. Publicized heavily a week in advance, the event drew capacity crowds to vie for the prizes promoted by the theatreman. These were given for the best Russell costume, to the 15 winners in the Russell waltz contest, and many others for door prizes. The ballroom was extensively decorated with picture banners and posters and all attending received autographed photos of the stars.

Barcroft Promotes Orchids On "Brother Orchid" Tiein

Much was made locally of the florist tieup arranged by Johnny Barcroft for date on "Brother Orchid" at the RKO Palace, Columbus, Ohio, whereby blooms were distributed opening day, stunt being highlighted by girl cashier who visited city hall and pinned an "orchid" in Mayor Green's lapel which was good for stories and art in local dailies. Flowers were also pinned on state, and city officials in addition to critics opening day. Cafes featured a "Brother Orchid" cocktail, life size cutouts of Robinson were planted in front of house during run and announcements were made over the public address system at the Midget Auto Races before an estimated crowd of 40,000.

For "Torrid Zone," a cutout of Ann Sheridan, weather proofed, was frozen inside of block of ice and put on display in front; street bally consisted of man attired as Santa with back copy reading: "There's only one thing that would get me to come to Columbus from the North Pole, and that's Ann Sheridan in," etc., etc., and autographed pictures of the star were distributed to matinee audiences over the weekend in an Auto-Lite tieup.

'Men's Burlesque' Aids Charity Fund

To raise funds for the underprivileged children of Plainview, Texas, Manager Chet McSwain prevailed upon the dignified members of the local Kiwanis Club to sponsor his annual men's burlesque on the stage of the Granada Theatre, in which conventional bathing beauty and talent revues were amusingly cartooned. The theme of the advertising was emphasized with a figure of a female bathing beauty topped with the head of a cigar smoking male. Copy stressed such superlatives as stupendous, gigantic, colossal, etc., etc.

Following the usual procedure, leading local businesses were represented by the participating Kiwanians and identified with such burlesque names as "Miss Flicker," "Miss Ten Cent Store," "Miss Gas Pipe," "Miss Elevator," etc., as comic labels for the stores represented.

Publicity featured newspaper interviews with McSwain and outside advertising was made amusing by ordinary lettered burlap sacks hung from the marquees of buildings on the main street. The stage setting was made up of bear grass, willow trees, cactus and sun flowers backed by burlap bags which carried gag copy. Platform placed center stage and covered with green grass was used by the entrants who posed in the usual manner. The master of ceremonies identified each entrant, giving the merchant concerned a laugh or two in the sponsor's plugs. At the end of the show, all contestants were called on stage where the prizes were awarded. Chosen for laughs, the prizes included oversize shaving mugs, pots of grass, etc.

Erickson Invites Patrons To Play "Singapore" Tunes

Unique lobby stunt was arranged by Manager E. R. Erickson at Warner's Rhodes in Chicago ahead and during run of "Road to Singapore." Studio piano with sheet music of hit tunes from the picture were set up and patrons invited to seat themselves and bat out a few numbers. Appropriate tiein card was placed on piano.

Additional gag slant was a set of drapes hung in corner of lobby with card reading: "Peek in and see Dorothy Lamour in person," etc. Card on inside read: "Darn it! She was here, but she has left. See Dorothy Lamour in," etc. Sarong was conspicuously planted on chair.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Cat Resemblance Contest Inaugurated by Laby

George Laby's campaign on "Pinocchio" at the Victory, in Holyoke, Mass., sure was the cats, since the theatreman started something for himself when he advertised in local daily for 10 kittens most closely resembling Figaro, owners to bring the felines down to the City Hall lawn at a designated time. According to humorously handled newspaper stories, practically every kid in town with a cat arrived on the doorsteps of the Mayor's office to enter his pet in the resemblance contest. Prizes were awarded in connection with the stunt which created plenty of word-of-mouth comment.

Americanization Stressed By Indiana-Illinois Theatremen

Patronage of Indiana-Illinois circuit's Voge, in East Chicago, Ind., depends largely upon steelworkers and their families representing some 27 nationalities. The majority of these groups speak only their mother tongues and cling to the old customs, according to Manager Maurie Parfrey. It was this situation that motivated the theatreman's project of special Americanization programs for grade and high school students, put on for two days with the support of local organizations.

Following the successful procedure used by the circuit last year, Parfrey approached representative patriotic, civic and administrative groups which were sold on participation and agreed to pay all costs. With the heads of the schools concerned, morning and afternoon schedules were set up for the guidance of the students who paraded from schools to theatre, headed by bands, color guards, police escorts. Newspaper publicity was widespread in advance and after the showings.

Participating organizations were the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Chamber of Commerce and junior association, Kiwanis, Lions and Elks Clubs, East Chicago Bar Association. The programs, running an hour and a half, started with patriotic talks by prominent locals, followed with the "to the colors" ceremony and pledge of allegiance to the flag. The screen units were the short subjects, Year of Dark Contrast, Bill of Rights, Old Glory, Sons of Liberty and Community Sing No. 10, the latter finishing with the singing of the national anthem.

Conducted jointly with Manager Jack Albertson, at the circuit's Indiana, in nearby Indiana Harbor, the showings were reported to have drawn an attendance of over 5,000 students.

In Elkhart, Ind., Art Wartha, manager of Indiana-Illinois' Elco, highlighted his "Americanization Week" celebration with a welcome to Raymond Kelley, national commander of the American Legion, in town for the civic celebration. To view the special program of patriotic short subjects, Wartha arranged with local school heads for special morning shows, with representatives of civic and fraternal organizations on hand to address the children. MGM's "The Flag Speaks" was featured in the screen program. The ceremonies, witnessed by some 4,000 school children, included colors presentation ceremony by the American Legion color guard, in addition to other patriotic observances.

Crawford Clothes Appeal Stressed on "Susan" Date

Stressing the star's clothes appeal as illustrated by the styles worn in "Susan and God," Charlie Taylor, Buffalo Theatres ad head featured his campaign on the picture with a six-day radio contest over WGR, the prizes awarded for the best 100-word letters on the subject "Do you agree that Joan Crawford is the best dressed woman on the screen?"

Star's popularity in the drawing area was hooked up to a tiein with Greyhound Busses traversing the suburban territory. These carriers were decorated with strip banners reading "Take this bus to Shea's Buffalo to see," etc. On a similar tiein the New York Central distributed special heralds in a 50-mile radius. Weighing machines in front of five-and-tens were used on a guest ticket tieup with certain numbers on the weight tabs entitling holders to free admissions. Patron list of local little theatre was informed of the picture which in play form had been shown by the amateur group.

Patrons Roll Cantor's Eyes For "Little Mothers" Gag

Lobby stunt arranged by John Schultz at the Liberty in Sharon, Pa., for "Forty Little Mothers," and one which he reports as giving his patrons a great kick, consisted of a compo board circle on which were painted the eyes of Eddie Cantor, revolving disc of the star's face with eyes cut out was then tacked directly over the board and patrons were invited to spin the face. If it stopped in the proper place with the eyes showing, guest tickets were awarded.

Tieup was effected with local jeweler, whereby Schultz promoted 40 baby spoons to be given to the first 40 women attending show opening day. Cooperating merchant in addition to plugging the stunt in his window ran a two-column by six-inch ad. Station WPIC plugged hit tune from picture, roving cameraman ostensibly snapping passersby, distributed cards reading: "We didn't take your picture, but for the funniest picture of the year see," etc., and through tieup with distributor of record machines, cards were placed on all machines in the valley plugging hit tunes.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Contests Aid Deering's "Tom Edison" Campaign

Planted in two of Houston's dailies were contests arranged by Round Tabler Francis Deering in advance of "Young Tom Edison" opening at Loew's. First slant offered set of fine records to persons presenting most antiquated Edison talking machine at the theatre. All machines so received were on display in the lobby ahead with appropriate tiein card. Second contest which was conducted on the sports page of the paper carried voting ballots on which contestants were requested to name the softball player whom they considered most valuable to the Houston team. Player receiving most votes was presented with a trophy from Mickey Rooney.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

One of the highlights of the "Edison, the Man" campaign put over by S. Hanauer, at the Rialto, in Beaver Falls, Pa., was a display planted in the public library consisting of books about Thomas A. Announcements were made through press and from stage that all who wished could stay after the last show and dance on the stage in the lobby or mezzanine.

QUESTIONNAIRE FAVORS WAR NEWS EMPHASIS

Further reports from members on the handling of war news finds two additional opinions in favor of featuring spot news, one opinion directly influenced by a questionnaire among patrons of the Granada, Norfolk, Nebraska. According to Manager Dick Phillips, of 600 filled-in cards returned to the theatre, over 70 per cent definitely wanted war news in the newsreel, and the hotter, the better.

W-Clyde Smith believes it "absolutely essential" to plug war news "to cash in at the boxoffice." To do so, the Malco city manager in Hot Springs has a tieup with KWFC for a direct wire to all his theatres carrying spot announcements exactly as they are received at the station. Results are highly satisfactory as shown by the grosses, the Round Tabler emphasizes.

Through cooperation of 12 merchants about town, George Patterson, of the Rivoli, in Rutherford, N. J., for "Shop Around the Corner" ran the photos of 12 salesgirls in local paper, offering guest tickets to those correctly identifying the girls and names of shops at which they were employed.

IN COURTS

Court Enjoins Use of "Fifth Column" Title

Felix Benvenga, New York supreme court justice, Wednesday, July 3rd, enjoined the Film Alliance of the United States, Inc., and Midtown Theatre Corporation from using the title "Fifth Column Squad" in connection with an English film originally entitled "Spies of the Air." The complaint was filed by Ernest Hemingway, Benjamin F. Glazer and Theatre Guild, Inc.

Judge Benvenga found that the use of the "Fifth Column Squad" title by defendants would constitute unfair competition with the title of the plaintiff's play "The Fifth Column." He also pointed out in his opinion that such use by defendants would constitute an appropriation of the plaintiffs' property right to said title.

Courts Dismiss And Reverse in Goldwyn Actions

The action of Samuel Goldwyn and Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., to cancel his contract with United Artists as against London Film Productions, Ltd., and Alexander Korda, was dismissed Friday, July 5th, by Judge Vincent L. Leibell in federal court in New York.

This decision followed the reversal in part by the U. S. circuit court of appeals Wednesday, July 3rd, in Philadelphia of a decision of the federal district court in Wilmington which dismissed the suit of Mr. Goldwyn against United Artists.

The appellate court, however, instructed John P. Nields, federal judge, to hold a hearing to determine whether Mr. Goldwyn should be permitted to proceed with the Wilmington suit, in view of the fact that he has another suit pending on similar grounds in New York federal court, or whether the Wilmington suit should be dismissed and the trial continued in New York.

The basis of the appellate court's reversal was the fact that Judge Nields previously had held that Mr. Korda and the late Douglas Fairbanks were required as defendants in the suit. In disposing of this contention, the appellate court ruled that Mr. Korda and Mr. Fairbanks were not "indispensable."

In New York Monday Judge Leibell signed an order for Mr. Korda to appear for examination before trial on Thursday in Mr. Goldwyn's New York suit against United Artists. Mr. Korda was asked to bring all records pertaining to the UA-Goldwyn contract situation at issue.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger (†) symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

EVERYBODY'S GETTING ON THE PARAMOUNT BAND WAGON AND GOING FOR A JOY RIDE!

We started it with "ROAD TO SINGAPORE" and "BUCK BENNY RIDES AGAIN." We were the first to kick Old Man Gloom in the pants. We were the first to give the sob stuff the big brush off. We were the first to start building the biggest bunch of belly-laugh bonanzas in the history of the business. Now we see all the other companies climbing on the Paramount Band Wagon for a joy ride of LIGHT ENTERTAINMENT. It's okay by us. Imitation is the sincerest flattery, etc. But, as we've already cornered the comedy market, signed up the biggest names in the entertainment field, we'll be glad to welcome the late comers...but, naturally, we'll hang right on to our front seats!

WHY THE DELAY?

THE current flurry of attention to charges of Red propaganda in Works Progress Administration mural art at Floyd Bennett Field in New York, with burnings of pictures, dismissal of the artist, investigations and such, seems quite as belated as were some other attentions to the rampant revolutionary aspects of the one time Federal Theatre Project.

It would be nice to have an explanation of why the Administration and its bureaucrats have had to wait these several years to discover the nature of the subversive endeavors on stage and canvas and printed page for which the tax payers of the commonwealth have been paying in full the while.

Not until Hitler and Stalin made a pact could many and many an official and unofficial personage be convinced that Red communism and Swastika totalitarianism had attributes and purposes in common, equally addressed, identically addressed, at the destruction of the principles which have made America.

The belatedness of the discovery is not to be attributed to dim wits, nor to obtuseness. The answer is politics, of a sort which has been doing this country—and this industry—no good.

"DIRECT MAIL"

THE steps by which, after twenty-one years, the Loew theatres of New York are abandoning a house organ of consumer distribution in behalf of newspaper directory space bring to mind some reflections on the general subject of "direct mail".

Once upon a time media were such that the motion picture vendors, wholesale and retail, had decided need of direct mail literature. Largely, the function of information to the customers, exhibitors and box office patrons alike, has been taken over for basic reasons of efficient practicality by publications ordained to the purpose. But the direct mail practice lingers as an industry policy out of all ratio to its utility.

Loew's theatres, and all other theatres, count most important the location where the customers pass in greatest number. They now have decided to move their advertising of those theatres into pages where habitual readerships carry the attention stream.

And that fact and action is noteworthy recognition that there is a third dimension of the printed page. That third dimension is made up of circulation attention based on reader acceptance. The flat surface of a printed page is the same no matter who prints and why. The size of the page however is measured in the cubic content of a depth as big as the standing of the medium. A house organ or a broadside can look pretty on a desk and can be useful for impressing the casual executive. But that has very little indeed to do with the customer. The delivery of the commercial, or any other message, depends on who says what and where he says it.

FIGHT & FILM

THE repeal of the Sims law forbidding interstate traffic in prize fight films, accomplished at last by Senator William Warren Barbour of New Jersey, operates to remove from the motion picture certain illicit and malodorous associations which have contributed nothing to its repute.

For some years, beginning in the days of the Little Green House in Washington's K Street and the Ohio gang, there has been an organized, unlawful and often deeply corrupt trade in fight pictures across state lines. The procedure through recent years has involved a "one grand fix" in each territory concerned. A New York gangboss of Hell's Kitchen origin has been the magnate of the operation.

Meanwhile, it is not to be considered that there has been a legislative vote of approval of the purveyance of fight pictures as merchandise for the family trade on the screen. There are still large areas of the United States where opinion holds prizefighting in the same esteem that it was held in in the '90's, considerably less than respectable.

Once upon a time the Motion Picture Patents Company bought the rights to a fight principally for the purpose of keeping the pictures out of general program circulation. That was, if memory serves, the Johnson-Willard fight in Cuba.

Now that the fight film is legitimatized, or rather held not to be unlawful, it is to be conceived that important influences will be had upon the fight industry or, as Mr. W. O. McGeehan used to call it, "the art of modified murder".

In the days of long ago fights were staged for the pictures, and very soon thereafter there was more haggling and dickering over the percentage for the films than for the gate receipts.

Perchance, before long now we shall discover the boxing commissioners demanding screen tests at 3 o'clock.

SAYS Mr. William F. McDermott in the Cleveland Plain Dealer: "I am not among those who are disturbed in reading the records of the munificent sums paid to motion picture stars. The services they render are concrete and measurable. . . . Under the rules of the game they earn what they get. Besides, many of them are pretty women, and one likes to see pretty women getting what the laws of Nature entitle them to. . . ." Candid of you, Mr. McDermott!

"One-and-a-half" Bill

IF there must be double bills Paramount is going to try to shorten them. Under the plan successful old films will be cut to 45 minutes and new prints and sound tracks made. The first "one-and-a-half" feature program was scheduled to open at the Paramount, Los Angeles on Thursday. The bill is "Those Were the Days" (1940) and an abridged edition of "Love Me Tonight" (1932), starring Maurice Chevalier, Jeanette MacDonald and Myrna Loy.

Herbert Moulton, in charge of short subject and trailer production at the Paramount studio, produced the 45-minute version of "Love Me Tonight."

Other pictures which are scheduled for "streamlining" and release to accompany modern product are: "Design for Living" (1933), "Lives of a Bengal Lancer" (1935), "Night After Night" (1932) and "One Hour With You" (1932).

Naming Names

FORTY-TWO of Hollywood's most prominent screen figures" were purported to be on a list handed to Martin Dies in Beaumont, Texas, Wednesday. Representative Dies, chairman of the House committee scrutinizing un-American activities, has been acting lately as a one-man sub-committee digging into alleged evidence of Communism and Fascism.

Approximately 60 per cent of those named were members of the party and the others furnished money and other support, a spokesman said.

98% Against Duals

JACK KIRSCH, chief of Allied of Illinois, in Chicago, this week, again took up the fight against double bills, aiming, particularly, at the Balaban and Katz circuit in the town of his headquarters, and addressing another 'open letter' "to the leaders of the industry" to stamp out the practice.

Mr. Kirsch's line of attack was based on Samuel Goldwyn's Saturday Evening Post article of July 13th, in which the producer quoted leading affiliated circuit heads as being in favor of abolition.

Joseph Bernhard, head of Warner Brothers' theatres was quoted by Mr. Goldwyn: "I am ready to stop double bills as soon as my competitors stop, because I know that they are ruining my business."

Spyros Skouras, head of Fox-National Theatres, was quoted: "Double bills are a cancer which will devour the industry."

Frank Freeman, in charge of Paramount's studio operations, was quoted as being "against double bills."

The Illinois Allied chief stated that 98 per cent of Chicago exhibitors want to return to single features, "but we can't unless Balaban and Katz does," adding that, "the Belmont and other Balaban and Katz theatres still continue to triple-feature."

"Can't you persuade Balaban and Katz to cooperate," Mr. Kirsch asked the industry leaders.

Elsewhere, Abram Myers, general counsel of national Allied; Edward L. Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, and P. J. Wood, of the ITO in Ohio, stated that Mr. Goldwyn's views against the double bill situation were to be supported.

"More Money"

"MORE money, not from the exhibitor but from the public" was the keynote of the message with which Howard Dietz, director of advertising and publicity for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures, arrived this week from a sojourn in Hollywood. "We didn't," he observed, "get our money from the exhibitor on 'Gone With the Wind'—we got it from the people who crowded the theatres."

MGM has had its best summer, says Mr. Dietz, by "coming through with big pictures."

Interrogated about MGM and radio he observed that the company would renew its radio show only if it could be made to contribute to the box office.

"Boom Town" was the picture most on his mind, terming it the most important multiple star picture since "Dinner at Eight." This picture was the subject of conferences through the week, with a decision to determine sales and admission policies by test engagements in August.

British Concession

AMERICAN film companies may use monies frozen in Britain to acquire copyrights and negatives of British films for export the British Board of Trade has ordered, according to a cable from London on Tuesday.

The order states that dollar payments are no longer required of the companies, when they want to buy British films for distribution in the United States. British firms, it adds, may sell their pictures for pounds.

The order is regarded as ending the problem set up by a British Treasury notice last month, which at first was interpreted as requiring payments to an English firm in dollars, regardless of the distributor organization and number of pounds frozen which the purchaser might have.

The new permission is valid only till October 31st, and it virtually sanctions major British productions for only three months.

More Union Trouble

THREATS of a national strike by the American Federation of Musicians against Warner interests, unless the eight-months-old musicians' strike against the company's houses in Philadelphia is settled, were seen as possible results of a scheduled meeting on Friday in that city between Warner labor contact Frank Phelps and musicians' union representatives, A. Rex Riccardi, secretary of the city's Local 77, and Joseph N. Weber, former president of the American Federation of Musicians.

James Petrillo, who succeeded Mr. Weber as head of the musicians, arranged the meeting, but was not expected to attend.

Mr. Riccardi, on Wednesday, in Philadelphia, believed there would be a settlement. Deadlock, he predicted, however, would result in the matter being given back to Mr. Petrillo, who would have to decide whether to take national action such as the local asked of the AFM some time ago.

Roosevelt Releases

WEDNESDAY afternoon the Fox Movietone studios in New York were all of a dither with festoons of syndicate writers and reporters, standing a-tiptoe off set while Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was being pictured and recorded in a prologue for a picture entitled "Pastor Hall."

James Roosevelt, son, has just acquired the production, for United Artists release, through Arthur Lee and Jeffrey Bernerd from the British concern of Grand National Pictures, Ltd.

"Pastor Hall" is a story based on the career and experiences of Pastor Niemoller, who was put into a concentration camp in Germany as a consequence of his anti-Nazi activities. The principal players include Wilfrid Lawson and Nova Philbeam.

This picture was rather secretively brought to New York from London two months ago, and is said to have been rejected by several distributors dubious of its appeal in the light of experiences with other pictures dealing with the Nazi situation.

United Artists is planning release in about four weeks, or as early as possible against possibilities of further changes in the world scene.

Mrs. Roosevelt also is announced to appear in the first of a series of "Hobby Lobby" shorts to be released by Columbia Pictures Corporation in September.

The publicity announcement speaks of the President's wife as "the nation's foremost exponent of spare time activities."

The series is based upon Dave Elman's radio show. It is being directed by Arthur Leonard, of the newly formed Leonard-Greene Productions.

Censorship's Wane

CENSORSHIP by public officials of films, plays, books and the radio "has declined sharply during the past year," according to a pamphlet of the American Civil Liberties Union published Thursday with the title "In the Shadow of War."

The organization reported that the following motion pictures had difficulties with censors during the year: "Hitler, the Beast of Berlin"; "Harvest," "Strange Cargo," "Primrose Path," "The Fight for Life," "Birth of a Baby" and "The Birth of a Nation."

Plays banned were "Mulatto" in Philadelphia and "The Women" in Providence. The Civil Liberties group said that "Of Mice and Men" had "attracted police displeasure" in Providence and in Chicago 30 cuts were ordered in "The Children's Hour."

The two John Steinbeck novels "The Grapes of Wrath" and "Of Mice and Men" were withdrawn from shelves in half a dozen libraries, it was reported. Radio was said to be enjoying more freedom than last year and even the administration of the radio code of the National Association of Broadcasters received favorable comment.

Previewing Ramparts

THE Time Magazine publishers' first feature, "Ramparts We Watch," under production by its March of Time division, is being previewed in theatres around New York.

At a preview, last Friday evening, at RKO's Proctor's, New Rochelle, the picture ran 90 minutes. Preview-comment cards issued to the audience said the picture, "is not in its final form."

"Ramparts" is a pictorial discussion of national defense and includes excerpts from records of World War I, along with dramatic narrative production on stage and location. The investment is of feature proportions.

Zanuck's Horseshoe

THE Silver Horseshoe award of The Rider and Driver magazine has been presented to Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production of Twentieth Century-Fox. The award is made annually for the most outstanding achievement for the advancement of the sport of steeple-chase riding. Mr. Zanuck was named this year on account of the favorable treatment given the sport in the motion picture "Maryland" (national release date July 19th). He is a polo enthusiast and his string of ponies in Hollywood was featured in the film "Maryland."

Nazi Domination

WORD that Germany will prohibit the exhibition, in occupied territories, of films not censored in Germany prior to 1937, reached New York home office foreign departments on Wednesday. This followed the MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S information, of last week (July 13th, page 12), in which it was disclosed that the majors' foreign departments had heard that their films were being seized and banned in German dominated territory.

It is assumed that the move is evidence of Germany's anticipated project to replace the heretofore European-dominant American film, with German product.

Accessory Sales

A SECOND concentration of theatre accessory selling was formed Monday in the midwest, although not national in scope like Herman Robbin's Advertising Accessories, Inc., organized in New York last year.

The new combination is the United States Independent Theatre Poster Service. Incorporators are Ben Marcus, president, and Irwin E. Sarnoff, vice-president, both of S. and M. Theatre Circuit in Wisconsin; and Fred Fischer, secretary, formerly of Wisconsin Poster Service in Milwaukee, and Independent Theatre Poster Service, of Chicago, both of which are absorbed by the new company.

"Wind" Lulls

THE Selznick International "Gone With the Wind," released by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has nearly reached the saturation point of bookings at the stipulated percentage terms and at 75c and $1.10 admissions. Present runs of the film are expected to be concluded about the end of this month.

The distribution of "Wind" this year at the special prices will be "as long as booking can be obtained," according to William F. Rodgers, general sales manager. The sales department estimates that about 5,000 bookings would be concluded by the end of the month.

"Wind" is now in its 31st week at the Astor theatre in New York City. Business has been reported good and no closing date has been announced.

Abroad, despite war conditions, "Wind" has been strong and has had a number of long runs including the following: London —five weeks, Ritz; eight, Palace and 12, Empire; Sydney, Australia—eight weeks, St. James and 11, Liberty; Melbourne—in its eighth week, Regent.

Prints of "Wind" with superimposed Spanish titles will be ready shortly and the first Latin American opening will probably be held in Rio de Janeiro or Buenos Aires.

LOEW N. Y. THEATRES DROP COSTLY DIRECT MAIL, GO TO NEWSPAPERS

Metropolitan Press Making Special Rates for New Line of Directory Advertising, with Eye on Circulation

Loew's, Inc., has abandoned its $200,000 a year direct mail house organ advertising for its 70 neighborhood theatres in Metropolitan New York, replacing that media with a daily directory in New York newspapers, the first to be conducted in this city for all theatres of a neighborhood circuit. Loew's N. Y. C. neighborhood theatre newspaper advertising budget will be increased to $343,000 a year, from its present $143,000, for the purpose.

The new policy, however, will save the theatres probably more than a hundred thousand dollars a year, by elimination of printing and mailing costs. It will also save the patrons an estimated $100,000 in telephone costs.

Six Months' Study Made

Growing dissatisfaction with direct mail, which Loew had been sending to the public some 21 years, started a close investigation of its actual value six months ago.

Loew's Weekly, the six-by-eight-inch, four-page, black-and-white mailing piece, was discontinued with the issue dated Thursday. On Wednesday the Hearst Journal-American started the daily directory, first of New York's eight daily newspapers to sign a basic agreement.

Loew's Weekly reached a peak circulation of as many as 1,200,00 copies in a week; its peak cost was $400,000 a year, for printing, mailing and a staff for handling. This will eventually all be applied to the daily newspaper directories.

Half-a-million copies of the Weekly were mailed, the rest distributed at Loew theatres. The penny-a-copy postal bill for 500,000 weeklies mailed at the peak ran into $5,000 a week—$260,000 a year, with paper stock, printing and handling costs in addition.

Described by Loew's as "a radical departure" in its advertising procedure, the new direct approach to prospective box office customers has created a brand new item in New York newspaper advertising, the classification of "directory advertising." With it comes ad rate reductions amounting to as much as 25 per cent, as in the case of the first contract signed, with the Journal-American. This paper has been charging 60 cents an agate line for so-called "neighborhood" ads. Under the new directory classification, Loew will pay 47 cents an agate line. The Journal's basic general amusement rate is $1.25 a line—all quotations being on contract commitments. The paper has a circulation of about 615,000. Its general merchandise advertising rate is $1.00 a line.

The New York Times and the New York Post are both understood to be close to consummating a directory contract with Loew's. Price concessions to be made by those papers are not definite, but it is understood that the Times might reduce its present rate of 60 cents a line for neighborhood copy, to 50 cents, and the Post would cut from 30 cents to 22 cents. The Times charges $1.10 a line for general amusements, the Post, 33 cents a line.

The Sun charges 62 cents a line for general amusements and 50 cents for neighborhood advertising; the Tribune, 71 cents for general amusements, 48 for neighborhood; the Daily Mirror, 80 cents and 55 cents; World-Telegram, 80 cents and 65 cents; Daily News, $1.60 and 91 cents, the News, of course, charging top rates for its top average daily circulation of about 1,800,000.

The Journal-American contract calls for a minimum of 100,000 agate lines in a year. The first Journal directory, on Wednesday, ran 16 inches deep and two columns wide.

Of Loew's circuit of 70 "non-Broadway" or "neighborhood" theatres, only a few heretofore have used a relatively small amount of newspaper space due to the frequent change of program, in addition to the fact that, obviously, only a limited amount of the circulation of any one newspaper would be effective advertising for a neighborhood house. Loew's Weekly, plus a limited amount of billboard advertising in the vicinity of the theatre, were relied upon as the chief media of approach.

In the new directory (see cut in adjoining column) Loew's will run the name, address and complete show information of every one of the 70 neighborhoods. Loew's Capitol, State, and Criterion, on Broadway, and Metropolitan, Brooklyn, are not included in the plan. They will continue to receive separate display space on amusement pages on additional budgets.

The directory will appear in the same position in each paper every day, the position to be determined by Loew's. The circuit is given "R.O.P."—"run of the paper," any place behind page three. In some instances, the ads appear on amusement pages.

Donahue and Coe, Inc., headed by Edward Churchill, Rockefeller Center, is handling the account.

Newspapers in most other large cities conduct theatre ad directories at special reduced rates. They have been used limitedly in New York because New York newspapers were hesitant in setting up low enough directory rates.

Heretofore, Loew neighborhood advertising has been confined to space for "key" neighborhood houses.

One contributing factor to Loew's realization of the inadequacy of its Loew's Weekly program-magazine was the 4,000 to 6,000 telephone calls received daily at its neighborhood houses from persons asking for information about the current program. The public, on Loew's figures, paid the telephone company from $75,000 to $110,000 a year for calls.

Promotion will be undertaken both by Loew and the participating newspapers for the new directory, selling the public on the savings in telephone charges, on the convenience of a set daily information chart on local Loew theatre performances. Loew's states that "the participating newspapers will help promote this directory vigorously because it is bound to be a circulation builder for them."

Promotion Started

Promotion has already been started by the Journal-American. Jack Smith, Journal amusement advertising manager, and Bob Levitt, its publication's promotional manager, have undertaken "an extensive promotional campaign" so as to acquaint the newspaper's readers quickly with the new "movie guide."

Kenneth Collins, assistant to the general manager of the New York Times, and Mrs. Ogden Reid, vice president of the Herald-Tribune, personally conferred with Loew executives on Monday, going direct to the circuit's home office to gather information at first hand.

Suddenly the idea that movie program listings have reader-interest seems to have hit elsewhere. "PM," New York's new nickel-a-copy newspaper, on Monday will start a directory listing names, addresses and programs of 200 theatres daily, using a full page. Information also will include starting times of shows after dinner, and the admission prices, going even further than the Loew directory. Theatres, of course, will pay nothing for the PM service, that publication accepting no paid advertising.

Several publications in New York, published weekly, like Cue, the New Yorker, et al, publish limited information about neighborhood movies.

OWNERS ASK CONGRESS TO TAX ALL TICKETS TO STOP PRICE CUTTING

Missouri - Illinois Group Sends Petition; Sees Cut-Throat Price War Resulting from Present Scale of Taxes

Members of Congress have in hand a petition from representatives of some 99 per cent of exhibitors in the territories of St. Louis, eastern Missouri and southern Illinois, to further amend the new National Defense Act ticket tax to eliminate all exemptions, taxing all admissions.

The new law taxes tickets above 20 cents. The pre-emergency defense law taxed tickets above 40 cents. The Missouri-Illinois owners now would even tax tickets of a penny admission, if any.

Embittered by the action of some exhibitors in reducing their admission prices to 20 cents in order to get down to the 20-cent ticket tax exemption, members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the aforementioned territories, resolved, unanimously, to urge Congress to cut out all exemptions in order to stop price cutting. The group also is asking other exhibitors' organizations to join in the move.

Revision Predicted

Last week, the national MPTOA, in a statement sent out from New York headquarters over the signature of Edward L. Kuykendall, president, predicted that, "There is every indication that it (the present Defense tax on admissions over 20 cents) will be completely revised by next January, that this tax will be brought down to at least 11-cent admissions."

The MPTOA warned that unless exhibitors continued to maintain existing admission prices to collect the Defense tax in addition thereto, there would develop "a disastrous price war in competitive situations where theatres cutting admissions to 20 cents to escape the tax. Such price cutting," added the MPTOA statement, "would inevitably be met by bargain matinee scales and price cutting at prior runs, and result in no advantage to the theatre that tries to undersell its competitors and escape the tax at the same time."

The MPTOA warned exhibitors that any falloff in business at this time, might easily be the result of the usual summer slump.

When Congress was first considering lowering the old ticket tax exemption from 40 cents to 25 cents, during committee drafting of the new bill, last month, the majors pointed out that the 25-cent exemption would cause hundreds of theatres charging more than 25 cents to cut to 25 cents in order to avoid the tax. They petitioned for a ten-cent exemption, but Congress hit on an in-between, at 20 cents.

The Missouri-Illinois owners, in now leading a movement to eliminate all exemptions, formally notifies Congress that, "Unlike the various items taxed under the new Defense tax legislation, amusements are singled out for special treatment in that a lower bracket is untaxed, with the result that since this tax has gone into effect, many exhibitors have cut the admission price in their theatres in an effort to drop below the taxable classification and thereby obtain a great advantage in luring patronage to their theatres over the exhibitor who patriotically responded to the call of his Government" and maintained taxable admissions.

Some Cuts Seen

Although in this the third week of collecting the tax owners generally are maintaining scales, passing the tax on to the public as a patriotic duty for public defense contribution, there are some owners who have cut prices to eliminate the tax.

"Price cutting begets further price cutting, and the theatre owners represented by the MPTO of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois are highly fearful that the law if continued as at present will result in a general demoralization of the show business and as well defeat the object of the Government to raise funds for rearmament purposes from this source," stated the petition to Congress, as signed for the owners by Fred Wehrenberg, organization president, in St. Louis.

Illustrating the point to the Congressmen, the petition cited the following:

"The theatre operator who is charging 25 cents plus the tax of three cents or a total of 28 cents per admission must now compete with the exhibitor who has unfairly cut his admission price to 20 cents to evade the tax and yet be running attractions ahead of the exhibitor charging eight cents more per admission. Human nature being what it is, the bulk of people will not wait weeks or even days to see a picture and then pay a higher admission price for the privilege just because the exhibitor collecting the tax is a patriotic theatre operator. As a result you can readily see that this exhibitor, in order to survive, will be forced to cut his admission price to 20 cents, and as this sort of action travels like a plague, ultimately the majority of theatres will be evading the admission tax.

"In other words, the law as at present seems to place a premium on 'chiseling' by unfair businessmen—action that threatens the entire price structure of the theatre industry as well as the success of the tax legislation itself. And when this unhealthy condition spreads, it may result in many theatres going out of business, causing unemployment that can only add to the thousands who are now receiving aid from the government.

"Our organization represents ninety-nine per cent of theatre operators in this territory who are patriotic citizens and are happy to do their part in helping our government in its vast program of defense. And they are hereby asking the Congress to amend this law, and they pray that such high-minded devotion to the good of all will not be left unanswered," concluded the petition.

Raise in Northwest

While pledging full cooperation to the government in its new defense program, 150 Iowa, Nebraska and Illinois exhibitors at Des Moines decided upon uniform admission advances, at a meeting over which Leo F. Wolcott, president of Allied Theatres of Iowa and Nebraska presided. Houses previously charging 25 and 26 cents will adopt a 30-cent scale, 30 and 31-cent houses will raise to 35 cents and 35 and 36-cent houses go to 40 cents under the new setup. G. Ralph Branton, general manager of Tri-States; Harry Warren of Central States and Morgan Ames of Singer circuit addressed the session.

Harry Brandt Reelected Head of Exhibitor Group

Harry Brandt's New York exhibitor group, the Independent Theatre Owners Association, elected him president for the seventh consecutive time, on Wednesday, at a special election meeting, in the Hotel Astor, in that city.

They also reelected the following officers, David Weinstock as vice-president, and Leon Rosenblatt as treasurer; and they elected Miss Frances Bergman to succeed Maurice Brown as secretary.

Reelected were board members Leo Brecher, Lawrence Bolognino, Sam Bleiweiss, Julius Charnow, Jack Hattem, Otto Lederer, Hyman Rachmil, Ray Rhonheimer, Bernard Brooks, Abraham Shenk, Rudy Sanders, Samuel Strausberg, Frank Moscato, Joshua Goldberg, and Irving Renner.

Discussed were industry problems such as film buying, dual programs, and the new national defense taxes.

The next association meeting will be in August, it was decided.

HOLLYWOOD, ON WAR BASIS, TURNS PRODUCT THEMES TO AMERICANISM

Influence of World Affairs on Production Community Felt Increasingly; Flexibility Note Struck in Schedule Plans

by VANCE KING
Hollywood Bureau

The discordant notes of European War II and world unrest rose to a crescendo this week in Hollywood. Production schedules have been changed, an aura of unrest has settled upon the production side of the art-industry, titles have been shifted to ease upon war angles, a mutation in production trends has been noted, and feeling that the immediate future of the industry depends on national and international moves prevails.

Aware of News

That shell into which Hollywood is popularly supposed to withdraw in times of stress is no more. With radios at every studio tuned to news programs the greater part of the day, much to the despair of efficiency experts, with a whetted appetite for news from abroad, and from the national scene, with tickers telling of various moves by the internationalists, and with an apprehension of events to come, Hollywood is aware not only of the immediate effects of world chaos upon it, but of the long range effects upon its future.

Generally conceding loss for some time of all that is Europe and England insofar as motion picture markets are concerned, the production side of the industry this week gave its first allegiance to the American market more pointedly than before. Greater predominance of stories based on "the American theme" in revised production announcements of companies has been noted; executives generally have accepted the idea of building their programs to obtain from the American markets their production costs and whatever plus can be had.

Hollywood today is moulding with serious consideration new requirements for new story selection as a result of influences of the European War on public entertainment tastes.

The exhibitor customers of Hollywood studios will note that story editors assigned to the task of selecting material are fast resolving that the basic need at this time is "light entertainment," or, as further explained by one story executive, "we want new material for motion pictures to be cheerful, entertaining, and away from European problems," voicing the demands from exhibitors as obtained from noticeable customer expression.

Flexibility Stressed

There is hardly a studio which does not have a flexible production plan, under which topical pictures of strictly American interest can be turned out quickly.

How farflung the interests of the American public are in forgetting the dire events abroad is found in several incidents.

Twentieth Century-Fox has changed the title of "I Married a Nazi," identical title of the Liberty Magazine story from which it was taken, to "The Man I Married."

Republic changed the title of "The Refugee," previewed as that after being made as "Doctors Don't Tell," to "Three Faces West."

The same studio set back on its production schedule "The Lady from New Orleans," described as a heavy drama, in favor of "Hit Parade of 1940," in order to provide a high budgeted, light entertainment.

Charles Chaplin, while insisting that "Production No. 6," a satire on Hitler and Mussolini, will be released in September, is reported to be preparing a prologue stating that it is a "satire."

Embarkation by various studios upon programs of making pictures whose primary appeal is designed for the populaces of the Americas has been recorded.

Having heard reports from the field that what is described as "escapist" entertainment is being sought, Hollywood producers are seeking light comedies and the like for immediate future production.

Cooperating in Charity Drive

Admittedly with many problems of its own as witness the recent statements of Edward Small, Samuel Goldwyn, George Schaefer et al regarding the foreign market, the industry in Hollywood nevertheless is doing what was expected of it—by giving whole-hearted cooperation to the biggest charity drive of its history. Campaigns are under way to have everyone, from backlot worker and stenographer to top executive and talent, contribute to the Red Cross and the Allied Relief Fund, which is aiding the unfortunates of the war in Europe.

With mass meetings at each studio last Monday (15th), the drive was launched. Top executives addressed the individual studio gatherings following a radio program over Warners' Station KFWB and other local stations.

By August 1st three road show troupes will take off, each composed of top actors, writers and directors and planning to make 21 one-night appearances in theatres, public auditoriums, etc., admissions to which will go to the Funds' drive.

Armed forces of the United States have indicated in more ways than one their "willingness" to cooperate in studios' efforts to portray them.

As disclosed previously in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, two Army officers in Hollywood some months ago obtained cooperation of studios and newsreels in the matter of propagandizing U. S. Army recruiting. A short time later, Harry M. Warner, who had attended a meeting of Hollywood producers in Y. Frank Freeman's office at Paramount, announced a series of short subjects based on U. S. armed forces.

This week, Mr. Warner put behind him the dated Warner historical short series, which told of the days of the forming of the Constitution, etc., and decided in their place to make a series of subjects, all but one in color, concerning present day activities of the U. S. armed forces.

Three have been finished thus far. They are "Young America Flies" and "Passing in Review," both in color, and "Service with the Colors."

Next in the series will be "March On, Marines!" which will have a cast headed by William Lundigan, William T. Orr and Henry O'Neill, the trio to be starred for the remainder of the series. Following the Marine short, there will be one concerning the Navy. Then comes one on the Tank Corps, to be called "The Tanks Are Coming." B. Reeves Eason will direct the series, and Owen Crump will write the screenplays.

Aviation Stories Stressed

Exact indication of cooperation begin given studios in the preparation and shooting of pictures which bear on the Armed forces can be seen with the example of Paramount's "I Wanted Wings." Following the usual procedure, the War Department approved the script, and authorized full cooperation and assistance and use of Randolph Field, Tex., also in addition assigned Capt. C. R. Storrie, director of all cadet flying for the U. S. Army Air Corps, to confer with Producer Arthur Hornblow, Jr., Director Theodore Teed and technicians concerning the flying scenes.

Frank Borzage, whose last directorial effort at MGM, was "The Mortal Storm," has been assigned the reins on "Flight Command," which will star Robert Taylor in a story of Navy aviation. Retired Commander Harvey Haislip and John Sutherland wrote the story. J. Walter Ruben will produce.

Alexander Korda, English producer making his headquarters currently in Hollywood, announced that his next picture would be "The Conqueror," story of Hernando Cortez' conquest of Mexico. It will be filmed in Technicolor, with Merle Oberon starred.

War Atmosphere

Another war hint was brought to the attention of Hollywood last week with the arrival there of Lieut. Jacinto B. Chong, of the Signal Corps of the Philippine Island Army, to take a short course in motion picture production under the auspices of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. He will take the same course given United States Army Signal Corps officers in film production.

Other indications that Hollywood is being affected by the war include:

Various benefits are being scheduled, such as the one on July 28 in which Paulette Goddard and Bill Tilden play net doubles at Lake Arrowhead.

Bette Davis has proposed, via Warners publicity department, a scheme under which special three cent stamps could be exchanged for the autograph of any star, and a special five cent stamp for an autographed picture. The stamps would be made available at all American theatres and the money paid for the stamps for autographs and pictures would go to the Red Cross.

PASS ON ORDINANCE COST TO EXHIBITOR

Philadelphia exhibitors will have to bear the cost of enforcement if they expect the police to enforce the ordinance passed earlier this year prohibiting auto parking in front of theatres.

When many exhibitors complained that cars were being parked in front of their theatres, it was found that the city had not provided the Bureau of Streets and Highways with the necessary funds for the "No Parking" signs.

Exhibitors were notified that if they would pay for the signs, two at $10 each, the police would see to it that the letter of the law was observed.

WILDWARD HO in the most fantastic tale of lawlessness ever recorded ...of blood-streaked days when terrorism spanned the prairies . . . when mounted buccaneers signed bank checks with lead bullets . . . and laughed, loved and plundered to make burning pages in the history of the West. . . .

U. S. PRIZE FIGHT BAN OFF, RKO TAKES OVER

RKO Will Distribute Jenkins-Armstrong Bout Pictures for Pathe; First Since July, 1912

National distribution of prize fight films, outlawed by Federal legislation for 28 years, was to resume as a legitimate practice this week with Pathe News filming and RKO Radio Pictures handling the pictures of the bout of Lew Jenkins, world's lightweight champion, vs. Henry Armstrong, world's welterweight champion, scheduled for Wednesday night at the Polo Grounds in New York City.

Banned in 1912

From July 31, 1912 when the Sims act forbidding interstate commerce in fight films was passed until July 1, 1940 when it was repealed through the efforts of Senator William Warren Barbour, the regular motion picture industry had no interstate distribution of such films and during the 28 years the so-called "sports crowd" had a monopoly on the business, despite the law.

In the early days of the industry prize fight films contributed to the development of new picture making techniques in addition to being popular screen entertainment. In July, 1894 the first prize fight films were made at Edison's "Black Maria" studio in West Orange, N. J. The principals were Michael Leonard, "Beau Brummel of the prize ring" and Jack Cushing, contender for the lightweight crown. Six of the ten rounds were recorded by the Kinetograph and nearly 1,000 feet of film was used, a record.

James Corbett, heavyweight titleholder was signed in August, 1894, to the first exclusive star contract in film history, Corbett fought six one-minute rounds for the camera and gave the pre-arranged knock-out blow at the end of the sixth. The Corbett-Fitzsimmon fight in Carson City was filmed there and faked in Philadelphia and both versions did good business. Biograph introduced photography under lights at the Jeffries-Sharkey fight in 1899. The fight film business continued until adverse reaction followed the Jack Johnson-Jim Jeffries fight at Reno on July 4, 1910.

The Johnson-Jeffries film grossed, according to reports, $300,000 for the old General Film Company. But in some places exhibition of the film occasioned race-riots and Johnson's activities after the fight were not such to quiet public protest. On July 31, 1912 Congress passed the Sims bill which made interstate traffic in fight films unlawful.

A negro and a white man were the contenders in the last legal fight for film purposes in 1912 and in the first since the law was repealed this year.

RKO promised prints for the metropolitan, New York area the day following the Jenkins-Armstrong fight and on the second day for theatres throughout the country. Exclusive film rights to fight were obtained in a deal with the Madison Square Garden Corporation and Mike Jacobs, fight promoter and head of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club. Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee of Paramount, is chairman of the board of directors of Madison Square Garden. Ned E. Depinet, vice-president, concluded the arrangement for RKO.

During the 28 years that the law against the interstate traffic in prize fight films was on the books it was openly violated, in many instances. When independent distributors were caught crossing state lines with fight films they were often compelled to pay a $1,000 fine but usually went right on with the distribution of the picture.

The "sports crowd" which controlled the fight films made during the 28 years of the Sims act sold some pictures widely but complete national distribution was not possible. Many exhibitors did not wish to violate the law; others became discouraged when motion picture practices were violated, as when prints were sold simultaneously to competing theatres.

Major distributors were never barred from handling fight pictures in other countries. Universal handled the distribution of the Joe Louis-Arturo Godoy fight of February 15, 1940 for all foreign countries except possessions of the U. S. The promoter of that film was Jack Dietz' Sports Attractions which specialized in the filming of such events. The film rights were bought from Mr. Jacobs.

The future of the fight film business is uncertain at present. The fact that RKO Pathe obtained the films rights to the first big bout after the Sims law was repealed indicated, it was said, that a major picture company is willing to pay more than formerly paid by the "sports crowd" for such rights. It was reported that RKO and Paramount might bid for the film rights to the next big fight; a joint distribution set-up was said to be possible.

RKO expects that the Jenkins-Armstrong films will be widely received because there is no longer the legal difficulty for exhibitors out of the state and because a regular production crew might be expected to obtain better films and better sound than in former fight pictures. It was said that the rentals would probably be about the same.

"MILLIONAIRE KID'S" FIGHT FILM REPEALER

Senator William Warren Barbour's (Rep., N. J.) interest in sponsoring the Congressional repeal of the Federal ban on interstate transportation of fight films, enacted over the last week-end in June with almost unprecedented lack of opposition and attention, goes back some 29 years, when the Senator was then reigning national amateur heavyweight boxing champion.

Warren Barbour, billed as "The Millionaire Kid," was generally conceded to be the chief "white hope" to end the conquests of big, black Champion Jack Johnson. Boxer Barbour, son of a wealthy Jersey manufacturer, was all for the match, but his parents were adverse to his turning professional. He took his gloves off for his parents.

Shortly afterward, the Federal fight film ban was enacted, in 1912, because of Johnson's mauling of white fighters and because of some spectacular personal behaviour in Chicago.

Senator Barbour, in Congress, long felt that the ban was an archaic handicap to the sport, got his friend, Jack Dempsey, to so testify before a Congressional committee. The repeal resulted.

Duvivier Here To Direct Films

By Staff Photographer

JULIEN DUVIVIER

Julien Duvivier, French director and producer, arrived in New York Monday aboard the Excambion, en route to the coast where he will produce and direct two films for Transcontinental Pictures. Paul Graetz, head of Transcontinental, met him.

While it is definite that the pictures are to be made on the coast both men pointed out Monday that no arrangement for a studio had been set. That will depend upon the major company from whom a story assignment and story material would be obtained and through whom they would release.

Mr. Duvivier's last two Transcontinental productions, made in France, were "The Phantom Wagon" and "Cavalcade of France." Columbia has already released the former in this country and will release the latter in the fall. Prior to those films Mr. Duvivier made "Un Carnet du Bal" and "Altitude 3,200" for Transcontinental. The negative of the latter is in the company's closed office in Paris, and, "If Mr. Graetz obtains the negative it will be released here also," the director said.

The Paris office was closed one day before the German entry and the personnel moved to Bordeaux, hoping to maintain business. But, Mr. Graetz said, he will never do business in France again, so long as the present government and situation continue. Mr. Duvivier said he intended to go back "eventually," adding that his commitments here would occupy many months.

Asked what had happened to the many personalities in French cinema circles, Mr. Duvivier said he knew little of their whereabouts. Marcel Carne and Pierre Chenal, directors, both under contract to Transcontinental, were in the army when last heard of, he said. He said he met Louis Jouvet, the actor, in Bordeaux, who expressed a desire to come to America.

Some of the productions for which Mr. Duvivier is noted in addition to aforementioned include "Golgotha," "Poil de Carrott," "Marie Chapdelaine," "Pepe le Moko," "La Bandera," "Le Golem," "End of a Day," and "They Were Five."

KALTENBORN AND QUIGLEY DEBATE NEWS RESPONSIBILITY OF RADIO

Commentators Dare to Adventure with Opinions Because They Write Their Words on Water, Says Herald Publisher

"Radio Responsibility," an editorial by Martin Quigley in Motion Picture Herald and Motion Picture Daily, criticising treatment of news on the air by "commentators," has resulted in written debate between him and H. V. Kaltenborn, dean of the air columns.

Mr. Quigley contends for publication responsibility and as sharp a demarcation between news facts and editorial opinion as is had in competent, responsible American journalism of the daily press of the printed page.

The editorial set forth: "Freedom of speech in a medium so universal as radio does not entail a license for glib and gabby commentators to indulge in dramatic recitations in the guise of new reports. . . . Yet, the ether waves are crowded with wise guys, pretending an insight into important affairs about which they actually know nothing. With an absurd posturing they tell all—'confidentially.' Developments which gravely affect the welfare of humanity the world over are played with, obviously for emotional effect, as preface to a ringing pronouncement for some commercial product. . . ."

Mr. Kaltenborn has written in defense of the technique and practise of which he has been the founder—taking the subject the while, more personally than Mr. Quigley indicates as the intent. In the following letter, Mr. Kaltenborn states his case and position:

TO THE EDITOR, Motion Picture Daily:

I have just read the article by Martin Quigley in your issue of June 28th, entitled "Radio Responsibility." This mentions me as having lately "been heard in forensic and imaginative harange in periods when he was supposed to be presenting the news and offering reasoned comment thereon."

Obviously, it is matter of opinion whether or not a man is forensic, whether or not his harange is imaginative. Nor do I object to anyone saying that my talk is forensic. According to Webster, this means that it is an argument presented with some measure of rhetorical competence. Nor do I object to having my discourse spoken of as imaginative. There can be no competent interpretation without the use of the imagination. But I don't accept the conclusion that because I am forensic and because I have imagination that I am unable to present the news and offer reasoned comment thereon.

And I particularly object to linking my name and mine alone with the implication that it is I who "disseminate rumor, gossip and unverified report, and then proceed nonchalantly to let the whole matter vanish into thin air without correction and re-statement when the truth is learned." That is exactly what I do not do; that is exactly what certain other people who broadcast news do. And the reason why I have won first place as America's premier radio commentator in so many polls, including your own, is just because I know how to distinguish between unverified rumor and probable fact. I also object to your linking my name and mine alone with your statement, "with an absurd posturing they—the radio commentators—tell all—'confidentially.'" That obviously refers to a radio program called "Confidentially Yours," with which I have nothing to do. I agree with almost everything that Martin Quigley says about radio responsibility, but as the first man on the air to interpret news, the only man who has been at it continuously for eighteen years and the particular man who seems to have the largest following of the news commentators at this particular time, I object to being branded as the one man who seems to be breaking what you think are the rules.

And while I am at it, I would just like to point out one absurdity that is contained in Quigley's article and that is also contained in the code of the National Association of Broadcasters. I refer to the attempt to draw distinctions between editorializing and news interpretation. Every Washington correspondent, every newspaper columnist, every man who writes in every newspaper from foreign capitals under a by-line is constantly editorializing in the sense that he is selecting, emphasizing, interpreting and pointing up the news.

There is no such thing as completely dispassionate, disinterested reporting. If it were that, it would also be colorless and, to a large extent, worthless. The test, it seems to me, is whether a man has a conscience, a sense of fairness and the competence to do his job well. If he has these three and they are supplemented by good radio technique, he can be effective as a commentator. As you and I both know, there is now current an attempt to turn even the most competent and best established commentators into intellecual eunuchs. I expect to continue to resist this effort. When I am no longer able to do so, I will get off the air. I hope, for the sake of radio and its great service to the American public in presenting intelligent news analysis, that the current attempt to cripple the effectiveness of radio commentators will not succeed.

And let me repeat that I heartily agree that every news analyst should carry a keen sense of responsibility to the microphone whenever he approaches it.

Sincerely yours,

H. V. KALTENBORN.

CONGRESSMAN RENEWS COMMUNISM CHARGE

Representative William P. Lambertson, Republican, Kansas, this week renewed his charge of Communism in the theatrical profession and challenged Actors' Equity Association to go publicly on record that seven members of its governing council whom he named in a previous statement were not Communist or "fellow travelers."

His reference in "The Congressional Record" last week to Sam Jaffe, Philip Loeb, Emily Marsh, Hiram S. Sherman, Elroy MacLean, Edith L. Van Cleve and Alan Hewitt as "seven Communists now on the governing council of Equity" drew a vigorous denial from the association officials and a demand from Miss Van Cleve for "proof or public retraction."

To this Mr. Quigley has made reply in discussion of the principles and practises involved in a letter which follows:

TO MR. H. V. KALTENBORN:

This issue, the problem and the menace of radio practices, is the one important aspect of my editorial, your letter of response and this reply. The fundamental point is that the journalism of an American free press acquired rights and now maintains status by a sharp cut line between news reporting of facts and editorial discussion of the facts from points of view, positions of opinion. The radio, in assuming functions of the press, is but a new mechanism performing the same function of communication. The radio's responsibilities are identical.

Radio, in pursuit of entertainment color no doubt, has slipped, perhaps unwittingly, back toward the technique of the European journalism so persistently devoted to selling its audience points of view, ideologies. This is a turning back, by the new medium, from the especially American and intensely democratic principles of the printed page of the daily press.

The reference to your distinguished name in my discussion has aimed not at designating you as a chief offender, but rather to point sharply to the progress of the practices concerned. You make precedent and pattern.

The fact is that radio broadcasting, and its news reports and commentaries take license from the fact that they are like words written on water, with no check for the consumer but his own faulty memory. This characteristic fact positively increases the responsibility of radio, calling for standards more exacting than those which may appropriately be insisted upon in any other means of communication.

In assuming functions formerly reserved to the newspaper radio cannot escape the responsibilities inherent in the dissemination of news and comment. Rather it must be responsive to all of these and, in addition to those, peculiar responsibilities which arise out of the nature of the medium itself.

Further, expression of opinion must be founded on some policy. Radio, whether it seeks it or not, has become a publisher. Are we to expect now that, just as we recognize an Ochs policy in the New York Times, a Pulitzer policy in the St. Louis Post Dispatch, we are to have a Sarnoff policy, a Paley policy, a McCosker policy on the air? Or is it to be a Kaltenborn policy, a Raymond Gram Swing policy, a Gabriel Heatter policy?

Publication, by type or electron, makes responsibility, personal and institutional, inescapable.

In accepting the terms "forensic" and "imaginative" as descriptive of your efforts your attitude, perhaps, is clarified. It seems, then, in presenting a news development to a radio audience you think it fit and proper to present an argumentative thesis, a solo debate with imaginative flourishes, forensically in support of or in opposition to particular parties and causes at issue. Incidentally, I find Webster defines "forensic" as "argumentative; an exercise in debate; an argumentative thesis"—and not, as you assert, "an argument presented with some measure of rhetorical competence."

I doubt that your reputation as America's premier commentator is based on an assumed ability to distinguish between unverified rumor and probable fact, for the reason that such ability is an attribute only of a prophet. There is no such thing in the human sense as an ability to anticipate what is and what is not probable fact in the case of headline news developments. Many rumors may promptly be dismissed by a person of knowledge and experience as improbable, but in many other instances it is perilous business to attempt to guess what is a probable fact—especially when the thoughts and emotions of millions of the public are to be influenced by the pronouncement.

The article to which you refer did not attempt to draw a distinction between editorializing and news-interpretation. As far as I am concerned, they are one and the same thing. The distinction which I did attempt to draw is between editorializing and news-reporting, which the article insisted "are two distinct publication functions which must be kept separate and distinct if the end result is to be fair and legitimate, on the radio and elsewhere."

It is true that Washington and foreign correspondents, columnists and other by-line writers editorialize in the sense of selecting, emphasizing, interpreting and pointing up the news. Alongside of this material, but most separately, every responsible journal publishes the straight, unadorned news in so far as it is able to get it.

It is likewise true that there is no such thing as completely disinterested news reporting—any more than any other human effort is completely disinterested. But as you, and all other experienced journalists know, there is such a thing as a straight news story which fulfills that most vital function in a democracy of giving the reader the news upon which he may, if he wishes, form his own opinion and not be wholly dependent upon the opinion of someone else. That is what the newspaper reader is entitled to. That also is what the radio listener is entitled to.

It is not enough that a man thinks he has a conscience, a sense of fairness and a competence to do his job well. The dictators may think, and probably do, that they have all these qualifications. The public is entitled to the news, straight and plain, first. After that the editorializing, news interpretation and what-not.

It is hardly to be denied that competent news reporting by radio may fulfill a great public service. As to news interpretation a myriad of questions arise. The news interpreter obviously must possess an extraordinary ability, knowledge, experience and —most particularly—judgment. And even with all of these attributes it probably is not humanly possible that it can be done and done well at the moment of a great news development.

For instance, Mr. Kaltenborn, on June 23rd, the day news of the Franco-German armistice came through you opened your broadcast with the simple sentence, "France is no more." Before finishing your broadcast you described the development as "an episode of but a moment in the history of a great nation and a great people." The effectiveness of the radio commentator here, it would seem, was to add confusion and not clarity to the public mind.

Elsewhere in this same broadcast you said:

"And wait until you get the Italian terms for the armistice, and you will see what happens to that part of France which Germany doesn't take for hers; for we have yet to hear what ports in Southern France on the Mediterranean Italy will ask for herself, as Germany has already asked for all other parts of France."

Here obviously you subscribed to certain "probable facts," not without some judgment and reason, but still, the effect was a wrong impression in the minds of millions of your listeners.

We indeed agree that every news analyst should carry a keen sense of responsibility to the microphone whenever he approaches it. But he needs to carry with him a great deal more. He needs, we think, a policy which provides for stating the news, plainly, simply, factually—without the artifices of the stage or the political platform. He needs sharply to distinguish between reporting the news and whatever interpretation or analysis he may wish to place upon the news about which the public already has been informed.

He may be either an editorial writer or a reporter. With respect to timely developments he cannot be both—without violation of the traditions built by valuable experience in journalism, without endangering the stream of true, factual knowledge which the people of a democracy have vital need of and without, on occasion, becoming a prophet without honor.

MARTIN QUIGLEY.

The editorial by Mr. Quigley, precipitating this discussion appeared in Motion Picture Daily of June 28 and Motion Picture Herald dated June 29.

LOUISIANA FILM MEASURES DROPPED

A bill to tax motion picture chains which had passed the Louisiana House by a big majority was killed last week by the State Senate. The tax would have been $50 per house on two theatre chains and on up to $200 per theatre on circuits operating "in excess of 50 theatres anywhere in the nation."

Pre-release Holdovers On "Heaven" Mount

Warner Brothers' "All This and Heaven, Too," though in pre-release engagements only since July 1st, has had 35 holdovers, to mid-week, the company's home office in New York announced, on Wednesday, adding that most of these holdover bookings had occurred in the second week of the picture's pre-releasing. The picture on Thursday entered its third week at the Radio City Music Hall, New York City.

Cooperative Ads Cut by RKO; Others Unchanged

The decision of RKO this week to cut its budget for cooperative advertising with exhibitors by 75 per cent, will have no effect on the newspaper and local advertising policies of the other film companies.

Officials of RKO would not comment on the cut in this part of the advertising budget but it was reported that the action was taken to eradicate "certain evils" in cooperative advertising with exhibitors.

Warner Brothers was the first of the major companies to announce that cooperative advertising had been dropped. In February, 1938 that company discontinued its cooperative advertising policy and Mort Blumenstock, publicity and advertising manager, said, "Cooperative advertising as it has been practiced is going to be dropped. We feel we have been imposed upon by some exhibitors." In 1938 Warners adopted a policy that would give it direct control over its newspaper advertising. That policy has not been changed.

In August of 1938 Robert Gillham, advertising and publicity director of Paramount, announced that that company had decided to eliminate cooperative advertising. He pointed out that at that time 40 percent of the company's advertising budget went to cooperative ads, while in 1933 the percentage was only 11. Paramount, however, resumed its cooperative advertising policy.

Charles E. McCarthy, advertising and publicity director of Twentieth Century-Fox, said that there would be no change in the company's cooperative advertising policy.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has held the position for some time that cooperative advertising with exhibitors is a good policy whenever the picture and the situation warrants such attention. Howard Dietz, advertising and publicity director, said that the company was not curtailing cooperative advertising but "we are continuing and the cooperation will increase."

United Artists has been one of the companies which has found cooperative advertising successful.

Monroe Greenthal, exploitation director, said, "There has been no change in our policy. On cooperative ads we spend dollar for dollar with the exhibitors on amounts over his regular budget."

Universal cut its cooperative advertising appropriation in 1938 to 1939 a "drastic cut" over the preceding year and now, generally speaking, does not use that type of advertising.

Columbia has used cooperative advertising on certain pictures, in certain locations. In February, 1939, Maurice Bergman, director of advertising and publicity, said, "We are sticking to our original premise that where there should be cooperative advertising we do it."

Monogram and Republic, on account of their distribution systems, regularly do no cooperative advertising with exhibitors.

The total spent by the film companies on cooperative advertising has been estimated at between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000. Present indications are that the figure may be reduced considerably.

CLIMAX IS DUE ON CONSENT DECREE TALKS; U. S. FILES SCHINE ANSWERS

Action Monday Expected to Indicate Progress Made on Negotiations; Reports Heard of "Separate Peace" Plan

A draft crystallizing the fruits of negotiation between the Government and the defendant major picture concerns, so far, was circulated among executives in New York late Tuesday of this week. Late into Wednesday as The Herald went to press this draft was on the conference table at the Bar Association Building in Forty-fourth Street.

In the Wednesday session it appeared that the following points were assured of inclusion in any final document that might be evolved:

Pictures to be sold in blocks of not to exceed five in number.
Blind buying to be eliminated—with trade shows to be held in exchange centers.
Pictures to be bought and sold only within exchange territory.
All buyers, old and new, to stand on a par in trading, past records not to affect negotiations.

Additions and amendments to various elements of the draft were expected to be in process through the weekend.

The six-weeks' negotiations for an out-of-court settlement of the Government's "key" New York anti-trust suit against the major motion picture companies is due for a climax on Monday morning, July 22nd in Federal court, before Judge Henry W. Goddard in New York. An expected application made then for a long postponement of the trial, probably until fall will indicate that there are good prospects for agreeing on a consent decree.

"Ultimatum" Reported

It had been reported in New York that the Department of Justice had served an "ultimatum" on the majors that unless a basis for a consent decree was worked out by August 1st the suit would be returned to trial, but there appears to be no foundation for this.

On Monday Judge Goddard granted the eighth adjournment of the trial, until July 22d. After granting the application for a further delay in the trial, an action which indicated some progress was being made in the negotiations between representatives of the Department of Justice and industry attorneys, the Judge conferred privately with J. Stephen Doyle, Special U. S. Assistant Attorney General. In court Mr. Doyle said it was believed that progress is being made, a statement which was not definite enough to indicate the present state of the settlement talks.

The most important development of the week was the consideration of a separate settlement with the five theatre-owning defendants, because Universal, Columbia and United Artists were reported to be holding out against any consent decree settlement. Attorneys for those three companies believe that the case against them is of a different kind than that against the "Big Five." The three companies were also reported to be especially opposed to any settlement which would eliminate, for them, block booking.

Escape Clause Sought

The other five companies, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox, Warner Brothers, Paramount and RKO Radio, were reported to be willing to agree to some kind of a consent decree provided there was incorporated an "escape clause" so that the agreement could be voided if it were found unworkable. The motive activating the theatre owning companies was said to be an eagerness to restore harmony to the industry at a time when all branches must work together to help make up foreign revenue losses.

The compromise agreement like all such proposals involves the yielding by both sides on certain points. The Government it is understood has agreed to postpone consideration of the question of theatre divorcement and the five companies are said to have agreed "in principle" to local buying, elimination of blind buying and to an arbitration system for the industry.

None of the proposals have been put into final form but the "Big Five" were reported to have agreed to certain definite reforms, as the following:

(a) Trade showings before selling.
(b) Local buying.

Among the benefits to be derived from such reforms are:

1. Exhibitors will have the right of selection of product.
2. National and affiliated circuits will have to compete in bidding for product.
3. Product will have to be purchased in the respective exchange area of the theatres served.

Separate "Peace" Reported

Rumors of a basis for a separate "peace" with the five theatre owning companies followed reports that the settlement talks had reached a dead-end because the other three majors would not agree to participate in any more conferences.

Arbitration, one of the more difficult reforms to put into practice, was subject to considerable discussion this week. The problems of who shall be on the boards, who pay the expenses, what shall be the jurisdiction of the boards and what appeal, if any, still have not been finally answered. It was reported that among the problems subject to arbitration will be discrimination, overbuying and clearance.

MYERS DATES A "NEW DEAL"

Abram F. Myers, general counsel of Allied States Association, representing chief investigator of the Government's anti-trust prosecution of the majors, in a message to the convention of Northwest Allied, last week said, "The great reforms, which I believe will be ushered in by next Fall, would not have been possible without the loyal support Allied has received from you and other regional units."

"If, as I believe, we are going to have a new deal with fair trade practices, administered by impartial arbitrators, you will need a strong regional association to take advantage of it," Mr. Myers continued.

Local Monopolies In 37 Cities and Towns are Listed

The United States Department of Justice, though participating in "consent decree," talks in its anti-trust suit against the majors in New York, is pursuing its cases against some of the large independent circuits; and, in the first of the "trust suits in the field"—the one in Buffalo, accusing the Schine Circuit—filed last Thursday additional details in a bill of particulars in Buffalo Federal Court. Highlights of the first particulars listed appeared in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, July 13th, page 13.

The papers were filed by U. S. Attorney George Grobe. The defendants have 40 days in which to answer. Trial, if all procedures are observed, is expected to start in November.

Charge Local Monopolies

The particulars charge the Schines with maintaining local monopolies in 37 cities and towns, mostly in New York and Ohio. It lists theatres which, it charged, had been given preference or protection in film bookings by the distributors; it names theatres, acquired by the Schine interests, which, after their acquisition, had been given priority over competing theatres by the distributors; and it lists the names and locations of theatres competing with Schine, over which the latter had been granted priority.

Names and locations of houses which Schine acquired during the last several years are listed:

"Local Competitive Factors"

The government states in its bill of particulars that the term "local competitive factors" in its complaint includes the price offered by an exhibitor for the privilege of exhibiting a picture, and that all the distributor defendants have disregarded such factors in licensing motion pictures.

Competing exhibitors referred to in another section of the complaint are listed as Hubert P. Wallace, Auburn; Sidney J. Cohen, Buffalo; Michael Boumansour, Malone; Ralph T. Kemper, formerly of Shelby, O., and now of Buffalo; Carl Brinton Moore, Van Wert, O., and Peter C. Vournakis, Watertown.

In response to a paragraph in the defendant's demand for a bill of particulars, the Government declares competitors that Schine has forced out of business, as alleged, include John Buchman, of Delaware, O., and that competitors Schine has "attempted" to force out of business are Hubert P. Wallace, Auburn; Reliance Theatres, Inc., Lockport; Emerson W. Long, Mt. Vernon, O., and Carl B. Moore, Van Wert, O.

The Government also states that in instances in which it is claimed that Schine defendants threatened to build a theatre in opposition to another exhibitor relate to Leo Kessel, of Lancaster, O., and Emerson W. Long, of Van Wert, O.

Theatres which it is claimed Schine constructed in opposition to another exhibitor include the Auburn, Auburn; Riverside, Buffalo; Vernon, Mt. Vernon, O., and the Van Wert, Van Wert, O.

Exhibitors other than Schine who allegedly have been deprived of desirable product or runs, and the period of such deprivations, follow:

Theater	Exhibitor	Period of Deprivation
Capital, Auburn, N. Y.	Hubert P. Wallace	Oct. 1, 1934, to date.
Star, Delaware, O.	John Buchman	July 1, 1936, to Mar. 29, 1938.
Palace, Lockport, N. Y.	Reliance Theatres, Inc.	Oct. 21, 1933, to 1936.
Memorial, Mt. Vernon, O.	Emerson W. Long	Dec. 31, 1934, to July, 1935.
Moose, Norwalk, O.	Joseph H. Felter	July, 1935, to Oct., 1936.
Ohio, Van Wert, O.	Carl B. Moore	August, 1935, to date.

Charge "Unreasonable" Protection

The government alleges that Schine defendants announced the proposed construction and opening of a theatre in the neighborhood of another exhibitor at Lancaster and Mt. Vernon, O., and that Schine took an interest in a theatre site in the neighborhood of another exhibitor at Malone, N. Y., and that the nature of such interest was an option to purchase real property.

Schine defendants, "or some of them," it is charged, acquired superior title in a theatre controlled and operated by another exhibitor, and took over its control and operation in the instance of the Seneca, theretofore operated by Richard DeToto.

Schine took "unreasonable" protection over other exhibitor in the instances of the following theatres, according to the government: American, Canton, N. Y.; Playhouse, Clyde, N. Y., and the Avalon, Lowville, N. Y.

Situations in which it is claimed Schine monopolized first and preferred runs of all the "high-class" feature pictures distributed by distributor defendants are: Ogdensburg, N. Y.; Newark, N. Y.; Delaware, O.; Hudson Falls, N. Y.; Lockport, N. Y.; Carthage, N. Y.; Malone, N. Y.; Mt. Vernon, O.; Norwalk, O.; Norwich, N. Y.; Van Wert, O.

At present, however, the government declares it has no "precise knowledge" of the situations in which Schine allegedly conducted a monopoly.

The government charges that Schine has "demanded and received" unreasonable protection over other exhibitors at Canton, Clyde and Lowville, N. Y.

Names and locations of theatres which it was claimed in the complaint that Schine kept closed are the Strand, Seneca Falls, N. Y., and the Lyric, Mt. Vernon, O.

Schine is alleged to have interfered with arrangements, financial, real estate, contractual, or otherwise, between other exhibitors and third parties for the acquisition of theatre sites, or the acquisition, construction or operation of theatres at Mt. Vernon, O., and Seneca Falls, N. Y., and it is claimed that another exhibitor, Richard DeToto, was prevented from acquiring a theatre or theatre site by reason of such alleged interference.

Exhibitors "Excluded" Named

Names of exhibitors claimed to have been systematically excluded from the opportunity of procuring "high-class" pictures under fair competitive conditions on first or preferred runs, and the location of their theatres follow:

Irving J. Cohen and J. Morris Gaby, Corning, N. Y.; John Buchman, Delaware, O.; N. K. Smith, Glen Falls, N. Y.; Reliance Theatres, Inc., Lockport, N. Y.; Michael Boumansour, Malone, N. Y.; Emerson W. Long, Mt. Vernon, O.; Joseph H. Felter, Norwalk, O.; William C. Smalley, Norwich, N. Y.; Carl B. Moore, Van Wert, O.

John Bahas, Ashland, O., according to the government, is another exhibitor who claims to have either been forced out of business or forced to dispose of his theatre.

Those who claimed to have sustained losses or reduced revenue, according to the bill of particulars, are The Clark Amusement Company, Ft. Covington, Ky., and William C. Smalley, Johnstown, N. Y.

The bill of particulars, nearly 100 pages long and reserving the right to furnish further particulars, bears the signatures of Mr. Grobe, U. S. Attorney for the Western District of New York; Herbert Borkland, special assistant to the Attorney General, and Thorold Deyrup, special attorney.

NATHANSON CITES HIGH WAR TAXES

Though Canadian exhibition has not suffered as much as might be expected under the duress of war, the government in that country is taking much more of the exhibitor's income than it ever did, N. L. Nathanson, head of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, noted while in New York last week on a business trip. Canadian motion picture corporations give 35 per cent of their earnings to government, as federal and provincial income taxes, he said. The war has not seriously affected grosses except in some situations, he said.

New District for Northio Theatres

Tracy Barham, general manager of Northio Theatres, Inc., Cincinnati, has announced creation of a new operating district for northern Ohio, where the company recently took over a number of Shea houses.

George Planck, city manager at Marion, Ohio, becomes district manager, retaining his Marion headquarters. Eldon Dodds, assistant manager of the Palace, Marion, becomes manager. Wallace James, who managed the Paramount at Fremont for Shea, has been appointed city manager there in charge of the Paramount, Strand and Opera House.

Glen Reitz, manager of Shea's Ohio, in Bellevue, becomes city manager for the Ohio and State, succeeding Joe Scanlon, transferred to Zanesville, where the Shea circuit recently took over the houses of Zanesville Theatres, Inc. Phil Cleveland, Shea's manager of the Clyde, in Clyde, retains the post for Northio.

George Fettick, district booker in Cincinnati, will book all of the 18 theatres in the circuit. Northio, a Paramount subsidiary, started operation six years ago with the Palace and Marion, at Marion.

Set Distribution Deal

Henry Sonenshine of Premier Pictures, Los Angeles, has closed a deal with Screencraft Pictures, Inc., New York, for the distribution rights of "War Angels" for Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Denver and Salt Lake City.

NEW QUOTA PLAN HIT BY BRITISH TRADE AS INADEQUATE FOR NEEDS

Technicians See Production Drop But Are Grateful for Labor Clause; Little Benefit Seen From Empire Film Provision

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

All sections of the British industry have been sharply critical of the Government's new plans for film legislation embracing a monetary quota as alternative to the present quota on a footage basis. The chief protest has been against what is termed the inadequacy of the proposals.

Technicians Protest

Organized exhibitors and producers were to meet this week to discuss the plans. Michael Balcon and Sam Smith have denounced the monetary quota as giving privileges to American companies but no incentive to British producers. The Association of Cine Technicians met last week and Elven O'Day, executive, said the organization was keenly disappointed at the tenor of the plans, although it was grateful for the redeeming feature, the requirement that all British labor be used on quota product. He foresaw fewer films and a reduction in film employment approximating 22 per cent.

Meanwhile the Film Employees Council, representing British studio and theatre employees, is canvassing every member of Parliament in a determined effort to bring about amendment of the Films Act.

Contending the institution of the monetary quota as an alternative to that based on footage is inadequate, the council is appealing for the abolition of the new ruling which permits films made elsewhere in the British Empire to be eligible for the distributors' quota.

The council attacks the plan as contributing nothing to British producers, and as likely to mean a 25 per cent decrease in film employment.

The technicians' group expressed doubt about what was described as the "Empire film loophole." The reference is to the clause in the Government proposals permitting the Board of Trade, acting with the Ministry of Information, to permit the registration for the distributors' quota of films made elsewhere in the British Empire.

It is understood that this clause, however, is not as broad a privilege as at first believed. Not all films are included and such Empire films must be submitted to the Government on an individual basis. Only after these films are approved by the Government may they be included in the distributors' quota. It is believed probable that propaganda films will be given preferential consideration, including films made elsewhere in the Empire which would have some value from an Empire propaganda viewpoint.

It is considered possible that American companies may avail themselves of the opportunity by making quota films in Canada, but it is apparent that the regular run of small budget films thus made would not be permitted by the British Government for registration under the distributors' quota.

[There is no indication in New York that American companies at present could or would consider production in Canada, since all inquiry into the situation shows that Canadian technical facilities are inadequate at the present time to handle any large scale feature production.]

The following are the new quota provisions agreed upon between the British Board of Trade and the seven American film distributors in England.

1. The present Cinematograph Films Act, 1938, to remain in force unchanged.

2. A monetary quota system to be introduced as an alternative to the present act.

3. This monetary quota will take effect as of April 1, 1940, and will run concurrently with the present act. Provisions of the monetary quota therefore continue after November 1, 1940, and are independent of the exchange agreement.

4. Each company must submit evidence to the Board of Trade at the end of each quota year that it has fulfilled its quota obligation either under the existing act or under the new monetary quota system.

5. The following are the principal provisions of the monetary quota.

(a) The monetary quota will apply to feature films only. The short-subject quota will continue to be fulfilled under the present act.

(b) Each company must make or acquire one British feature film of at least 7,000 feet in length for every 100,000 feet of American feature film registered during the quota year.

Excess Allowed

An excess of not more than 10,000 feet over a multiple of 100,000 feet will not require an additional British film. Thus the average allowed on 400,000 feet is 410,000, not 440,000 feet.

(c) British films made or acquired under monetary quota system must fulfill all requirements of a British renter quota film under the present act exclusive of cost test.

(d) The total aggregate British labor cost of the British long films thus acquired by a given company for renters' quota must amount to a figure in pounds not less than the figure representing X per cent of the length in feet of the imported feature films registered by such Government during the quota year.

X represents the percentage, as applied to imports, which corresponds to the statutory renters' quota percentage in force in any given year of the present act. The statutory renters' quota percentage for the present quota year ending March 31, 1940, is 22.5 per cent which corresponds to a quota of 29 per cent on imported footage.

For example, a company importing 300,000 feet of American feature film during the current quota year must make or acquire at least three British feature films, the total aggregate British labor cost of which must amount to not less than 87,000 pounds (300,000 times 29 per cent).

(e) The over-all (i. e., British and foreign) labor cost of each single film made or acquired in the expenditure of the foregoing amount must also be not less than three pounds per foot. This is the new quality test for monetary quota films which supersedes the quality test prescribed in the existing act, namely, one pound sterling per foot for single-credit films, three pounds per foot for double-credit films and five pounds per foot for triple-credit films, since such distinctions are eliminated under the monetary quota.

(f) British labor means labor or services of British subjects or persons domiciled in the British Empire.

Tax Protest Continues

British exhibitors are holding rigidly to their insistence that they cannot meet the Government's expressed requirement of an approximate $19,000,000 annually in new taxation on the film industry to help meet Britain's war budget.

Contrary to expectations, the meeting last week of a trade deputation with a Treasury Department official brought no concrete Government proposal. The official merely inquired whether the industry had developed any practicable ideas, and Harry Mears, Cinematograph Exhibitor Association president, head of the exhibitor deputation, replied that they were awaiting Government leads toward a solution.

The Government official tentatively suggested one or two methods, but Mr. Mears insisted none could be accepted without approval by the CEA general council.

Exhibitors say they are willing to accept an appropriate share of the burden, but contend that war time conditions make it impossible for the industry to meet a demand for a specific amount. It is expected the exhibitors will attempt to formulate a completely new theatre tax scale, based on an analysis of the economic feasibility of an increase in admissions.

SUNSET CLOSINGS SET IN BRITAIN

A number of film houses in certain coastal areas of England now close shortly after sunset under new curfew regulations imposed by military authorities. In one town on the eastern coast the film houses on one side of the principal street remain open, while those on the other side are required to close. Operating hours of film houses will be adjusted as the fall approaches and darkness comes earlier, the authorities have indicated.

Photophone Shipments To England Increased

Shipments of RCA Photophone motion picture sound reproducing equipments to England in the first half of 1940 were approximately 57 per cent greater than for the same period of last year despite the economic dislocations caused by the war.

"It is interesting to note that RCA Photophone sound recording apparatus is playing an increasingly important part in the production of British pictures while at the same time gaining steadily with American studios," Van Ness Philip, in charge of the company's international activities, said. Mr. Philip added that in the first half of 1940, 65 per cent of all British pictures were recorded on the company's equipment, comparing with 40 per cent for the same period in 1939.

Australian Circuits Merge

The operating merger of Hoyt's Theatres and Greater Union Theatres is scheduled to be concluded this Summer, according to word reaching New York from Sydney, Australia. It was reported that the boards of directors of the companies affected had already approved the deal. The matter will now be referred to the stockholders.

The Hoyts-Greater Union merger negotiations began over a year ago. A controlling interest in Hoyts circuit is owned by National Theatres Corporation, Twentieth Century-Fox theatre affiliate.

The Man I Married

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Nazi Indictment

"The Man I Married" is an indictment of Hitler and Nazism, more pointed and outspoken than any of its akin predecessors. Adapted from the sensational Liberty Magazine story by Oscar Schisgall, the film first carried the original title, "I Married a Nazi." It pulls no punches, from the showing of Nazis forcing Czecho-Slovaks to clean garbage from the street with their hands to the derisive references to Hitler as "Schicky," derived from what is said to be Hitler's real name, marking of Jewish shops, espionage by the Gestapo, and the demonstration of Nazi laws calculated to make the state supreme.

The story, laid in 1938 prior to the Czecho-Slovakian seizure, tells of the inroads of Nazi propaganda in the United States, the attempts to keep the United States on a friendly basis during Germany's European moves and the propaganda which keeps Germany's residents uninformed.

A talented cast, including Joan Bennett, in what may be termed her best characterization, Francis Lederer, Lloyd Nolan, Anna Sten, Otto Kruger, Maria Ouspenskaya, Ludwig Stossell, Johnny Russell and others, is used.

"Eric," a native born German, takes his American wife, "Carol," and his son from New York, where he has taken out first papers, to Berlin in order to help his father sell his factory. There "Eric," incited by Nazi propaganda, joins the party, carries on an illicit love affair with "Freda," and tells "Carol" he is going to divorce her and obtain custody of their son, to bring him up as a Nazi.

"Eric's" father appeals to him to permit the boy to return to America with his mother, but "Eric" is adamant. Then in a scene which brought gasps to the preview audience, the father tells "Eric" that his mother is Jewish, and that he, "Eric," is half Jewish. "Freda," a witness to the scene, immediately scorns him, and leaves.

"Carol" and the boy return to America, leaving "Eric" to an undisclosed fate. Apart from the main plot is the character, "Kenneth Delane," an American newspaperman who aids and comforts "Carol." It is through his dialogue mostly that Hitler is ridiculed and Hitler's aims exposed.

Sample of satire in the dialogue is found in this limerick recited by "Carol" to "Eric":

"There was a girl named Freda
"Who was awfully fond of the Leader
"She wasn't born, they say.
"She wasn't made that way.
"Der Fuehrer simply decreed her."

Irving Pichel directed, from a screenplay by Oliver H. P. Garrett. Raymond Griffith was Darryl F. Zanuck's associate producer.

Previewed at the Grauman's Chinese Theatre, Hollywood, where the forceful impact of the story made a deep impression on the audience. Gasps and short screams were heard at the denouement.—V. K.

I Married Adventure

(Columbia)

Osa Johnson's Story

Osa Johnson's story of her own and the late Martin Johnson's several exploratory expeditions into Africa and the Equatorial Islands, now on sale in book form and displayed in merchandiser's windows across the nation, is told here in terms of film from the Johnson cameras accompanied by the off-screen narration, which fills in the background information and rounds out the account. Opening with the first footage shot by the Johnsons on safari, the film progresses through twelve years of adventurings, keeping always to the story of the explorers while unreeling such an array of wild animal life and native customs as has never before seen in a single picture. Selection of footage, cutting and timing have been of a kind to add drama to authenticity.

The picture may be called the screen's first autobiography.

All the devices of showmanship employed in connection with previous wild animal pictures apply to this one, which contains all that its predecessors contained plus much they lacked, including, to mention one sequence which might have made a separate production, a mass migration of jungle animals in quest of water. The capture of an orang-outang is another episode among many that justify exhibitor endorsement of the picture in exploitation.

Produced by Mrs. Johnson, who appears with her husband in most of the scenes, the picture profits by Jim Bannon's delivery of the narrative written by Don Clark and Albert Cutty, and by the editing which is credited to Ralph Dixon.

Previewed at studio.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Produced by Osa Johnson. Released by Columbia. Film editor, Ralph Dixon. Narration by Don Clark and Albert Duffy. Narrator, Jim Bannon. Musical director, M. W. Stoloff. P.C.A. No. 5874. Running time, when seen in Hollywood, 78 minutes. Release date, July 24, 1940. General audience classification.

The Boys from Syracuse

(Universal-Mayfair)

Musical Comedy

This Universal picture is a literal translation of George Abbott's successful Broadway musical, "The Boys from Syracuse." It contains six musical numbers by Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart, two newly written and four from the stage production, in its 73 minute running time, and is as merrily mad a plot as ever reached the screen.

Allan Jones and Joe Penner enact the dual roles, respectively, of masters and slaves. Martha Raye, Rosemary Lane, Charles Butterworth, Irene Hervey, Alan Mowbray and Eric Blore are the other principal characters.

The farcical plot supplies a host of exploitation campaigns' bases. After the war between the ancient Greek cities of Syracuse and Ephesus, Syracusans are forbidden in the city of Ephesus. An old merchant from the former city goes to the latter city, seeking a son and the son's slave, twins of the son and son's slave at home. His Syracusan son and the slave follow him and seek to release him when he is captured. It turns out the other twin is the hero of Syracuse, and pet of the duke who reigns. After various mixups, some of which involve the wives of the Ephesus master and slave, the difficulties are solved through a singing contest.

There are many items which are laugh provokers. There is a running gag of "swinging" trumpet fanfare every time the duke leaves or enters a room; there is a taxi meter on the taxi-chariots; the conductor of the "street car" carries a modern change counter; newpapers inscribed on stone are hawked on the streets.

As the first production for Jules Levey's Mayfair Productions, "The Boys from Syracuse" is an auspicious beginning. A. Edward Sutherland directed from a screenplay by Leonard Spigelgass, Charles Grayson and Paul Gerard Smith.

Previewed at the Pantages Theatre, Hollywood, to an audience which laughed heartily at the comedy, and thought generally the musical numbers slowed up the film.—V. K.

We Who Are Young

(MGM)

Story of Poverty

Exhibitors should know that this is a rather grim portrayal of the struggle of two young married people in New York against loss of jobs, preying of loan sharks, dispossession of furniture, going on relief and impending childbirth in the face of poverty. Lana Turner in her first dramatic lead and John Shelton, a newcomer to films, enact the leading roles.

On relief for three months and with his wife nearing childbirth, the man in a frenzy starts digging on a construction job "just to be doing something" and the foreman has him arrested for trespass. The head of the construction company bails him out, gives him a job. Then the

Carolina Moon

Autry in the Ol' South

Republic's singing cowboy, Gene Autry, migrates from the plains of the West to the plantations of the Old South, somewhat rundown and tax burdened but nevertheless housing the hospitality, chivalry and dignity of antebellum days. Gene's job, besides entertaining the help with his singing, is to save the estates from the hands of unscrupulous local business men who try, through subterfuge, to get control of the land.

"Carolina Moon" introduces a new singing star to the screen in the person of Mary Lee. Still in her teens, Miss Lee does much to add to the enjoyment of the picture both with her refreshing personality and her renditions of a number of popular songs, including "Me and My Echo" and the current hit tune "Say Si Si."

Unlike most of Autry's pictures this one has little action and both Gene and Smiley Burnette have to content themselves with pursuing a fox during a hunt. The highlight of the film is Gene dressed as a gentleman-jockey for a steeplechase.

South of Pago Pago

(UA-Small)

South Sea Melodrama

Jon Hall's first film since "Hurricane" offers him again in trunks and a coat of tan as a young chief of natives to whose South Sea Island come pearl hunters bringing gin, guile and avarice. Victor McLaglen is present as the leader of these intruders and Frances Farmer as a white girl of the bar rooms who marries the chief as a means to an end, and ends by dying for him. Gene Lockhart, Douglas Dumbrille and Olympe Bradna are other principals.

Showmen who link the film to "Hurricane" in their exploitation, as the studio has done, may assure their customers that it contains a number of dance routines in the island manner, fisticuffs in plenty, pearl diving sequences of several varieties and many closeups in which the native chief tells the recumbent white girl of his love. At the close of the film all the white people and more natives have met death one way and another, leaving the surviving natives peaceful as before, with the chief taking a new bride of his own kind.

Direction is by Alfred E. Green, from the story and screen play by George Bruce and Kenneth Gamet.

Boys of the City

(Monogram)

East Side Kids Again

Bobby Jordan and Leo Gorcey, wise-cracking kids of "Dead-End," return in another picture that allows them and their gang ample opportunities to spout their flippancies.

To escape the hot city and a court sentence for malicious mischief the East Side Kids consent to visit the home of a wealthy man in the Adirondacks. Enroute their car breaks down and they are reluctantly supplied with accommodations for the night by a judge who has fled the city in fear of his life. The judge is murdered while his niece is kidnapped by an unknown assailant. Many adventures are suffered by the gang in an effort to prove the innocence of their friend and councillor, capturing the murderer and saving the kidnapped niece. Sliding panels, clutching hands, self-playing organs and ghosts in the family graveyard supply the audience with some nervous laughs.

The romantic interest of the picture is held throughout by portrayals by David O'Brien as the youth's councillor, and Ina Gest as the niece of the murdered man. Humor, besides what the gang has to offer in the way of wise-cracks and ad-libs, is supplied by Vince Barnett as the bodyguard and George Humbert as the vegetable peddler. The picture was directed by Joe Lewis.

The Haunted House

(Monogram)

Humorous Mystery

Monogram's youthful starring team of Jackie Moran and Marcia Mae Jones continue to run into adventure and trouble in this, the latest in their series of pictures for Monogram, "The Haunted House." Their portrayals of young reporters trying to free an innocent man charged with murder is abetted by characterizations of George Cleveland and Henry Hall as the local newspaper publisher and attorney, respectively.

Produced by William Lackay under the directorial guidance of Bob McGowan, the locale of the picture is a small town and an old house closed since the murder of its mistress. The story was written by Jack Leonard and Monty Collins.

"Jimmy" (Jackie Moran), office boy in the local newspaper office, and "Millie" (Marcia Mae Jones), niece of the paper's publisher, turn sleuthing reporters in an effort to help a friend, accused of murder, prove his innocence. They succeed, after difficulties, when the murderer returns to the scene of the crime and vindicate themselves in the eyes of those to whom they've caused so much trouble.

The picture progresses in orderly continuity, bringing forth the facts in the case, and contains enough amusing happenings to balance the mystery.

West of Abilene

(Columbia)

Western

"West of Abilene" is the latest in the Charles Starrett western series for Columbia. This time Starrett is one of a group of settlers who have bought land from a land grant company, establishing themselves before the final papers have been signed. The crooked company agent raises the original price and orders the settlers to pay up or get out. The film resolves itself into a seesaw battle between Starrett on one hand and the agent and his gunmen on the other to obtain command of the situation, climaxed by the arrival of a U. S. Cavalry detachment.

The agent is played by Don Beddoe and his principal trigger man is William Pawley. Bruce Bennett plays "Frank," Starrett's brother, and it is he rather than the star who takes care of the romantic element. Marjory Cooley is the girl. The Sons of the Pioneers, who appear in all the Starrett films, play and sing several musical numbers.

"Forsyth," agent for the land grant company, without the company's knowledge, raises the price of the land promised to the settlers $20 an acre. The settlers refuse to pay so "Forsyth" asks the sheriff to evict them. When the sheriff instead shows signs of investigating the deeds, "Chris Matson," a noted gunman, kills him. Through a ruse "Matson" is made sheriff. The settlers retire to a hiding place in the mountains where they are attacked by "Forsyth" and crew. After the cavalry has arrived Starrett follows "Matson," who meanwhile has slain "Forsyth" for his money, to town and kills "Matson" in a gun duel.

Oddity

The latest in the Popular Science series shows how the government has taken care of and protected the lives of water birds who were poisoned when engineers diverted the waters of western rivers for irrigation purposes. Other scenes include a machine invented by Dr. S. Leroy Brown for measuring the distance between two atoms, the new synthetic stockings for women made from coal tar, and an animal hospital in Admore, Pennsylvania, where a new splint for broken bones has been invented, thus saving the lives of animals. Professor Oakes, the Wily Wizard of Waukesha, returns again with a tricky device for saving burnt toast.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Stoogian Slugfest

The murderous but sometimes merry mob, the Three Stooges, swaps slaps and squeals with their customary "roundhouse" tactics. This round of manslaughter finds the trio as a company of menders. When their unfair business ethics, such as puncturing workingmen's dinner pails in an effort to increase their tinkering trade, are discovered, the boys seeks refuge as riveters. With such a setup, students of Stoogian slapstick may be able to picture the proceedings. High altitude and hot rivets provide sequences especially suitable for Stooge stuff. The assaults are as violent as ever with "Curly" being the front man for most of the blitzkrieg bangups. For Stooge fans, the matter may be all the merrier for its many manglings.—Running time, 16 minutes.

Spills for Thrills
(Vitaphone)
A "Thriller-Diller"

Stuntmen have their day and say in this Broadway Brevity, bursting with thrills and spills. Not an expose of how dangerous screen action is faked but rather how film daredevils risk life and limb is the material reported. The stunts run the range from parachute jumps, through riding the rapids to a rousing finale about an automobile crash. The concluding thrill is nerve racking even for the spectator to behold. A bit of comedy has been wisely added to lighten the tension. The miniature is loaded with entertainment dynamite that should perch any audience, susceptible to thrilling excitement, on the narrow edge of the auditorium upholstery.—Running time, 19 minutes.

Life Saving

Paramount has compiled a half dozen practical and unique methods of life saving in the latest Grantland Rice Sportlight. The subject is covered thoroughly from the first steps taken in trying to bring a drowning person to shore up to and including artificial respiration. A comedy angle is included in the reel when two clowns in a swimming pool try, with little success, to save each other from the depths.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Hold "Syracuse" Triple Premiere

For the triple world premiere of Jules Levey's Mayfair Production's "The Boys From Syracuse" in the upstate New York city of that name two airplanes left New York City's La Guardia airport Thursday morning at 11 A. M., arriving in Syracuse about one hour later.

The planes carried film, radio and stage stars, RKO circuit and Universal Picture executives, and men from the newspapers and the motion picture trade press. These were welcomed at the airport, participated in a parade through downtown Syracuse, and were guests of honor at a banquet tendered by Mayor Roland Marvin, and at the premiere in the Paramount, Keith and Eckel theatres.

The New York group included J. Cheever Cowdin, Charles D. Prutzman, Matthew J. Fox, W. A. Scully, F. J. A. McCarthy, J. H. Seidelman, Peyton Gibson, Samuel Machnovitch, Jules Levey, Louis Pollock, Jules Lapidus, all of Universal; John J. O'Connor, Malcolm Kingsberg, Leon Goldberg, Fred Meyers, all of RKO; newspapermen included Sam Shain, Maurice Kann, Chester Bahn, James P. Cunningham, Irving Hoffman, Frank Farrell, G. E. Blackford and others, and Richard Rodgers, Lorenz Hart, Graham McNamee, Bud Abbott and Lou Costello.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Down in the valleys of Rockefeller Center under our publishing office windows, which are built half way to the skies, the great legal and real estate minds of the Rockefellers and Columbia University re-enacted, Sunday, their annual drama of expression of ownership.

For twelve hours Rockefeller Center was deprived of the use of its most expensive luxury, Rockefeller Plaza, the three-block street that runs north and south through the heart of the development between Forty-eighth and Fifty-first Streets. The 600-foot strip, valued at $2,150,000 but left as a private roadway in order to give more adequate light and air and provide easier access to the tall buildings, was closed to use "on behalf of and in the name of the trustees of Columbia University."

From six A. M. until six P. M. barriers of white rope hung across the entrances to the three blocks. Large yellow signs were posted announcing the prohibition and uniformed employes stood on guard to see that its terms were carried out. Sunday strollers stopped to gape at the unusual arrangements, some tenants of the buildings were slightly inconvenienced and motorists were directed to Fifth and Sixth Avenues.

Columbia University, in its lease of all of the Rockefeller Center property for 99 years—it all reverts to the university at the end of that time, buildings and all, free and clear—specified that on one day in July each year "for a period of 12 hours between sunrise and sunset" the Rockefeller lessees must close off the area with "a rope, chain or other effective device," must prominently display a sign showing that it is privately owned and must present an affidavit to the University signed by witnesses testifying that all this has been done. The purpose of this is to preserve the University's property right and to keep the strip from becoming a public roadway, as it could under the common law if left open continuously.

Nat Williams, chief convention caller, addressed the call to "fellow unsalaried tax collectors."

If Twentieth Century-Fox cares to, they could make a sequel to their "Bluebird." They could call it "Two Bluebirds." Swan Song

Approximately 800 persons gathered outside the packed Westwood Village Theatre, on the outskirts of Los Angeles, one night last week. The attraction was not Bank Night, nor giving away of two automobiles, nor Cash Club. The drawing point was the preview of "Young People," and the attendance thereof by the picture's star, Shirley Temple.

Fifteen photographers stood in the foyer and lobby. When the preview was over, and applause subsided, the photographers rushed the aisles to photograph little Shirley, with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Temple, witnessing her final picture. Final, at least, for her at Twentieth Century-Fox.

The departing audience stopped in the aisles, watching the scene. Then the patrons crowded about the Temple trio in the lobby.

More photos were taken. She signed autographs. Her parents greeted their friends.

The Temples went to their waiting, black limousine and rode away.

There were tears in the eyes of many who saw the picture, for in it is a scene in which Shirley, with Jack Oakie and Charlotte Greenwood, as retiring vaudeville performers, addressed their last audience.

Shirley's lines read: "We want to thank you, our audiences, to whom we've brought happiness. For we have found happiness in making you happy."

"In keeping with the stupendousness of his production of 'Foreign Correspondent,'" announces Walter Wanger's press agents, "Walter Wanger will issue three trailers. They will run three weeks, two weeks and one week prior to the openings."

The first trailer will be 80 feet long, the second, 120 feet, the final trailer, 265 feet. A few more trailers and they could sell the picture as a serial.

Which brings up a question that has been bothering us for too long! Why do they call them "trailers" when they are screened in advance?

Donkey Business:

When the mailman rang the bell at the office of the Democratic Convention Arrangements Committee, in Chicago, most of the letters he brought had nothing to do with such things as candidates and platforms.

Seventy-five per cent of all the mail the Arrangements Committee got was from people who wanted to sell live donkeys to the Democrats, according to Station WOR's former director of publicity, our old swashbuckling friend, G. W. Johnstone, now radio director for the Democrats.

C., and a member of the Chicago convention committee.

The Democrats' convention steerers had announced, as the convention was opening in Chicago, their decision on the convention song, the while, unknown to them, Willkie's headquarters were announcing that they had selected it for the Republican Presidential campaign theme. Later there was some huddling by the Democrats over changing over to another theme, but Mr. Barron objected. "Why should we alter our plans?" he asked. "Willkie will probably use 'The Star Spangled Banner,' too."

NEWSREELS, TELEVISION, RADIO AND PRESS COVER DEMOCRATS' SESSION

Quadruple News Handling in Action Second Time; Pathe Filming Special Reels for NBC Television Transmission

The Democratic National Convention in Chicago this week was the scene of the second four-cornered competition between the newsreels, press, radio and television for coverage of a major news event. All four services competed for the first time at the Republican Convention in Philadelphia, June 24th to 28th.

Paradise for Newsmen

In Philadelphia there was news material enough to satisfy all four services; the newsreels had a Republican convention that behaved like a democratic one, an enthusiastic gallery and a photogenic candidate; television had the opportunity to present for the first time a presidential nominee at the convention which selected him; radio had the chance to present the balloting which kept many families up most of the night of June 26th and the press had the story of one of the most unprecedented political convention victories in the history of the nation—that of Wendell Willkie.

Whatever the outcome, when the Democratic convention opened in Chicago, Monday, all four services were ready, with approximately the same technical staffs.

The radio networks figured the cost of covering the Republican meeting at $332,000, a sum which included the revenue that would have been otherwise paid by sponsors for commercial programs. Actual operating costs were given as: NBC, two networks and a television station, $15,000; CBS, $25,000 and Mutual, $8,000.

Expenses for the Democratic convention were not expected to be so high because it was probable that relatively few programs would be cancelled.

The cost to the five newsreels for coverage of the two national political conventions was estimated at $20,000.

Television coverage of the Democratic convention was by means of a tie-up with RKO Pathe News which rushed material each day by airmail for telecasting by NBC's television station in New York, W2XBS.

The press reporters at the convention, numbering nearly 1,000, spent the first few days speculating about third term possibilities and wondering if the meeting would come to life with some unexpected surprise. Press service and local newspaper photographers also gave extensive attention to the Chicago convention.

The type of newsreel coverage to be given the Democratic meeting will depend on what develops and on what day the climax is reached. The newsreels all prepare their issues on Mondays and Wednesdays and convention material was included in those issues. A special would be issued if the news story of the convention broke later than Wednesday and was of sufficient importance to merit the attention.

Edmund Reek, general manager of Movietone News, went to Chicago to direct that company's coverage of the convention. As at the Republican meeting Tony Muto, in charge of the Washington bureau, handled arrangements. William P. Montague, Jr., assignment editor of Paramount News, directed that company's forces in Chicago. J. C. Brown was in charge of the News of the Day forces. The Washington manager of RKO Pathe News, George Dorsey, handled arrangements and James Lyons, also of Washington, directed the Universal staff.

The newsreel forces in Chicago were about the same strength, in men and cameras, as those which covered the G.O.P. meeting in Philadelphia. Movietone News' staff included the regular Chicago staff and additions from New York and Washington. News of the Day had five cameramen, RKO Pathe two sound and one silent crews and Universal had a staff of five and Paramount had about the same number.

Pathe Films for Television

In addition to its coverage for its newsreel customers Pathe also serviced NBC with material for television purposes. Several thousand feet of film were shot each day and flown to New York where the material was cut to 1,000 feet. The ten minute pictorial coverage of the convention nearly 1,000 miles away was telecast twice each day beginning Tuesday evening.

Zenith is now the only television company operating in Chicago but it has no mobile equipment to cover the activities at the convention hall. Balaban & Katz and the National Broadcasting Company have been authorized by the Federal Communication Commission to begin television work in Chicago but neither has even selected a site for its station up to now.

Television covered the Philadelphia convention directly, using for the first time the Telephone Company's coaxial cable to New York City. No such cable links any other cities. NBC television officials would like to make arrangements under which they would use newsreel film on other special events. Up to now Pathe News is the only newsreel to show any interest in cooperation with television.

Pathe News back in 1929-30 supplied the first newsreel films to RCA-NBC for early television experimentation.

The convention hall in Chicago, as in Philadelphia, had special arrangements for newsreels, the press and radio. In Chicago there were three principal camera stands, one on the floor at an oblique angle to the speakers' platform, another hanging from the first balcony in front of the speakers and a third, also hanging, behind the speakers. The organ loft was available for long shots and cameramen also wandered among the delegates on the floor. The press had its large section adjacent to the speakers' platform and there were three chief booths for radio, one for each network.

First Broadcast in 1924

The first Democratic convention to be broadcast was the long meeting held in 1924 at Madison Square Garden. That was immortalized in the radio listener's ear by the ever repeated "24 votes for Underwood" from the chairman of the Alabama delegation at the opening of each roll-call.

The Mutual network had a staff of 25 engineers, commentator, and other men covering the convention for its 142 stations in the United States. Mutual's description was carried exclusively by several Chicago hotels, including the Palmer House, Stevens and Bismarck. The Mutual staff for the 1924 convention was one announcer and one engineer.

NBC and CBS also had large staffs covering the convention.

Carter T. Barron, Eastern division manager of Loew's theatres, was selected to head the entertainment committee of the Democratic convention by Lawrence Robert, sectary of the Democratic National Committee. He was in charge of arrangements for guest star appearances and other entertainments for the delegates. He was assisted by Y. Frank Freeman, Jr. and Tom Walker, son of Frank Walker, Comerford theatre head.

Balaban & Katz and Jones, Linick and Schaefer theatres agreed to give free admission to delegates and their families at all Loop theatres. The only charge made was the prevailing government tax. In addition to the motion picture theatres the passes were also honored at the baseball parks and race tracks. About 3,000 of these passes were issued.

Film Men at Convention

WILLKIE SHORT "BOOKED SOLID"

While the Democrats were meeting this week in Chicago to pick a candidate to oppose the Republicans' Wendell Willkie, RKO's Harry Michalson, short subject sales manager, was reporting in New York that the print allotment for the "Information Please" short film "starring" Candidate Willkie has been increased 25 per cent and "every unit is booked solid". He said every available print had been in use since July 4th, the release date.

"Practically every major circuit will play this 'Information Please' short. Theatres are giving the Willkie subject prominent advertising mention in their theatre copy and lobby space, and RKO Radio will back it through a campaign," he added.

FCC RUSHING TELEVISION PERMITS, INDEPENDENTS LEASING PICTURES

More Than 50 Stations Planned for U. S. Next Year; New Units Set for Washington, Philadelphia and Chicago

While still withholding even a partial commercialization of television, the Federal Communications Commission in Washington is moving along technical development by encouraging telecasting through the issuance of permits for stations all over the country.

FCC Grants Permit

On Wednesday the FCC granted a construction permit to the Don Lee Broadcasting System for a television station in San Francisco, of 1,000 watts power. The new San Francisco station, the Don Lee station in Los Angeles, WXAO and NBC's station in New York, W2XBS, will operate on the new No. 1 television channel.

NBC will continue to use the Radio Manufacturers Association's television standards with an increase in the number of lines from 441 to 501, while the two Don Lee stations will experiment with 525 lines, 30 frames per second; 441 lines, 30 frames and possibly other standards.

Television companies which were informed by the FCC last month that their applications would be granted are rushing detailed plans for submission to and approval of the Government's radio-television authorities. From Washington, Monday, came word that more than 50 television stations would be operating early next year, placing the United States in world leadership in the field.

Before starting actual operations on the first television chain, RCA-NBC this week was awaiting its new license the while it prepared to set up plans for stations in Washington and Chicago, adding to its New York unit.

The FCC already has allocated television frequencies to 23 stations and action is awaited on 19 others.

NBC, one of the leaders in the field, is understood to expect commercialization of television within six months, bringing an official standardization of television, based on recommendations of television engineers serving on a committee appointed by the FCC.

Paramount Plans Proceeding

Paramount's television activities are also proceeding on several fronts, notably in New York where the DuMont company has begun testing for its New York station. In Chicago Paul Raibourn, Paramount television coordinator, inspected three possible sites for the Balaban & Katz television transmitter. There were no reports of Paramount's television activity on the Coast with Television Productions, Inc.

WCAU, Philadelphia station for the Columbia Broadcasting System and WOR, key station of the Mutual network, are preparing plans for active participation in television experimentation and programming.

The Balaban & Katz television transmitter site will be selected within 60 days, according to Mr. Raibourn. There are two principal alternatives: first to locate the station on a high building in the Loop or second to pick a location in the suburbs and erect a tall tower. It was said that better coverage might be obtained through a suburban location. The television station transmitters in New York are all located on high buildings.

WCAU has announced immediate acceleration of plans to begin active television broadcasting experiments as a result of the FCC tentatively approving the station's application for a television station. Equipment will be bought from and installed by RCA the minute the actual authorization comes through, said Dr. Leon Levy, WCAU president.

Fired by the FCC's announcement that regular licenses would be "granted promptly upon proper showing of a program of research," WCAU intends to swing into action immediately with a mobile unit, the proposed program schedule for the greater part to be made up of wrestling and boxing bouts, track meets, horse racing and general outdoor athletic and special events.

A comprehensive daily program schedule is planned. Although assigned to Channel 5 along with the RCA Manufacturing Company at nearby Camden, N. J., it may be a clear channel for WCAU since RCA plans to use its television station for non-broadcasting purposes, primarily for tests in the late evening within the plant.

Unit in Columbia Network

While the number of television receiving sets in the Philadelphia area is small, the WCAU programs will supplement those of CBS in New York, a relay station to be constructed at Trenton, N. J., as the first link in Columbia's proposed television network.

DuMont is using a 50-watt television transmitter to broadcast its first field test pattern. The company is experimenting with horizontal and vertical polarizing in order to determine which method is best suited to conditions in the New York area. About the middle of August the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories will take over active control of Majestic Radio & Television Corporation under the reorganization plan. In the East the company has begun to make deliveries on its 11¼ by 15-inch television receiver.

Films for Television

For the summer months W2XBS, the National Broadcasting Company's television station in New York, is using as many motion picture programs as possible. Such programs make it possible for the station to operate with a reduced personnel. Independent producers in Hollywood have been interested in renting old pictures to television, although the majors continue adamant on any television participation.

Recent television-film deals include four Ken Maynard Westerns produced in 1938 by Colonly Pictures and "His Double Life," Roland Young, originally released by Paramount in 1933 and rented to NBC by Astor Pictures.

A special NBC film feature this week was the telecasting twice daily of 1,000 feet of film made by RKO Pathe-News at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago.

The delevolpment of the 16mm. nickel-in-the-slot picture machines is regarded by NBC television officials as a potential source of film supply. The short three minute films could be used as fillers on television shows, it was said. However, possible legal difficulties might arise, it was pointed out, unless the original contracts with the performers covered television rights and if these were included the price might be too high for the purposes of the coin film machines.

Philco Stock Issued

Philco Radio & Television Corporation on Wednesday placed 325,000 shares of common stock, at $16 per share, on the open market. This action was in keeping with the policy announced earlier in the year of seeking finance publicly for the first time since its foundation in 1892. All the preference stock, including shares held in the company's treasury, will be cancelled, leaving only the common stock outstanding. It was reported that an application will be made to list the common stock on the New York Stock Exchange.

Features Made for Television

The Television Film Corporation of America has started production on what it calls the first features ever made exclusively for television projection. It was said that an agreement has been reached between the company and Thomas S. Lee, head of Don Lee, which operates the television station W6XAO in Hollywood under which specially made features with "top notch personalities of stage and screen" will be supplied for weekly telecasting.

Television Distributor Formed

Farnsworth Television and Radio Distributing Corporation has been incorporated in Dover, Del., to deal in radio and television receivers, with a capital of 100 shares of no par value. Incorporators were Howard A. Seitz, Brooklyn; Sanford H. Bolz, North Bergen, N. J., and Lloyd S. Snedeker, New York.

LIBRARY DISPLAY IN LOEW'S HOUSES

Free lending libraries in theatre lobbies of Loew's and other Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer first-run houses are being tried out to exploit the company's "Pride and Prejudice" and "Escape".

A typical library of this type is the one developed by Francis Deering, manager of Loew's State, Houston, Tex. Mr. Deering arranged a special display with stills of books made into motion pictures and those now being dramatized for the screen. About 10 copies of each book are made available.

RKO Field Forces Set Several Deals

RKO Radio field men have currently closed several circuit deals for 1940-41 product. Among the top deals are the Grace Rodgers circuit of eight houses in Illinois, Arkansas and Missouri, set by Manager Ray Nolan of St. Louis; the Al Boyd Theatres, consisting of five first runs in Pennsylvania, sold by Manager Frank McNamee of Philadelphia; the Tanner Circuit of five Illinois situations, signed by Salesman Mark Ramon of St. Louis; a first and second run deal in Boise, Idaho, signed by Manager Hal Fuller of Salt Lake City, and the first-run Mainstreet theatre in Fremont, Neb., set by Manager C. W. Allen of Omaha.

MAJOR CIRCUIT STAGE SHOWS IN CLOSED SHOP

Theatre Executives Sign with Variety Artists' Guild After Deadlock in the Negotiations

All stage performers except musicians, in all of the major circuit theatres of the country using stage shows, may be subject to a closed shop contract between the circuits and the American Guild of Variety Artists, following the conclusion of talks between circuit and the union representatives in New York last weekend on a three-year contract.

Organized Last Year

The agreement on an employment contract came after months of negotiation and mediation, and less than one year after the organization of the union, the sole agent for vaudeville performers. The agreement was reached between the union's representatives and those of the Skouras, Loew's, RKO, Fabian, Warners', Paramount, and Brandt circuits.

Ben Golden, labor arbitrator, stepped into the negotiations several weeks ago to break a deadlock on certain points, the major one being the exaction by the circuit booking offices of a five per cent fee. This was retained, in the final agreement, and represents a victory for the circuits. The union, however, obtained recognition as the sole bargaining agency for all performers except musicians.

A contract was to be drawn this week; copies were to be sent to all principals; and signing was expected after the return to New York in two weeks of Hoyt Haddock, AGVA executive secretary, now in Hollywood.

While details were not divulged, it was said that Mr. Golden, in acting as mediator, ruled on the number of performances to be given under the contract by classes of performers each week this being another disputed point.

The agreement, and the expected contract, are the first large victory for the union; its major efforts to date being organizational. The variety artists' union was formed last summer by the Associated Actors and Artistes of America to replace the expelled American Federation of Actors, which soon afterwards collapsed.

Meanwhile, in Philadelphia last week, the AGVA reached agreement with the agents of the independent Entertainment Managers Association, on commissions. The Pennsylvania laws allow commissions up to 50 per cent; the agreement provides a sliding scale up to 33 1/3 per cent, a ten per cent fee restricted to theatres, and a 10 per cent minimum booking fee.

In New York, the stagehands' Local 1 concluded successful negotiations with theatre interests, for a new two year contract. Basic scales remain the same. However, the men will receive one weeks' vacation with pay, starting this summer. The contract was being drawn this week.

On the Coast

The Screen Actors Guild has increased its initiation fee for adults from $25 to $50. It did not, however, change the initiation fee for actors between 14 and 28 years of age, this remaining at $10.

The Guild also, through its Eastern office in New York, is beginning to enfranchise Eastern agents who book film stars. It expects all such to be licensed by August 20th, it was said. The franchising would follow that on the Coast, the guild to receive one per cent of the agents' gross commission. However, minimum fees will probably be lowered.

The Paramount studio last week signed a revised bargaining contract with its office workers' union, the Intramural Paramount Studio Office Employees Association. Terms provide exclusive bargaining rights, two weeks' dismissal pay, two weeks' vacation, and extension of absence leaves. Carey S. Hall, association president, has indicated that all studio office workers must become members of the association by September 15th.

Nick and Bioff

Two union leaders, William Bioff, West Coast IATSE studio union leader, and John Nick, deposed head of the St. Louis operators' Local 143, this week moved to quash the ordeals through which they labor, or which they face.

Bioff's writ for a habeas corpus was scheduled to be heard Saturday, in Chicago Federal Court. He is serving six months of a 1922 jail term for pandering.

Nick's attorney, Sigmund Bass, filed a motion in St. Louis Federal Court last week, to quash the indictments for anti-trust law and anti-racketeering law violations against him, and also asked to have several sections of the indictment elided. Mr. Nick is facing trial for extortion of money from the city's theatre owners while he was head of Local 143.

Philadelphia Union Drive

The Philadelphia Building Service Employees Union, Local 209-A, met this week to organize the ushers, ticket takers, cashiers, janitors, and doormen of the city's independent theatres.

Peaslee Succeeds Steffes; SETOA In Jacksonville

E. R. Peaslee, Stillwater, Minn., was elected president of Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest at the final session of the organization's annual convention in Minneapolis Thursday, July 11th. He had been vice-president.

Mr. Peaslee succeeds W. A. (Al) Steffes, long active in exhibitor organization circles and a former president of national Allied, who was absent from the convention for the first time in many years, having retired to his farm near Aitkin, Minn., on a leave of absence. Mr. Steffes suffered a heart attack at the national Allied convention in Washington last winter. The convention adopted a resolution lauding Mr. Steffes for his services to Allied.

The surprise of the meeting was the election of Fred Strom, projectionist at the Mount theate, St. Paul, to the post of executive secretary over Ben Ashe, who held the post of secretary and was prominently mentioned as the likely winner of the newly designated executive secretaryship. Hiller Hoffman of St. Paul succeeds Mr. Peaslee as vice-president and Sol Lebedof of Minneapolis is treasurer. No recording secretary was elected.

Six resolutions were passed at the final meeting: condemning the use of 16mm. film for public showings; condemning holding pictures made and sold one year for the next season; condemning the pulling of short subjects out of regular program and designating them specials; resolution praising Mr. Steffes; resolution for continued support to national Allied, and urging all exhibitors to buy films from 25 to 33 1/3 per cent less this year.

Southeastern Owners Open Meeting Sunday

The Southeastern Theatre Owners Association will hold its annual convention in Jacksonville, Fla., Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. More than 300 theatre owners and their wives are expected to attend the meeting at the George Washington Hotel. Although the convention will not officially get under way until Monday, an opening get-together Dutch supper will be held on the eve of the convention.

Speakers at the Monday session will include Mayor George C. Blume of Jacksonville welcoming the delegates and Spessard L. Holland, Governor Elect of Florida, who will speak on "Why Can't We Bring the Producers to Florida?"

Also Claude Pepper, United States Senator, Florida, on "The Motion Picture Industry Can Help Prepare" and Edward L. Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, on "National Co-operative Effort."

Also Claude Lee, public relations, Paramount-Publix, on "The Institution and the Common Ground."

Speakers Tuesday will include Nat Williams, Thomasville, Ga., exhibitor, on "Washington Observations" and Oscar C. Lam, member of the MPTOA board on "Relations Between Local and National Associations."

Also Mitchel Wolfson, Miami, Fla., exhibitor, on "Extemporaneous Observations" and J. L. Cartwright, public relations, Sparks Theatres, on "Good Will Between Theatre Operators and City Officials."

Also George F. Dembow, vice-president of National Screen Service Corporation, on "The New Deal in Advertising Accessories" and Louis O. Gravely, Jr., U. S. Treasury Department, on "What the Federal Admission Tax Means."

Convention committees appointed by M. C. Moore, president of the SETOA, follows:

Business: Oscar C. Lam, R. B. Wilby, R. E. Martin, E. J. Sparks, Earl Fain and Lukie Stein.

Resolutions: Thomas E. Orr, Mitchel Wolfson, William R. Griffin, Mack Jackson, Nat Williams and Hugh Manning.

WARNER EMPLOYEES TO BRING REFUGEES

Warner Brothers employees in the United States will bring over and care for from 2,000 to 3,000 children of Warner employees in England, it was disclosed in Hollywood this week. Harry M., Jack L. and Albert Warner guarantee to underwrite the financial requirements of the United States and British governments in bringing the refugees here for the duration of war.

Monogram Holds Eastern Regional

Seven Monogram exchanges with managers and sales personnel will attend an eastern district regional meeting at the Barbizon-Plaza Hotel, New York, Friday and Saturday, July 19-20. Edward A. Golden, general sales manager, will preside. Branches which will participate are New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Boston, New Haven, Albany and Buffalo. W. Ray Johnston, president, is to fly from Hollywood to address the meeting.

To Discuss Sales Policies

"Because the territories represented by these exchanges account for at least 35 per cent of the national gross, the meeting takes on added significance," said Mr. Golden. "On the agenda are such topics as sales policy for the coming season, and a continuation of close relations with exhibitors. Each picture on the new schedule will have a complete exploitation."

Harry H. Thomas, general manager of the company-owned exchanges in New York, Philadelphia and Washington, will bring to the meeting the entire personnel of his branches.

Blumberg Scholarship, established by Universal; the Jack Cohn Scholarship, established in memory of his father; the Robert K. Christenberry Scholarship; the William F. Film on Arizona

A 16 mm. 40-minute motion picture on the natural resources and scenic highlights of the State of Arizona has been made by the Bureau of Mines, Department of the Interior, in cooperation with an industrial concern interested in the development of the State. It is the first film the Bureau has produced telling the complete story of the resources of a State. The Bureau of Mines film library consists of more than 4,500 reels, which were shown on over 100,000 occasion in 1939 to attendance of more than 9,000,000 persons.

Hollywood Calls 32,000 for Relief; Canada's $300,000 War Relief Show

Hollywood this week set out to mobilize 32,000 workers to aid the Red Cross, and the motion picture industry in Canada, Monday night, turned over its shows to the aid of the mother country. Hollywood aims to raise $250,000.

"The irresistible combination of glamour and a good cause", which enabled Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks and Charles Chaplin, among others, to sell $10,000,000 of U. S. Liberty Bonds in the last war is being brought into play again in Hollywood.

Preceding individual studio appeals was a radio program carried over all Hollywood local stations and originating from KFWB on which Samuel Goldwyn, chairman of the drive; Jeanette MacDonald, Robert Montgomery, Louis B. Mayer, Irene Dunne and Dr. A. H. Giannini, chairman of the Los Angeles Red Cross Chapter, appeared.

It has been suggested that voluntary donations of a percentage of all salaries be sought. Cary Grant has donated his entire salary from "Philadelphia Story", a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film, 50 per cent going to British relief and the rest to the Red Cross. The Government, it is reported, has agreed not to tax this income, said to be $150,000.

Mr. Goldwyn called on "everyone in the industry, from office boy to star, to do his duty in the cause of humanity". Mr. Montgomery gave a first hand account of the refugee problem in Europe. Miss Dunne read a plea from Fannie Hurst. Speakers at the studios were B. B. Kahane and Sam Briskin, Columbia; Walt Disney, Disney Studio; Walter Wanger and Sol Lesser, Goldwyn Studio; Frank Freeman, Paramount; J. J. Nolan, RKO; Darryl F. Zanuck, Twentieth Century-Fox; Joe Pasternak, Universal; Harry Warner, Warner Brothers, and M. J. Siegel and E. H. Goldstein, Republic.

The National Theatre Party, staged by the Canadian film industry Monday night, July 15th, to stimulate the sale of War Savings Stamps, is estimated to have cost the Dominion's film theatres approximately $300,000 through the cancellation of the regular night's performance. However, theatremen have expressed the belief that the loss was more than made up by the goodwill gained. Approximately 975 theatres participated in the drive, which covered the entire Dominion. Preliminary estimates indicated that the estimated goal of $1,000,000 had been reached.

In Toronto, Vivien Leigh, Laurence Olivier, Ned Sparks and Maureen O'Sullivan appeared at a number of houses on behalf of the drive, while in Montreal Sir Cedric Hardwicke made personal appearances. In addition, Canadian entertainment personalities contributed their services.

Although the admission to the performances was only two 25-cent War Savings Stamps, additional stamps were sold in the theatre. Throughout the country, 650,000 complimentary admission tickets were distributed by the campaign committee, of which N. L. Nathanson was chairman. The Canadian Picture Pioneers sponsored the drive.

Efforts will be made by Paramount theatre operators to enlist independent exhibitors in their territories in cooperative activities for the Government's defense program, which will be carried out systematically throughout the Paramount theatre organization. All arrangements for defense program activities for Paramount and cooperating theatres will be cleared through A. H. Blank, who was designated coordinator of the company's defense activities, and R. C. Wilby, of the Wilby-Kincey circuit, who has been designated chairman of the defense activities in the South.

NEW CANADIAN BORDER RULES HIT U. S. GROSSES

Theatres Near Boundary Lose Patrons as U. S. Enforces Passport, Visa Regulations

United States' regulations severely curtailing Canadian "commuting" across the border has played havoc with patronage at theatres on the United States' side of the line, adding to the burden of the theatres, which previously had to contend with the premium on Canadian money.

The regulations provide that each Canadian must furnish a passport, costing one dollar, in order to cross the line. But this is not all. The Canadian must first send to Ottawa, the capital, for the passport; this meaning a delay of from one to three weeks. The applicant must also provide and pay for five photographs of himself. He must then apply at the nearest United States consulate for a visa, submitting visa and self then to a United States immigration inspector. The passport is valid for one year.

No barriers exist to prevent U. S. citizens from crossing into Canada.

In the Eastern section of the U. S., at Eastport, Lubec, Calais, Woodland, Presque Isle, Caribou, Fort Fairfield, Van Buren, Madawaska, and Fort Kent, all in Maine, from 25 to 50 per cent of the theatre business has come from the Canadians. Most of this is now lost.

The discount on Canadian funds, ranging from 17 to 21 cents on the dollar, had already been a blow to United States border exhibitors, and favored the Canadian exhibitors.

May Force Closings

The result of the two factors, exchange and immigration, may force some U. S. film houses in small towns near the Canadian border, to suspend.

In the East, reaping the benefit from the situation in Canada, are theatres in the Dominion towns of St. Andrews, Black's Harbor, St. George, St. Stephen, McAdam, Woodstock, Hartland, Perth-Andover, Bath, Grand Falls, St. Leonard, Edmundston.

The complaints being voiced by Eastern U. S. exhibitors are echoed in Detroit. On Dominion Day recently, the equivalent of America's Independence Day, and a day on which across-the-river traffic from Windsor, Ontario, to Detroit, is usually heavy, the Fox Theatre in Detroit reported receiving one dollar in Canadian money. It usually gets 400 to 500 Canadian dollars on such a day.

Anent the U. S. regulation requiring Canadians to have passports for entry here, it is the first time such a requirement has been exerted on the border.

While distributors across the border, in the United States, are still trying to adjudicate their problems, still trying to settle clearance, block-booking and the like, still trying to evolve a trade practice program out of the consent decree which may eliminate the Government's anti-trust suit against them—the Canadian motion picture industry, comprising exhibitors, circuit operators, and exchange men, is working more harmoniously than ever before, and has a clearance board system which will work and solve many problems.

Such was the picture painted last week by N. L. Nathanson, head of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, who was in New York on business. Mr. Nathanson said that representatives had been named to a National Clearance Board by the exchanges, independent exhibitors, and circuit operators; by all interests, he emphasized. The organization will be effective, he predicted.

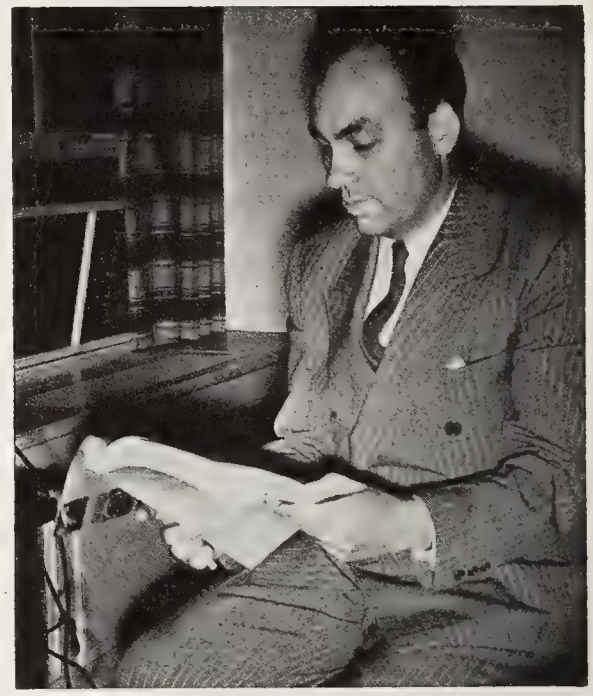
Conciliation boards, he said, would be established in the fall; they are being temporarily held up, by the Canadian industry's war effort, salient point of which is the War Savings Stamps drive.

Pittsburgh Variety Club Sponsoring Charity Drive

The Variety Club of Pittsburgh is sponsoring a $75,000 charity drive to be used to provide milk for children in all institutions regardless of race, creed or color and the furtherances of Camp O'Connell, where thousands of underprivileged Pittsburgh children have been given vacation by the Club.

The drive to raise the $75,000 will be in the form of a "National Turtle Derby," to be held in September either at Forbes Field or The Gardens. The derby will be run off in 10 heats. The winners of the 10 different heats will be pitted against each other in the "Grand National Race." The cost of entering a turtle is $10 and the winner of each heat will receive $100. The winner of the "Grand National" will receive $1,000.

John H. Harris, national chief barker of the Variety Clubs, is general chairman, and Harry Kalmine, Warner Theatres executive, has been appointed "Sales Manager of Turtles."



Telefilm in Sound Only

Telefilm, Inc., a Hollywood company which has specialized in 16 mm. sound through recording work done in the commercial picture field, has entered the slot-film industry, but as a sound organization only and not as a producer of either pictures or featurettes. It was inadvertently stated that Telefilm, which is headed by J. A. Thomas, had produced three reel subjects for the Union and the Gilmore Oil Companies, the Santa Fe Trailways and the Los Angeles Department of Playgrounds and Recreation. The subjects are commercial films that carried Telefilm sound but were not produced by the company.

Levine.

Canvassing Film Audience Habits

DR. GEORGE GALLUP

Results of the survey to estimate audience preference for single or double features for motion picture programs, being conducted by Dr. George Gallup and his American Institute of Public Opinion, will be ready for release within the next four or five weeks, according to the researcher's New York office at the advertising agency of Young and Rubicam. The poll is in the nature of a "service" and its undertaking is not being financed by film industry money. The findings are to be broadcast to subscribers to the survey's services, including 110 newspapers as syndicated customers with an estimated circulation of nine and one-half million readers. The canvass is conducted by field workers who personally interview the public with a set of formulated queries. The Doctor is of the opinion that the industry and public should have had the benefits of such a poll long ago.

Along with the poll on single vs. double features, Dr. Gallup is handling another survey of matters concerned with the motion picture business. Known as the Audience Research Institute, the investigation is being financed by RKO Radio Pictures in the interest of estimating public preferences in pictures and habits of attendance. Findings will be for the confidential and exclusive use of the backers.

Paramount Signs Benchley

Robert Benchley has contracted with Paramount for a series of four short comedies in the 1940-41 season. Mr. Benchley formerly had been under contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. When his contract expired last season it was reported that David O. Selznick was considering signing Mr. Benchley for a series.

IN COURTS

Receiver Is Appointed For Pacific National

William H. Foulk, Wilmington, Del., attorney has been named receiver for Pacific National Theatres, Inc., a dissolved Delaware corporation, which operated theatres in California, by Chancellor W. W. Harrington on the advice of George Burton Pearson, vice-chancellor.

The court also signed an order granting leave to intervene to Helen B. Baranov, Charlotte D. Fenn, H. W. Merkley, Louis W. Bartel and F. E. Long as additional complainants. The complainants are Margaret M. Stevens and W. Ernest Choate, San Diego stockholders, in an action pending in chancery court in Wilmington. The company was dissolved in April, 1937.

Sues Over Ordinance

Sam Mauphin, sound truck operator of Louisville, Ky., has filed a suit protesting the city's new anti-noise law, which he claims would prevent him from making an honest living. Mr. Mauphin charges the ordinance is "illegal, discriminatory and unjust." He seeks an injunction against the city and city officials from enforcing the law.

Settle "Ranger" Action

Stipulations settling the suit of the Lone Ranger, Inc., against Republic Productions, Inc., for an injunction, $10,000 damages and an accounting were filed last Monday in federal court in New York. Attorneys revealed that under the terms of the settlement Republic is to pay the plaintiff $15,000 as full payment of all money claimed and the plaintiff in turn will not oppose the release of a serial based on the "The Lone Ranger" radio program.

Sues for $1,000,000

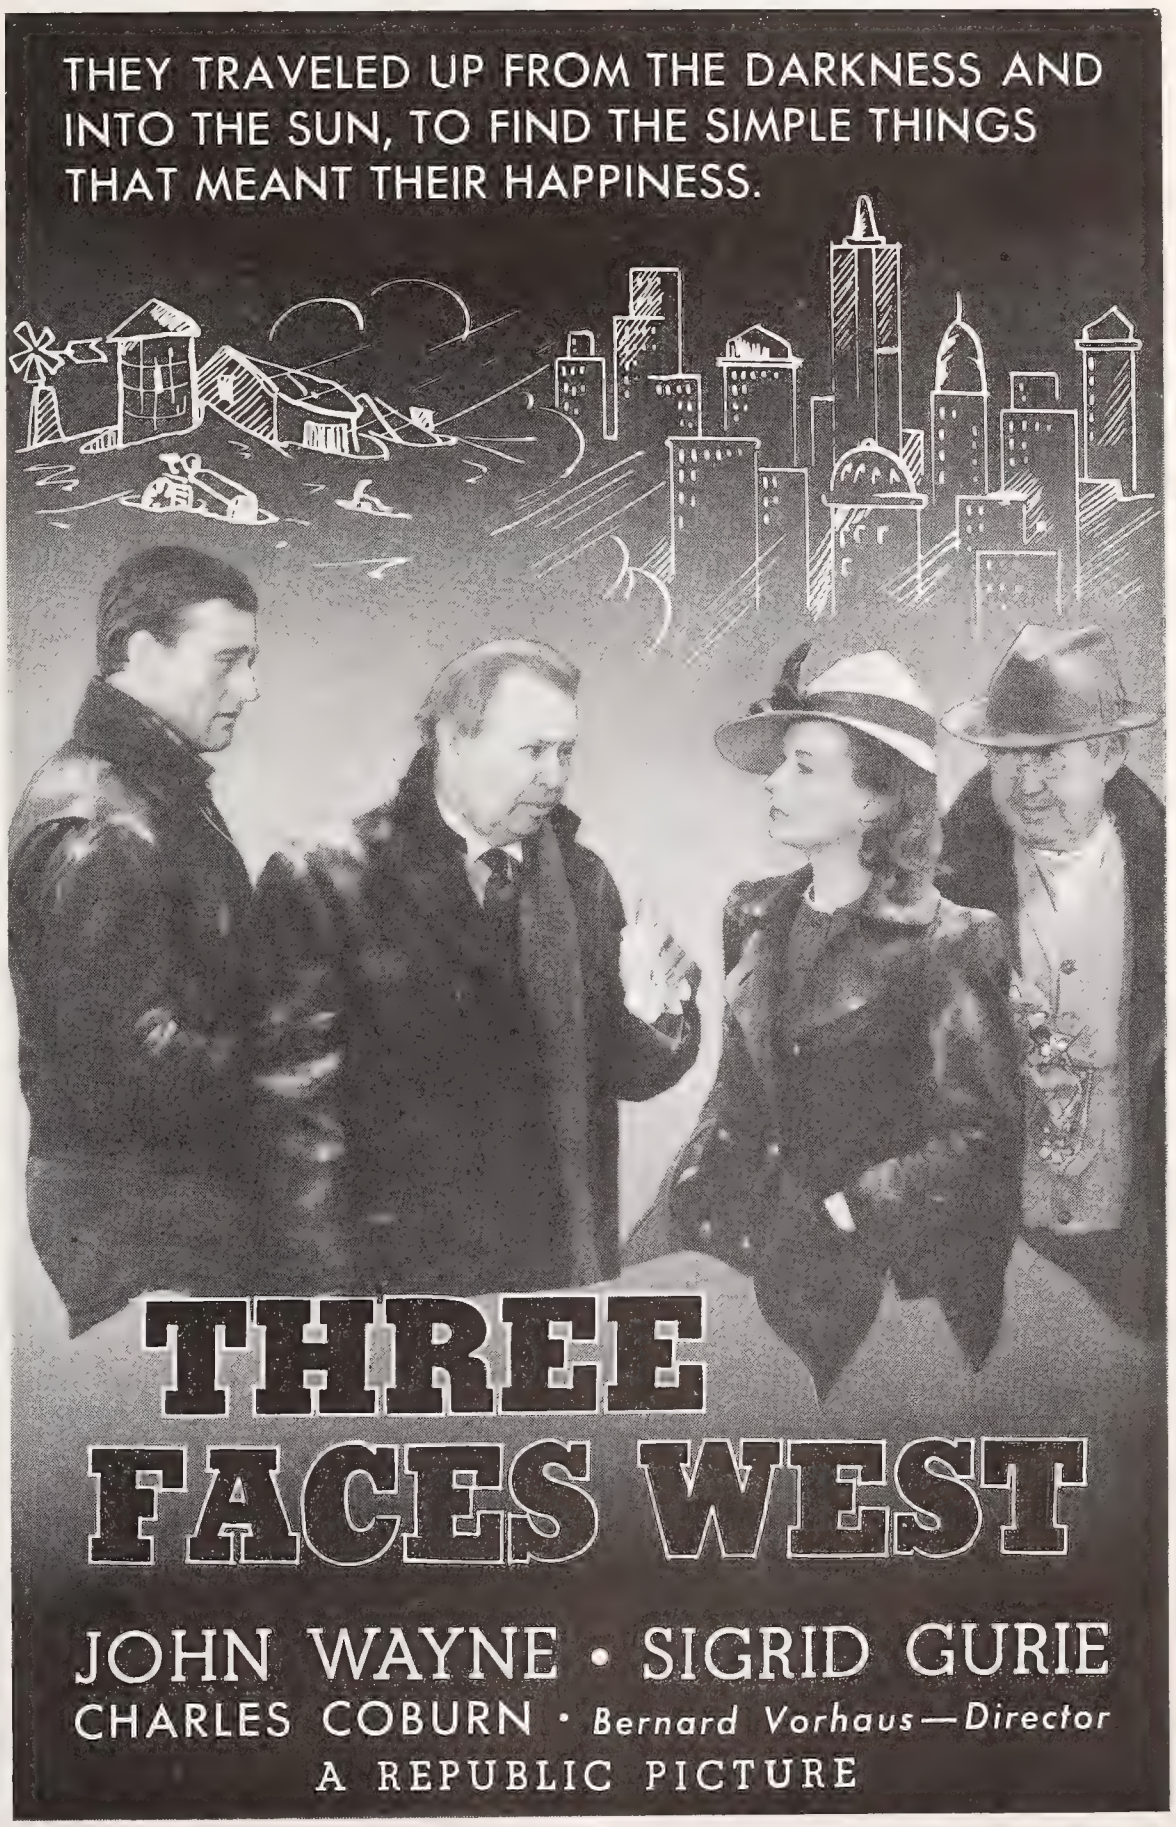
Norman Houston, a writer, Thursday, July 11th, filed a $1,000,000 damage suit against Columbia Pictures and others in Los Angeles charging unauthorized use of his material in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington." He claims he was employed in 1936 to develop his story, "Clown in Congress," and upon discharge bought back all rights to the material which, he said, was used without his consent in the film.

Postpone Korda Examination

Examination before trial of Alexander Korda in the New York suit of Samuel Goldwyn and Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., against United Artists has been postponed under an order of Federal Judge Bondy to September 16th. Mr. Korda is to be examined as a material witness in the dispute between Mr. Goldwyn and United Artists.

Barrymore Receiver Appointed

William Bondy, federal judge, in New York last week appointed Samuel A. Miller ancillary receiver for John Barrymore in proceedings filed on June 5th by Mr. Barrymore in California for an arrangement. Hearings will be held under the order before Referee Robert P. Stephenson. The petition states Mr. Barrymore's property in New York consists of rights to profits of the play "My Dear Children."



Counterclaim Suit Is Latest "Letty" Action

Edward Sheldon has filed a counterclaim suit for $50,000 damages against Guthrie McClintic along with Charles Frohman, Inc., Paramount Pictures and Gilbert Miller. The action was started in New York supreme court as a result of Mr. McClintic's suit against Mr. Sheldon and Margaret Ayer Barnes, authors of "Dishonored Lady," which was made into a film, "Letty Lynton," by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Mr. McClintic, stage producer, instituted suit recently asking for half of $137,000, which the courts awarded to the authors, who claimed plagiarism. Besides making a general denial of charges Mr. Sheldon claims that Mr. McClintic breached the contract he held upon "Dishonored Lady." Mr. McClintic assigned the play to Charles Frohman, Inc., and it went from that company to Paramount and Gilbert Miller, all of which was done without the written approval of the authors, Mr. Sheldon charged.

Fromberg Files Suit

Harry G. Fromberg, trustee in bankruptcy of Grand National Pictures, Inc., filed suit Friday, July 12th, in federal court in New York against Skibo Productions, Inc., for $12,874 damages and Jeremiah D. Maguire for $3,874 and an accounting. In a number of causes of action, Mr. Fromberg charges that Skibo failed to repay a loan of $2,874 from Great National and that the defendants owe $10,000 for accounting, storage and legal services rendered by Grand National.

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

DOCTOR TAKES A WIFE: Loretta Young, Ray Milland, Gail Patrick—An excellent picture that drew very well mid-week. Good story and well acted by Milland and Loretta Young. This is the kind of picture that our customers like. Good enough for anybody's Sunday. Running time, 93 minutes. Played June 26-27.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

HIS GIRL FRIDAY: Cary Grant, Rosalind Russell, Ralph Bellamy—This was really entertaining. Fast and furious. Didn't know Rosalind Russell could do it. Let's have more of these two, Columbia, with the same director. Played June 2-4.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town and country patronage.

MUSIC IN MY HEART: Tony Martin, Rita Hayworth, Edith Fellows—If it hadn't been for Foto-Nite, we wouldn't have enjoyed any business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

First National

CASTLE ON THE HUDSON: John Garfield, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, Burgess Meredith—Fair picture of its type. Seems I have seen this same story several times before from this same company.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

MURDER IN THE AIR: Ronald Reagan, John Litel, Lya Lys—A little action picture which failed to please small business. Running time, 55 minutes. Played July 5-6.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

'TIL WE MEET AGAIN: George Brent, Merle Oberon, Pat O'Brien, Geraldine Fitzgerald—Remake of "One Way Passage," but much better. Liked by all, although it was somewhat depressing. Wonder if such true and perfect love could actually exist in this war mad world? Will someone enlighten me? Merle Oberon was a darling in this. Brent is always good. Yes, play it. Played July 7-8.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BOYS' TOWN (reissue): Spencer Tracy, Mickey Rooney—We ran this re-run in place of a punk and are mighty glad we did because our bargain night patrons liked the picture and we gave some folks a chance to see a real picture, who had missed the first run.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

DR. KILDARE'S STRANGE CASE: Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres, Laraine Day—I double featured this picture with "Florian" and the customers preferred "Florian."—A. C. Myrick, State Theatre, Lake Park, Iowa. Small town and rural patronage.

EDISON, THE MAN: Spencer Tracy, Rita Johnson, Charles Coburn, Gene Lockhart—This widely ballyhooed picture for some reason did not stand up at the box office. We expected standout business, if there is such a thing in this war scared world. But it did just average business and we wonder if it was not too technical for women or that it did, as some biograhical pictures do, failed to catch the public's fancy or it may be laid to the war scare. Anyway, we expected to do a lot more business than it did, due to the cast being headed by Tracy, who has always been a good bet here, and Miss Johnson deserves a boost for her handling of her role.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

EDISON, THE MAN: Spencer Tracy, Rita Johnson, Charles Coburn, Gene Lockhart—Here is a picture, one that everyone will enjoy and tell their friends about. Tracy really does act, and how. If he isn't the man for this part, I don't know where they could find him. It is easy to get store tie-ups and the picture is easy to sell and will back up any claims you want to make for it. Don't sell this picture short. There's not many as good.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

FLORIAN: Robert Young, Helen Gilbert—This is a horse show that had real possibilities but MGM had to put in a lot of history. My rural patronage thrives on beautiful horses. I double featured this picture with "Dr. Kildare's Strange Case" and the customers preferred "Florian." MGM, give us a break and give us a real horse show without history. It will show more profit for us than your friend, "Edison, the Man." Played June 27-29.—A. C. Myrick, State Theatre, Lake Park, Iowa. Small town and rural patronage.

FORTY LITTLE MOTHERS: Eddie Cantor, Rita Johnson, Bonita Granville, Judith Anderson—We had a plenty hot date on this picture, the house record still stands, and we lost a Sunday date that might have done plenty of business with the right picture. Eddie Cantor was washed up long ago and why don't they let him alone?—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

NEW MOON: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Mary Boland—An excellent picture and MacDonald and Eddy seen at their very best. Love, adventure, pirates, the court of France, society in New Orleans, all blended in together, will please any audience for 88 minutes, the running time of the picture. Played July 3-10.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

NORTHWEST PASSAGE: Spencer Tracy, Robert Young, Walter Brennan—As the Indian chief said, "If all men could see through my eyes, they'd all want my squaw," re two reports in June 22 issue HERALD. I believe more people praised this picture than any I have run in several months, but, of course, we don't have the beautiful scenery down here that this picture had. Don't see where it could have been improved. Running time, 126 minutes. Played June 22-24.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town and country patronage.

ON BORROWED TIME: Lionel Barrymore, Bobs Watson, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Beulah Bondi, Una Merkel—We expected much better business from this than we had. Barely made film rental.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

STRANGE CARGO: Clark Gable, Joan Crawford, Ian Hunter, Peter Lorre—We like that Crawford girl better all the time. That ought to mean something to her. It was a very strange cargo and the cash customers liked it. That's all that's necessary. Running time, 113 minutes. Played June 30-July 1.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town and country patronage.

SUSAN AND GOD: Joan Crawford, Fredric March, Rita Quigley, Rose Hobart, Ruth Hussey, Bruce Cabot, John Carroll—It's that same old stuff with Joan Crawford in our town. Our patrons just don't like the lady and prove it by staying away. If you can stomach the first reel of this picture, then the rest isn't so bad, but they will still walk out on you. I'd pass it if I had it to do over.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

TWENTY MULE TEAM: Wallace Beery, Marjorie Rambeau, Leo Carrillo, Anne Baxter—Here is another good action picture that our small town audiences enjoyed immensely. While the draw was nothing outstanding, it did better than our average business of the past few months. Running time, 81 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

TWENTY MULE TEAM: Wallace Beery, Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Rambeau, Anne Baxter—Good picture and good business. Beery in the kind of a part he does best. Plenty of action for the shoot 'em up boys. Running time, 84 minutes. Played June 30-July 1.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

TWENTY MULE TEAM: Wallace Beery, Marjorie Rambeau, Leo Carrillo, Anne Baxter—We ran this picture on Sunday and it did about as good as most of the super colossal epics that are supposed to do business. It is just the type for Wallace and if he has a following in your town, this will please them all.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

TWO GIRLS ON BROADWAY: Lana Turner, George Murphy, Joan Blondell—A swell little picture that did nice mid-week business. All the stars excellent and George Murphy can dance with the best and has some personality along with it. Running time, 72 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park and Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

TWO GIRLS ON BROADWAY: Lana Turner, George Murphy, Joan Blondell—A fair little picture allocated way too high with a couple of flashes of something big that fell back with a dud. Just another picture that did not do a thing for us. Running time, 71 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Monogram

GENTLEMAN FROM ARIZONA: Craig Reynolds, John King—Good picture, beautiful color, but ruined for me by recording. We turned amplifier wide open but could hardly hear dialogue. Many, many complaints from this. Be sure and be assured a better print than I got, if you play it.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Paramount

BUCK BENNY RIDES AGAIN: Jack Benny, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, Ellen Drew, Andy Devine—Here is a picture that will do business anywhere and you don't have to sell it. "Rochester" is the scene stealer and there are plenty of laughs so set it and get going. The picture will back you up and make the stay-at-homes get out again.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

BUCK BENNY RIDES AGAIN: Jack Benny, Ellen Drew, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, Andy Devine, Virginia Dale, Theresa Harris—A most excellent picture with not a dull moment from start to finish. If Virginia Dare dared, she, too, could be the star. Benny excellent and "Rochester" and his chocolate colored girl friend couldn't be beat for excellent acting, and even Carmichael, the polar bear, could wash behind his ears in a most dignified manner and was the mascot that put the two bad outlaws to flight and cinched Ellen Drew's love and affection in a most satisfactory conclusion. The picture is well worth seeing. Running time, 85 minutes. Played May 23-30.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

BUCK BENNY RIDES AGAIN: Jack Benny, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, Ellen Drew, Phil Harris, Andy Devine, Theresa Harris—Benny is lucky to have "Rochester" to ride with him. That colored boy has committed high piracy in both of his pictures, this and the last one. Phil Harris is still all "ham" and don't add a thing, but Ellen Drew is good in her role. Further, I don't think Benny has enough on the ball to carry a show without the colored gentleman. "Rochester's" sweetie helped him to steal the picture and deserved mention in the cast. She is a good looking colored lass, can sing and dance. Scenario is thin material for any picture.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

FARMER'S DAUGHTER: Martha Raye, Charley Ruggles—We ran this with "Rancho Grande" (Republic) and both of the features pleased and drew in some extra business. Poor crops and lack of ready cash keep my farm folks at home or they let the kids come in while they visit.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

GERONIMO: Preston Foster, Ellen Drew, Andy Devine—I saw this picture and spot booked it. Was sure that I would clean up. Didn't do business expected. Below normal on week-end.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GERONIMO: Andy Devine, Preston Foster, Ellen Drew—With shots from "The Texan," "Wells Fargo" and "The Plainsman," Paramount managed to make a very good picture out of this. They'll soon be making them without going on location. Running time, 90 minutes. Played June 28-29.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town patronage.

GHOST BREAKERS, THE: Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard—Good picture and good business. This is one of the funniest pictures we have ever played. Get it quick. Played July 7-8.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

STAGECOACH WAR: William Boyd, Russell Hayden—Fine western. I saw awhile back that El Brendel would be in all future Cassidys. Now, I see that Andy Clyde would be in them. Wonder why this conflicting report?—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Jackson, Ala. General patronage.

THOSE WERE THE DAYS: William Holden, Judith Barrett, Ezra Stone, Bonita Granville—A good little picture with no particular star value but no business. Whenever they wear old fashioned clothes, it's a box office flop. Running time, 80 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park and Ritz Theatres, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

TYPHOON: Dorothy Lamour, Robert Preston, Lynne Overman—Very pretty and the storm looked real enough but we didn't do ordinary Friday and Saturday business on it. It was priced too high for us and we lost money on the picture. And just try to get an adjustment.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WAY OF ALL FLESH, THE: Akim Tamiroff, Gladys George, William Henry, Muriel Angelus—Very fine production. Many favorable comments. While the cast is not composed of stars that might rate in the first ten, they do enact their roles as well as any stars in Hollywood could have done. Tamiroff is excellent.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Republic

CROOKED ROAD, THE: Edmund Lowe, Irene Hervey, Henry Wilcoxon—A little gangster picture which just got by. Running time, 66 minutes. Played July 2.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Thetare, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DARK COMMAND: John Wayne, Claire Trevor, Walter Pidgeon—A good picture that did only fair business and I can't explain why the patrons didn't go for it. We put on a pretty good selling campaign, had a good date, but just didn't get them out. I would say run the picture because it is good and moves right along.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

GAUCHO SERENADE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—Good picture and good business. Despite a carnival and a rodeo for opposition, I did a nice business on July 4th. Running time, 66 minutes. Played July 3-4.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RANCHO GRANDE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—We ran this with "Farmer's Daughter" (Paramount) and both of the features pleased and drew in some extra business. Poor crops, and lack of ready cash keep my farm folks at home or they let the kids come in while they visit. "Rancho Grande" is about on par with the rest of the Autry's, with some good songs and music. Play it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

ALLEGHENY UPRISING: John Wayne, Claire Trevor, George Sanders, Brian Donlevy—They thought the stars of "Stagecoach" were all they needed, evidently. Won't say it's the worst picture RKO ever made that's taking in too much territory but it was very weak. Played May 17-18.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town and country patronage.

BAD LANDS: Noah Beery, Jr., Robert Barrat, Andy Clyde—Bad picture. The first time our country trade ever walked out on a Saturday night picture. All of it made on one pile of rocks. Terrible. Played May 31-June 1.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town and country patronage.

ISLE OF DESTINY: William Gargan, June Lang, Wallace Ford—In spite of color, airplane story and lots of action, our ten cent night crowd didn't like it. A very ordinary program picture. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 28.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Thetare, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

MARSHAL OF MESA CITY: George O'Brien, Virginia Vale—George O'Brien is fast becoming our No. 1 Western star, probably because he doesn't sing and they are giving him some real stories. This is the best O'Brien to date for us. Played June 21-22.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town and country patronage.

PINOCCHIO: Disney Feature Cartoon—They don't repeat and our business says so. We did not run "Snow White," would not meet their terms and we are sorry that we wasted a date on this one. The public gets enough of cartoons filling up the schedule on short footage pictures. We figured that maybe we had missed the boat on "Snow White" but we know now that we did not for the adult public did not support the feature cartoon.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

PINOCCHIO: Disney Feature Cartoon—We didn't do so hot on this cartoon but figured that it would do better because we didn't run "Snow White." Guess they just don't want cartoons in anything but one reelers.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PRIMROSE PATH: Ginger Rogers, Joel McCrea—We did a very nice business on this picture and the paying customers thanked and complimented us on the picture. It is not the most pleasant story you've run but it seems like this is the type of picture that they want and will buy. Run it if you can get it for a decent price and it will show a profit.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BLUE BIRD, THE: Shirley Temple, Spring Byington—Shirley has never been box office for us and this production hit a new low. Yes, Shirley, go to college and when you graduate we will look you over.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

EARTHBOUND: Warner Baxter, Andrea Leeds—Absolutely a flop here and without a doubt the poorest thing we've played for some time. No one seemed to think much of it and it by no means justifies the allocation Fox placed it in. My advice is to skip it by all means. Running time, 67 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

GRAPES OF WRATH, THE: Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell, Doris Bowdon, John Carradine, Charley Grapewin—Well, we got the first available open date, which was about third run in the territory, and if there was any business, someone else got it. The picture was good enough, but I don't think your patrons are in the mood for this type of picture at this time.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

JOHNNY APOLLO: Tyrone Power, Dorothy Lamour, Edward Arnold, Lloyd Nolan—We just didn't get this picture sold or the title didn't mean anything because Fox got the money, we got some more experience, and dug down to the toe of the old sock to pay the loss. I thought it was a very good picture and should have done more business but we're not in the money this year.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LILLIAN RUSSELL: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Henry Fonda, Edward Arnold, Warren William, Weber and Fields—Split decision on this one. The star, Alice Faye, is not too well liked here for some reason. She can put over a song with the best of them but we hear so many people say that they don't care for her type. Hence, it did slim business. The picture is too long and drags considerably.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

LILLIAN RUSSELL: Alice Faye, Henry Fonda, Don Ameche, Edward Arnold, Warren William, Leo Carrillo, Weber and Fields—Very well received here. Many fine comments and much word of mouth advertising made it good box office. A feature for all to see and tell them so. One scene where Ameche holds Faye in his arms and the lights from a fire-place play on their features was to me a very beautiful bit of photography. Running time, 127 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

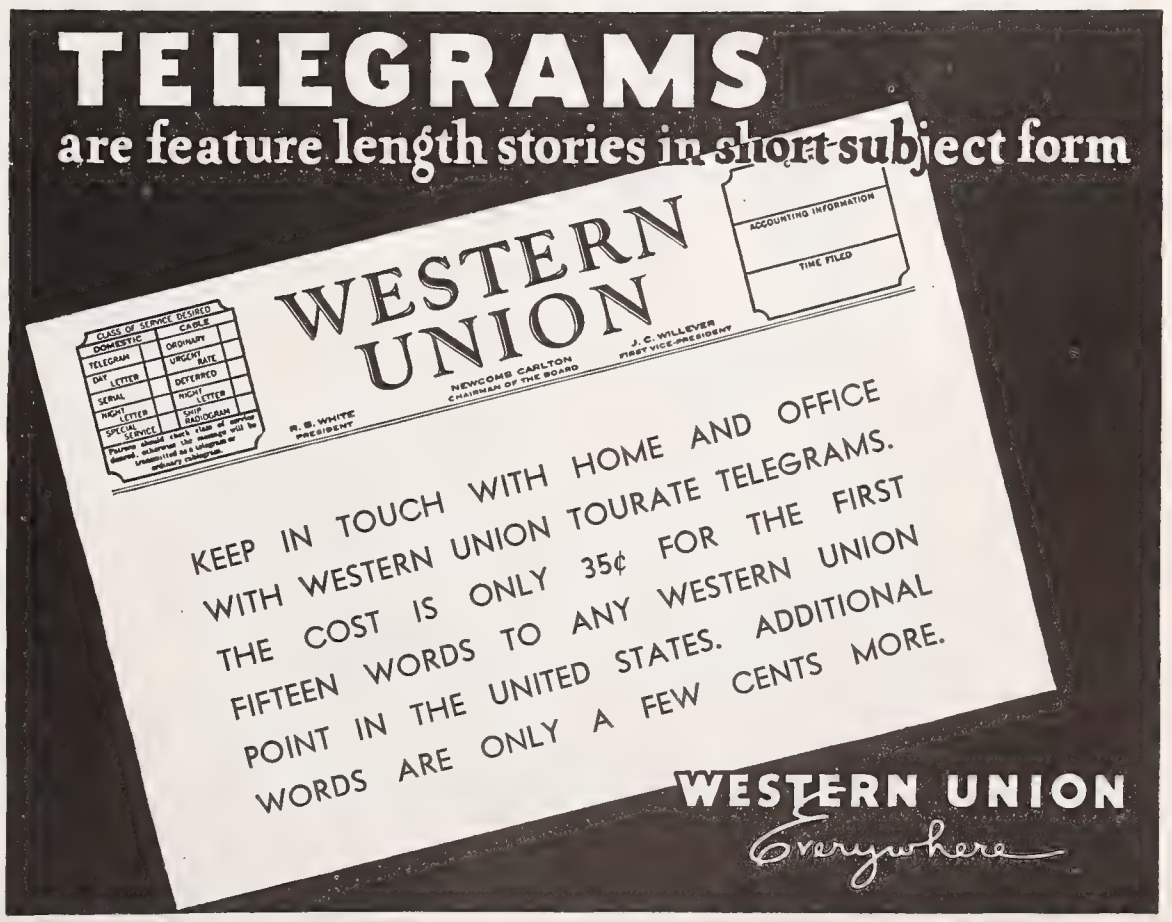
SHOOTING HIGH: Jane Withers, Gene Autry—Fox muffed an excellent opportunity to make a B.O. picture by using a story that would be terrible for a ten year old writer. Get Autry back on the reservation, Republic.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds, Al Jolson—We just naturally waited too long for this one but we couldn't pay the rental they asked so just had to wait until the price came down and I guess we suffered some loss by our actions. The picture is pretty but our print was scratched and that hurt some but the few who saw the picture liked it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

United Artists

ONE MILLION B.C.: Carole Landis, John Hubbard, Lon Chaney, Jr.—Absolutely the worst faked piece of film that ever crossed a screen and that is putting it mildly. It pleased no one, not even the kids.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SAPS AT SEA: Laurel and Hardy—90 per cent of my customers thought this was a real treat and we did extra business on gift night. The other 10 per cent walked out in disgust. Too short for single feature, however. Running time, 57 minutes. Played June 25.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.



Universal

CHARLIE McCARTHY, DETECTIVE: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," "Mortimer Snerd," Robert Cummings, Constance Moore—We tied in with the 4H club and used this on a benefit show. The thing didn't go over but what saw the picture seemed to like it, and I would say run it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

CHIP OF THE FLYING "U": Johnny Mack Brown, Bob Baker, Fuzzy Knight—A nice little western with the comedy of Fuzzy Knight made this a picture that the audience really enjoyed. Running time, 55 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DESTRY RIDES AGAIN: James Stewart, Marlene Dietrich, Charles Winninger, Mischa Auer, Brian Donlevy, Una Merkel—I ran this one late and that hurt business. Then, I ran it on Friday and Saturday, which hurt again, but here is a real picture that will please them all, if you can sell the title. Play it, if they'll sell it right. Too old for much dough, now,

HOT STEEL: Richard Arlen, Andy Devine—Too short and not nearly as good as previous pictures in this series. Running time, 55 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park and Ritz Theatres, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

HOUSE OF SEVEN GABLES, THE: Vincent Price, Margaret Lindsay, George Sanders, Nan Grey, Dick Foran—Another one of those old fashioned pictures that our customers do not like. Well enough made but slow. Running time, 89 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park and Ritz Theatres, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

MA! HE'S MAKING EYES AT ME: Tom Brown, Constance Moore—We did all right with this picture on a bargain night. Nothing big but it is just what the patrons seem to be looking for. Run it on midweek or double bill.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

OH, JOHNNY, HOW YOU CAN LOVE: Tom Brown, Peggy Moran—Did all right on our bargain night. These song titles draw and while the pictures are not big, there is a lot of entertainment in every one so far.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SPIRIT OF CULVER: Jackie Cooper, Freddie Bartholomew—Foto-Nite gave us trouble with the fire chief. Picture very good.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

BROTHER ORCHID: Edward G. Robinson, Ann Sothern, Ralph Bellamy, Humphrey Bogart—We doubled this with "La Conga Night" and still had only a fair Sunday. Many of our customers do not like this star but I thought he was at his best in this one. Ann Sothern good as usual and the entire cast quite competent. Just not box office type of picture. Running time, 88 minutes. Played June 30-July 1.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

GRANNY GET YOUR GUN: May Robson, Harry Davenport—We played this little programmer on our bargain night and the picture got a lot of laughs and nobody walked out on it. I think it is just right for one night at bargain prices.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SATURDAY'S CHILDREN: John Garfield, Anne Shirley, Claude Rains—This picture talked the audience to boredom. All dialogue and no action, not even relieved by some little humor. The kind of a picture that the audience fidgets waiting for something to happen and then wonder why they ever came. So did I.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

TEAR GAS SQUAD: Dennis Morgan, John Payne, Gloria Dickson—Too short, but what there is of it is much better than the title indicates. It's really an Irish story with music and very well done, but the title scared them away. Running time, 58 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park and Ritz Theatres, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

TEAR GAS SQUAD: Dennis Morgan, John Payne, Gloria Dickson—A swell little action drama that really could have been something if a little more time and effort had been given this little show. A picture that any audience will enjoy. Morgan sang several grand songs and there was enough action to make it a swell show. Running time, 55 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Miscellaneous

SECRETS OF A MODEL: Sharon Lee—The Fourth of July has always been a flop for me until this year. "Secrets of a Model" run for "adults only" showed a nice profit. The advertising (heralds), window cards, photos and mats are very attractive and you do not promise your customers something that they will not see. During these times when the big pictures flop, anything with box office is welcome. Played July 3-4.—A. C. Myrick, State Theatre, Lake Park, Iowa. Small town and rural patronage.

ALL ABOUT HASH: Our Gang—Average Our Gang Comedy. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

General patronage.

LOVE ON TAP: Mary Howard—The girl in this short deserves a picture. She can outshine a lot of so-called stars. Everybody remarked about her.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MILKY WAY, THE: MGM Cartoons—A trip of three little kittens to the milky way. They went in a big basket propelled by balloons and the way they got their surfeit of milk will please the young folks and also interest the older ones. GANDER AT MOTHER GOOSE, A: Merrie Melodies—One of the best cartoons we have had the privilege to play but all too short. Excellent. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PUBLIC JITTERBUG NO. 1: Betty Hutton, Hal LeRoy—Good two reel comedy. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SNIFFIES TAKES A TRIP: Merrie Melodies—Good cartoon in color. Running time, seven minutes. E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

STRONG MEDICINES

In less tumultuous and more prosperous times, attractions with star names and openings for obvious tieins might profitably be skimmed of their exploitation cream to the neglect of other pictures worthy of better treatment. War has changed all of this, but definitely. The tempo of showmanship demands stepping-up to battle the competition of changing world events now invading the attention-capacity of theatre patrons.

The challenge is to be met with stronger exploitation medicine. Every promotional prospect in every booking demands thorough exploration. Bigger and smarter ballyhoo. More ingenuity in merchandising. Wider jazzing up of advertising copy. In short, much louder "boom boom"—all the way.

Instances of such "stronger medicines" are noted in reports from Harry H. Hunsaker, on "Biscuit Eater", by Lou Mayer on "Leopard Men of Africa". Told of in this issue, the former describes an ingenious offer of guaranteed entertainment which increased business high above the average for this solid production. The latter campaign is pure, unadulterated ballyhoo. It brought in a fat week of business in summer heat. "In spite of war, defense taxes, and what not, the good old Barnum methods still do the trick," Mayer writes.

Theatremen willing to dig deeply into the inexhaustible resources of showmanship are not to be dismayed by the competition of war. The difficulty of attracting attention away from a burning house is conceded. But it is being done.

ADJUSTMENT TO MEDIA

The suspension of "Loew's Weekly", reported elsewhere in this issue, comes about through no overnight decision. After 21 years of circulation at the company's New York "neighborhoods" and to their mailing lists, the publication is to be replaced by daily newspaper ads under a new rate classification, following extensive and revealing surveys conducted by Oscar A. Doob, circuit ad head.

The surveys showed the house organ losing ground to the metropolitan newspapers, alive to the circulation value of motion picture news. The rise of radio in motion picture publicity also proved a potent factor. Other challenging changes during the life of the weekly included the growth of competing direct mail literature. The tremendous expense of mailing the circuit organ then became out of proportion to returns, which would make it appear that direct mail is not always the most direct advertising.

Announcement of the change, then, is to be regarded essentially as an adjustment of advertising to available media. Loew's locates theatres where the most people go by, expends large sums for properties to which the greatest numbers of eyes will be turned. By the same token, the circuit aims to locate its advertising where the most attention is.

MARQUEE TYPOGRAPHY

With the increasing acceptance of multiple-line, silhouette-letter equipment, marquee layout now is to be regarded with the same typographical consideration given newspaper copy. Yet, it is regrettably evident that theatremen who burn midnight oil to fashion ads with high eye-appeal are less concerned with the negative boxoffice impression made by the hastily assembled and visually monotonous marquee announcement.

The favorable reaction to George Schutz's study of marquee display in the June Better Theatres points up still higher the values of this advertising in the theatre campaign. The editor's suggestions for layouts that defeat eye-monotony, his recommendations for the use of various sized letters to attract quicker attention, confirm Schutz's observation that "marquee copy sells at the point-of-sale".

Since it is accepted that the first step in making a sale is to stop the passerby in front of the merchandise, it is equally true that the pulling power of marquee eye-appeal should have importantly to do with vending the wares of the theatre.

Winners of the Graphic circuit's annual managers' bonus drive were Bill Johnson and Bob Cox, during the past year the most active of the company's contributors to the Round Table. Leaders in the current Schine Showmen's Merit Contest, in the majority, are also members of this organization who report with regularity their efforts on behalf of the boxoffice.

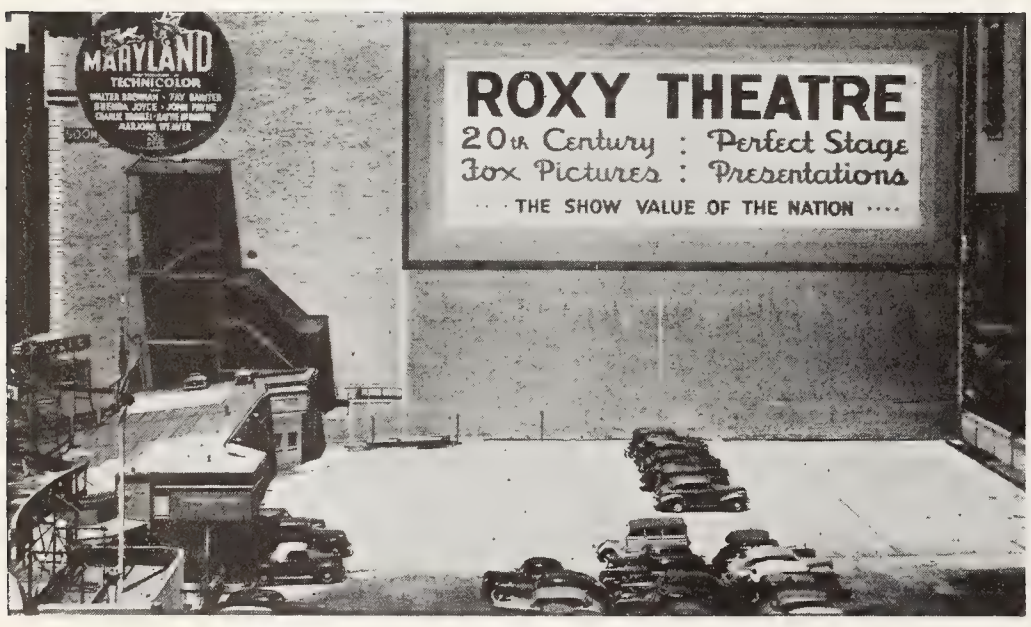
Round Table In Pictures



Keyhole shadowbox was arranged by Ed Fitzpatrick at Loew's Poli, in Waterbury, Conn., for his date on "Susan and God" with catchlines from the picture featured. Box was illuminated from inside and for attractor, Fitz fashioned a 3-sheet standee of Joan Crawford bearing line "Meet Susan."

Simplicity of the display proved the greatest attractor for Jack Goldman's Fourth of July lobby at the Warner Keith, in Philadelphia. Blowup of the Declaration of Independence was framed and planted in a roped off section with flags and "God Bless America" banner.

Through tieup arranged by Johnny Barcroft with city swimming pools, attractive girls disported themselves in the water with balloons carrying "Tom Brown's School Days" imprint to tell of the showing at the RKO Palace, in Columbus, Ohio. Stunt is reported as proving a great hit with both pool managers and the swimmers.

Redwood Theatres 'Guarantee' Dates

For the purpose of bringing adequate boxoffice consideration to pictures of worth and without the assistance of stars, the Redwood Theatres of California have adopted an advertising stamp-of-approval in the form of a seal cut which when displayed in newspaper layouts, on lobby posters, etc., guarantees the attraction. Copy reads: "This Is a Blue Seal Picture. Unconditional Money Back Guarantee."

An instance of the effectiveness of the idea is supplied by Manager Harry H. Hunsaker, for "Biscuit Eater," at the circuit's Eureka, in Eureka. The theatreman opened his campaign with a one-column ad ahead, containing the explanatory highlights of the offer, following two days later with a four-column spread emphasizing the purpose of the plan as endorsed by George M. Mann, circuit head, and buildup for the date (see cut in ad layout in this issue).

Balance of the ad campaign was topped with the unconditional offer and copy: "Yes, we mean it. Your money cheerfully refunded if you are not satisfied after seeing this picture." To give the idea further support for other dates, Hunsaker ran another spread on closing day to note that not one omission was refunded.

Success of the plan depends upon careful selection of pictures chosen for the offer, cautions the Round Tabler, in noting that pictures with natural selling strength in story, stars and supporting players are not to be included in the offer. He feels the best results can be had on attractions of distinct merit that ordinarily would be overlooked by the public.

Wartha Ties in With City Cleanup Week

To aid in the citywide cleanup campaign recently conducted in Elkhart, Ind., Manager Art Wartha instituted a contest among art students in the high schools whereby cash prizes were awarded by the Chamber of Commerce for the best posters describing clean-up week. Entries were on display in the lobby ahead and presentation with due ceremony was made to winners from stage. Stunt was good for newspaper stories and art.

Other activities engaged in by the theatreman included the planting of special panels in adjacent empty store windows ahead of openings, which were later moved to theatre lobby doors during runs.

Resemblance Contest Held By Kelly on "Irene" Date

Mark Kelly of the Metropolitan Theatre, in Houston, Texas, hooked in with the Houston Press for an Anna Neagle resemblance contest ahead of "Irene" and for which cash prizes were awarded girls most closely resembling the actress.

Entrants submitted photographs of themselves along with a short letter listing their measurements and weight and from the pictures a group of artists selected several finalists who were interviewed in person before the winners were selected.

Warnermen Sponsor Ball League To Build Summer Kid Patronage

Summer kid business at Warners' Grove, Willow Grove, Pa., has picked up appreciably since the inception of the theatre's Athletic Movie League, an amateur baseball organization sprung from an idea advanced by Sid Mesibov, out-of-town ad manager in the Warner Philadelphia zone and worked out successfully with the cooperation of Manager Pop Graver and Jack Mulhall, district head.

Since the community is a milltown with little loose money in circulation and few facilities for juvenile recreation, the problem before the theatremen was to provide some profitable activity to get the kids off the streets and into the theatre. With this in mind, Mesibov discovered a wealthy local woman willing to provide the youngsters with inexpensive baseball uniforms, balls and bats. This was called to the attention of about 200 kids brought to the theatre at a well-advertised Saturday morning free rally. Here 10 of the biggest boys were chosen as captains, each making up a team of 10 players and each team selecting its own name. A round robin of games has been set up, with each team playing three games weekly.

In addition to these good works, the theatre ties in at the boxoffice through 5-cent tickets, sold by the players, as admissions to their ball games. Each youngster is supposed to sell three tickets, the money turned over to the team representative, who deposits it in the league treasury at the theatre. Thus, at the end of the week, each team has enough on hand for weekly theatre attendance at least once, if not more.

As a result, the theatre is assured of at least 200 extra kid admissions, plus the added goodwill developed through the police and civic organizations concerned with the juvenile problem. The kids are joyful because they now are able to attend the movies, get uniforms and equipment free, play ball games on regular diamonds and with official umpires, both made available by the cooperating local units.

Barcroft Hosts Redheads At "Irene" Opening Night

"Dress-a-hat" heralds as contained in the RKO pressbook were utilized by Johnny Barcroft ahead of opening of "Irene" at the Palace, in Columbus, Ohio, with guest tickets to those drawing best looking hats on cut of Anna Neagle head featured on the herald. Also stressed was the fact that the first 25 red heads named Irene coming to the theatre would be admitted free, as were an additional 25 girls attending opening night show in Alice Blue gowns. Announcements plugging both stunts were carried in the theatrical columns of all papers.

With much publicity given to "Miss Airport," queen of the Air Show sponsored by the Columbus Airport, Barcroft arranged to have her make her first public appearance after being so designated at his theatre. Girl was presented along with her court by announcer from WOSU, theatre receiving several plugs over air and in newspapers ahead of personal appearance. As attractor, life-size cutout of Anna Neagle as she appeared in the picture in her Alice blue gown was planted in front of theatre.

Rosenthal Stresses Teaser In "Turnabout" Campaign

Arrows were used on all light poles in Bridgeport, Conn., as part of Morris Rosenthal's teaser activities for his date on "Turnabout" at Loew's Majestic. Copy read: "For Laughs, Turnabout and go to the Majestic Theatre." Through cooperation of leading department store, a "turnabout" sale was arranged with several thousand heralds being distributed reading "Have fun at our Turnabout shopping day. Men buy gifts for the ladies. Ladies buy gifts for the men." In addition a special window was arranged for the event.

Street bally consisted of girl carrying oversized book on which title was conspicuously displayed, girl rode buses, etc., carrying the book. Laugh record was hooked up to a public address set in front of theatre, large laughing figures were placed over the speaker from which continuous laughter emerged. Lobby stunt consisted of wheel, with guest tickets going to those spinning it and having it stop at the word "Turnabout."

Imprinted Road Maps Distributed by Morris

With the season for motoring getting under way, Seymour Morris at Schine's Palace, in Lockport, N. Y., tied up with the Esso people for the distribution of New York State road maps, each of which was sniped with sticker reading: "Use this map and fill up with Esso gas to be sure of getting to see 'Road to Singapore' at the," etc. In addition to the maps being available at service station directly opposite the theatre, they were distributed on Main street to all motorists day ahead of opening.

Purchasing three copies of the book "Rebecca," pages were cut from each and overprinted in red with copy: "This page will come to life," etc., followed by title, cast and playdates and distributed as heralds around town. Tieup was also made with the classified section of local daily, whereby guest tickets were awarded to four persons each day who found their names scattered among the ads and properly identified themselves at the theatre.

Pollock's Birthday Cake Highlights "Debutante"

A large-sized plastic birthday cake, planted in the lobby one week in advance of playdate, was one of the highlights of Lester Pollock's campaign for "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante" for its Loew's, Rochester, N. Y., showing. The cake heralded the film as the Hardy Family's Third Anniversary Hit and was topped by three large candles plus caricature cutouts of Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland, who appear in this newest of the Hardy series. Complementing the display was an easel carrying a still of the two stars with cast credits, and stressing the line: "The Hardys' Third Anniversary Hit."

House Staffs Costumed For "Lillian Russell"

For the dates on "Lillian Russell" at the Fox Esquire and Fox Uptown, in Kansas City, Managers Joe Redmond and Frank Ritter put on elaborate campaigns which included planting usherette in lobby attired in the Lillian Russell costume. For further atmospheric effects, doormen were dressed in tuxedos, flat top derbies, diamond studs, rings and tie pins, in the Diamond Jim Brady manner.

All the nicer cocktail lounges featured a "Lillian Russell" drink which was served on blotting paper coasters which carried cut of Alice Faye and title. Automobile agency tied in by staging a parade of 1902 models and their latest which were driven about town with members of the staff dressed as Russell and Brady. At the Esquire rose odor perfume was sprayed in the ventilating system to coincide with Alice Faye's singing "Rosie, You Are My Posie."

Four column art work and story was planted in cooperating paper for the same date by Ed Fitzpatrick at Loew's Poli, in Waterbury, Conn., paper highlighting the fact that Diamond Jim started his startling career as a salesman for a Connecticut firm. Various scenes from the picture were run together with account of Brady's rise in the world.

Inquiring Reporter Devotes Column to "Waterloo Bridge"

Contacting the inquiring photographer of the Washington Times-Herald, Ray Bell sold him on the idea of asking exiting patrons how they liked Bob Taylor in his new mustache in "Waterloo Bridge." This made an interesting column which was later blown up and used in front of the theatre. Same question was also asked of pedestrians by NBC's Man-on-the-street broadcaster.

In an effort to sell the Rhythm Rockets, a group of chorines who do the stage shows regularly at Loew's Capitol, Bell sold his paper on a feature story of his stage presentations. Breaks were landed in the roto section and a series of daily stories were planted which included photos of each member together with biographical data.

Mayer Barnumizes 'Leopardmen' Date

In competition with the heat, war news and other distractions, the campaign on "Leopard Men of Africa" at the RKO Temple, Rochester, by Manager Lou Mayer, was aggressively "Barnumized" in display and ballyhoo to cajole public attentions. As an instance was the special lobby flash sent on from the coast, consisting of mounted African shields, spears, leopard claws, etc., emphasized by captains such as "Merciless Jungle Racketeers. They Dive from Trees to Kill." Blowups of the leopardmen were included.

Out front along the street curb, a series of animal animations was displayed, framed with palms and grass mattings. These included elephant, lion, leopard, giraffe and hippo, up to 10 feet in height, in all, according to Mayer, proving to be one of the greatest ballyhoos used locally. To cover the city in advance, Lou also put out a specially constructed float featuring the animated animals and bannered appropriately. The float was scheduled to visit schools, parks, beaches, playgrounds, and the downtown area between five and six when stores and offices were letting out. Lobby material was also planted in leading downtown furniture window in an elaborate display and another showing was obtained on a department store promotion to tiein in summer furniture featuring the tropical atmosphere.

During the run, a strong attractor out front was a loudspeaker hookup underneath the marquee, wherein a connection from the projection booth picked up the dialogue and music from the print. For added atmosphere, a special recording was made by leading radio newscaster, of three different "pitches" on the highlights of the picture and run on a lobby turntable. This was piped through a second loudspeaker and run intermittently with the other.

Lampe Aids Red Cross With Benefit Show

Much goodwill was garnered by Gus Lampe and Harry Unterfort at the Keith in Syracuse by cooperating with the Red Cross and local dancing school, the latter putting on a revue on stage, proceeds being donated to the Red Cross. Department stores throughout the city cooperated by setting up booths where tickets could be purchased two weeks ahead, cooperative ads were promoted and newspapers covered the benefit with stories and art which included plugs for "Irene," the current attraction.

Effective was the newspaper contest whereby folks were invited to visit local music shop where recordings of their voices or playing of any instrument would be recorded. Winners received the records and promoted gifts. Also featured was the visual broadcaster, which consists of tieup with the tele-electric sign on the bank building whereby title, theatre cast and playdates are flashed every five minutes for three hours daily. Contest in this connection includes the flashing of three names at different hours, if the person whose name is flashed appears at the theatre within an hour, he or she receives a pass to see the picture.

Johnson Organizes Local 'Buy' Drive

The last promotional job completed by Bill Johnson before moving over to the Smalley Circuit was a city-wide "Spend in Millinocket" campaign put over in conjunction with the merchants of that Maine community, and which benefited no little the grosses at the Opera House.

The plan, which ran the first three weeks in June, induced local residents to spend their money at home by reason of a grand prize of an all-expense week's trip to the New York World's Fair for two people, and other prizes in keeping. Tied in with some 15 leading merchants, each purchase, from five cents up made in the store of any sponsor was accompanied by a vacation trip certificate equal to the amount of the sale. When the purchaser had saved ten dollars in certificates, these were exchanged at the theatre boxoffice for a chance on the prizes which were distributed at a grand drawing on the theatre stage. Small cash prizes were also given for those turning in the most certificates each day and the stores cooperated further by running specials advertised in the newspapers and windows.

The cost to each sponsor was fifteen dollars subject to adjustment, the drive backed by Johnson with lobby poster and screen trailer, the merchants with banners and broadsides distributed house-to-house and by mimeographed bulletins placed on the counters of all participating stores during the course of the drive.

In all, the returns were gratifying to the merchants and most certainly to the theatre, according to Johnson, who reports extra business during the drive, since the theatre was the central point of the contest, and double average business on the final day when the drawings were held.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Ingenious Lobby Stunt Used By Stoltz on "Ghost Breakers"

Arnold Stoltz, in addition to his other duties at the Avon, in Utica, N. Y., recently turned "ghost breaker" for his exploitation on that picture. In his best eerie voice, the theatreman recorded gag conversation on a record which was pressed for him at local radio store, which also furnished radio and remote turntable. Through ingenious use of sheets, a "ghost" was rigged up by Arnold, planted in his lobby and the cashier operating the remote control brought forth such conversation as "By ghost to ghost hookup through the courtesy of Blank radio shop we bring you," etc., etc. Total cost to Stoltz was for the sheet which was stuffed with old newspapers, for effect.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Gilman's Victrola Tiein

A novel stunt was that put over by Sam Gilman's, Loew's, Dayton, for his "New Moon" campaign when he made arrangements with the company that maintains the remote-control victrolas in restaurants, ice cream parlors, etc., to feature songs from the new musical and to carry cards over each selector box with plugs for the film, theatre and playdate.

BEATING THE HEAT

Fluctuations of the thermometer in the heat months obviously have little effect upon theatremen fighting for their share of the hot weather grosses as attested to by the scores of entrants landing Fortnighters in the second period of the current Quarter. This time 49 Fortnights go to 52 winners.

Kuhn's "Biscuit" Teaser

The angle chosen by Don Kuhn, manager of the Palms State Theatre, in Detroit, for "Biscuit Eater" was to have the public guess what the title meant. Trailers three weeks in advance carried such copy as: "What is a biscuit eater?," "Would you be seen in public with a biscuit eater?," "Do biscuit eaters walk, crawl or fly?," "Warning, there may be a biscuit eater in the seat next to you," etc. Aside from the trailers, cards were displayed around the theatre with similar copy and pamphlets distributed in and outside the theatre.

Nelson's Kiddie Revue

To help bolster June grosses, Glenn Nelson at the Harris, in Findlay, Ohio, approached local dancing academy officials for a kiddie revue on his stage. Entire cost to Nelson was for lights, stage hands and extra advertising. Newspapers were contacted for stories ahead of the special show and a photographer was tied in at no expense to the theatre to take pictures of the kiddies taking part in the revue, to be used for lobby display purposes. Angle worked with the photographer was that his profit would come from sale of prints.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

Deciding that the strongest selling point of "21 Days Together" was the names of Leigh and Olivier, Gene Curtis for that date at the Paramount, in Syracuse, planted a newspaper contest with prizes to those who sent in the names of pictures in which these stars had appeared. Also capitalizing on the author, cards and stills were displayed in all branches of the public library system and book stores featuring the picture with theatre credits and other works of John Galsworthy. To further stress the "bigness" of the star names, a street bally was devised with sign reading: "Vivien Leigh-Laurence Olivier, the biggest names in Hollywood," etc. The names were painted in giant size letters.

With a "Field Trial Association" going strong in Jackson, Miss., J. R. MacEachron, for "Biscuit Eater" at the Paramount, circularized members of the organization calling attention to the picture's opening. In addition, Mac tied up with chain stores for a slug in their regular ads.

A full-page co-op ad was promoted by Jim Chakeres for his run on "The Bluebird" at the Louvee Theatre, in Wellston, Ohio. Featured at bottom of page was a box containing personal endorsement of the manager and urging all to attend. Also featured were quotes of rave reviews from the leading trade and newspapers.

Through arrangements made with Station WPIC in Sharon, Pa., Pat Notaro made arrangements for the personal appearance of Ted Fio Rito at the Columbia Theatre to be broadcast locally. Column run in daily newspaper covering the broadcasting field devoted space to the event with plug for the band and show at the Columbia.

Stressing the spook angle of "The Human Monster," Robert F. Griffith, at the Capitol, in Whiting, Ind., distributed heralds house-to-house containing life-size cut of Bela Lugosi as he appeared in the picture. Instructions for use were carried at bottom, advising holders to cut out the mask outline, punch holes at ears and use cord to attach to head. Cooperating furniture store planted large chain in window with tiein card reading: "This chair especially reserved for the Human Monster."

Reported as a first time the local public library cooperated on a picture tiein was for W. J. Burke's opening of "The House of Seven Gables" at the Brant Theatre, in Brantford, Ontario. For a week ahead and during run of picture, librarians inserted an imprinted bookmark in every book leaving the library and plugged the picture for the theatreman.

Effective window display was planted by Bob Corbin of the Michigan, in Detroit, for "Adventure in Diamonds," consisting of miniature diamond mine appropriately tied to the picture by cooperating jeweler. Also through cooperation of merchant, display of colored stones was featured in the lobby during run with due credit card.

PAPER PLUGS DATE ON EVERY PAGE

Somewhat of a new high in local newspaper cooperation was obtained by Burgess Waltmon, on "Safari" at the Princess, in Columbus, Miss., when the theatreman was able to promote picture mention in various forms on every page.

Front page was hooked up to newspaper newsreel promotion and inside pages spotted thickly with co-op ads. To top it off, Burgess also made a classified ad tiein which ran with the theatre attraction coming in for additional mention.

Novel advance stunt was that put over by Leon Robertson, Fox, Springfield, Mo., for M-G-M's "Waterloo Bridge." Robertson mounted a 24-sheet on his front curtain. Several times a day the curtain was lowered, and while a spotlight played over the 24-sheet light an anti-aircraft beam, a sound-on-film strip carrying the roar of a plane was run.

Attractor was the cot set up in the lobby of the New Family Theatre, in Batavia, N. Y., by Ralph Booth as advance for "Brother Orchid." Large sign with tiein copy read: "Red Cross emergency station for patrons who are overcome with laughter while witnessing Edward G. Robinson in 'Brother Orchid'."

Preceded by a 60-piece band, a large National Guard unit marched in a body from the local Armory to the midnight opening of "The Mortal Storm" at the Rialto, Allentown, Pa., as the feature of Leo Trainor's campaign for this film. Guard officials furnished powerful lights for the occasion, which received plenty of newspaper space and word-of-mouth publicity.

LAFAYETTE DISCOVERS "THERE AIN'T NO SANTA"

Santa Claus may have the run of Olean, N. Y., during the Christmas festivities, but not in the summer, according to Murray Lafayette's experience with a recent street stunt on "Torrid Zone" at Warners' Haven. The manager had a costumed Kris Kringle on the streets with a sign reading that only Ann Sheridan could bring the old gent to town out of season to view the picture.

The stunt ran into police trouble with parents' associations complaining the summertime Santa destroyed childish illusions. The charge was dismissed with the Round Tabler crashing a lot of extra publicity as a result.

As a gentle reminder that folks should not miss seeing "Virginia City" at the Ritz in Chillicothe, Mo., Manager Barnes Perdue distributed small cards on which was the outline of a hand with index finger extended. By means of tiny holes punctured through the card, a small piece of cord was tied around the finger; copy below reading: "Tie a string around your finger to remind you to see," etc., etc.

With 20 business firms of Delph, Ind., launching a "Buy at Home" campaign in local daily, the advertising campaign is supplemented by a movie message on the screen of the Roxy Theatre through cooperation of Chris Chamales. At no cost to the theatre, Chamales receives weekly mention in the newspaper ads run for eight weeks on this campaign.

Eye-arrestor was the lobby display used by E. R. Erickson of Warner's Rhodes, in Chicago, in advance of "Destry Rides Again." Promoting the aggregation from localite, theatreman featured a collection of old six-shooters of the type used during the time depicted in the film.

Printed locally for "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" were the gag railway tickets gotten out for that date at the Empress in Kelowna, B. C., by Round Tabler Leslie V. Campbell. Distributed house-to-house in envelopes supplied by and bearing imprint of Canadian Pacific, tickets were good for "first class entertainment on the happiness railways," etc., etc.

C. H. Stewart, aided by his assistant, Jack Cantrell, of the Waco, Waco, Tex., in advance of "Grapes of Wrath" dressed three employes as the Joads with chest banners and had them cover main streets. One of the lads carrying suitcase with title letters on both sides attracted much attention.

Atmospheric window display was created by Harold Sachse of the Kiva Theatre, in Slater, Mo., for engagement of "Grapes of Wrath" with burlap sacking for a background. An old carpet on the floor was covered with dirt, burlap shack featured with tin cans, fruit crates, and old mattresses strewn carelessly about the place. Crudely printed signs carried cast, title and playdates.

Lobby display that attracted was the "Typhoon" thermometer erected in the lobby of the Victory Theatre, in Holyoke, Mass., by Round Tabler George Laby which measured approximately nine feet in height. Electric fan playing over all regulated the mercury which, instead of the usual numbers, carried the words zephyr, breeze, wind, gale, cyclone, hurricane and typhoon.

A radio contest in which listeners were asked to write their opinions of the picture was one of the highlights of the "Mortal Storm" campaign put over by Bob Suits, Loew's, Evansville, Ind. Each entry had to be accompanied by a ticket stub. Copies of the novel from which the film is taken were given as prizes.

LATE NEWSPAPER ADVERTISEMENTS

(Left) Opening-day 120 lines on 2 col., for "Biscuit Eater" at the Eureka, Eureka, Cal., stresses the "Blue Seal" project introduced by Redwood Theatres, detailed elsewhere in this section and reported by Manager Harry H. Hunsaker. The money-back guarantee headed all copy in the campaign and is to be carried similarly for all pictures selected by the circuit for the same treatment.

(Right) Playing single-bill programs, Jack Lykes, at Loew's Stillman, Cleveland, was able with few changes to use pressbook layouts for "Turnabout", as noted in this 120 lines on 3 col. "Last times" box was planted next to theatre slug to insure reader attention.

"I told you so!"

♥ Every man is entitled, once in a while, to indulge in a quiet "I told you so!" Frankly, I did after your thrilling reception of "Four Daughters". For, if you remember, I had told you in these very columns what a splendid picture it was and how much you would enjoy it.

♥ Now, with the same sincere conviction that prompted me before, I commend to you a picture called "MY LOVE CAME BACK". And I feel sure that after its opening at the Strand today, you will allow me another well-deserved "I told you so!"

♥ You see, "MY LOVE CAME BACK" is sheer entertainment—wholesome, real, human, happy entertainment. Like "Four Daughters", it doesn't attempt to solve world problems or propound an important message—unless it be that a good laugh and a good time is what we all need right now. It has music, too; haunting melody woven into the story, ranging lightly from the classics to swing. It has all the gaiety, the freshness, the youthful appeal that made "Four Daughters" great—plus a quality of its own that wins for it a special niche among screen comedies.

♥ "MY LOVE CAME BACK" offers lovely Olivia De Havilland her first role since "Gone With The Wind." Already marked by her youth and talent as one of Hollywood's most promising young players, Miss De Havilland in this production wins rank with filmdom's outstanding stars. Jeffrey Lynn, too, demonstrates a deft assurance, a polish, a flare for comedy unusual in one who made his first screen appearance only two years ago. Equally refreshing and surprising are the performances of Eddie Albert, Jane Wyman, Charles Winninger, William Orr and Spring Byington. Good troupers all, they outdo themselves in "MY LOVE CAME BACK".

♥ It is my fervent wish that those millions of you who had confidence in my judgment once before, will continue that trust—will see "MY LOVE CAME BACK" when it opens at the Strand Theater today. I know it will be one of the happiest motion picture surprises you have ever had.

With all sincerity,

JACK L. WARNER, Vice-President In Charge of Production, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

(Above) Since the plan was found to have proved profitable for the introduction of "Four Daughters", the personal endorsement ad signed by Jack Warner, production head, was repeated on behalf of "My Love Came Back", in the campaign designed by S. Charles Einfeld, Warner advertising chief.

The copy ran in key-city papers, day ahead and on opening days, the layout here, 200 lines on 3 col., plugging the engagement at the New York Strand. Copy was intended to emphasize the story's "escape" slants in keeping with the general tendency to lighten advertising copy wherever possible.

CANON W. S. CHASE, CENSOR ADVOCATE, DIES

Reformer Often Directed His Fire Against Film Industry; Was Prohibition Champion

Canon William Sheafe Chase, for over a quarter of a century a vigorous crusader for censorship of motion pictures and a champion of prohibition and many other causes, died Tuesday at his home in Kings Park, Long Island. He was 82 years old.

Fought Film Industry

A great controversialist and frequently a champion of lost causes, Canon Chase was in the front lines of all battles against the practices of the film industry for nearly 30 years. Whether the issue was censorship or a general attack on motion pictures and its makers he was active. He was the author of "Catechism on Motion Pictures in Inter-state Commerce," published in 1922, as a compendium of about all that had been said at the time against films.

Canon Chase was born in Amboy, Ill., January 11, 1858. At an early age the family moved to New England where he was educated and ordained a minister in the Protestant Episcopal Church. Beginning in 1905 and continuing for 27 years, he was rector of Christ Church in Brooklyn, New York. During this whole period he was active in various reform movements.

From 1907 Canon Chase was a member of the International Reform Bureau in Washington, founded by the late Reverend Wilbur Fisk Crafts, his co-campaigner about pictures. After Rev. Crafts died in 1922, Canon Chase took over the Reform Bureau and removed to Washington. In 1920 Rev. Crafts and Canon Chase, through the Reform Bureau, started a drive to "rescue the motion pictures from the hands of the Devil" and its leaders, and asked help "to defeat the $40,000,000 slush fund" which they asserted the film men were prepared to use to block adverse legislation.

He also was general secretary of the Federal Motion Picture Council in America, Inc., and in later years he had been head of the Religious Union for World Peace.

To him may be ascribed the credit for indirectly launching the screen career of Charlie Chaplin. Canon Chase championed in 1908 the bill which forbade race track gambling in New York. Governor Charles Evans Hughes signed the bill and frequent raids on bookmakers followed. Adam Kessel at Sheepshead Bay was one of many frequently arrested and stripped of betting rolls. Kessel told Charles Bauman, a sheet writer in his organization, "It's all off for Addy; I'm through." He looked for another business and in payment for a loan took over the film stock of Charles Streimer. Bauman & Kessel were now in the film industry. When their film supply was threatened they turned to production and started "Bison Life Motion Pictures." Several years later, in the summer of 1913, Kessel dropped in at Hammerstein's and saw a skit presented by the Karno company entitled "A Night in a London Club" and Charlie Chaplin was hired for films and sent West to work in Keystone comedies under Mack Sennett.

Canon Chase enjoyed controversy and the publicity growing out of his labors. An illustration of this was when he invited the late Frank Rembush of Indianapolis and Terry Ramsaye to address the motion picture conference at the annual convention of the Federation of Christ Churches in America in Chicago in 1924. There were fireworks and Canon Chase glowed in the light of the publicity—then, as always. His activities were frequently page one news. His death marked the passing of a famous "unreconstructed" reformer who often fought when the battle was over, as when he campaigned for the 18th Amendment after it was repealed.

The funeral was held Thursday with burial in Bristol, Rhode Island. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Fannie Louise Chase, and two children, Newton Gladding Chase and Miss Dorothy Briggs Chase.

E. E. Webber Dies In Kansas City

Mr. Webber, who formerly operated the suburban Colonial and Mary Lue, is survived by E. E. Webber, Jr., a son, who was president of the Kansas City exhibitor organization two years ago.

James W. Power Dies; Halifax, N. S., Critic

James W. Power, 76, who for 58 years had been a stage, screen and sports columnist for the Halifax, N. S., Recorder and for the Herald, died July 12th of a heart attack. For about a year prior to his death he had concentrated on a twice weekly section on stage and screen with special accent on players seen on the local stage in the past. He was 48 years on the Recorder.

Charles A. Burton

Charles A. Burton, an early New York exhibitor, who operated Dietrich's Columbia Casino at 110th Street and Broadway at the turn of the century, died July 13th in New York. The Columbia Casino, which was known as "Little Coney Island" was a popular resort with cyclists, who gathered on Sundays and holidays to view a stage show and hear a concert. It was there that Mr. Burton showed Liscomb's Animated and Stereopticon Views in 1898 and 1899 which were mainly on the Spanish-American War. He later became manager of the American Cinematograph, dealing in "animated picture machines."

Boris Goldreyer

Boris Goldreyer, an advertising executive with the New York Post, died July 12th of a heart attack in New York. He was a theatrical press agent for many years, being associated at times with the old Hippodrome, the Colonial theatre and the Brighton theatre at Brighton Beach.

William J. Kelly

William J. Kelly, 39, manager of Warner Brothers' theatres at Lawrence, Mass., died in Springfield, Mass., July 13th, while on a visit to his mother.

Richard Von Zakobiel

Richard Von Zakobiel, operator of the Roxy theatre in Milwaukee for the last eight years, died there July 10th.

Schaefer Asks Reduction on RKO Claims

George J. Schaefer, president of RKO, Thursday, July 11th, urged in an affidavit that William Bondy, federal judge, drastically reduce allowances to be made attorneys and others in connection with the company's reorganization. Claims for allowances of $2,046,000 and 100,000 new RKO common shares have been filed.

Cites Industry Crisis

"In my opinion," Mr. Schaefer said, "the motion picture industry is now confronted with the most serious crisis in its history. Recent statements by various leaders of the industry give evidence that major and drastic readjustments are inevitable if the industry is to survive."

Radio Pictures, the producing company, lost about $500,000 in the period from September 1 to December 31, 1939, by reason of the European war, Mr. Schaefer said. The affidavit, in analyzing the revenue from countries either at war or directly affected by the war, stated that in 1937 the income from these countries to RKO was $6,724,986, or 80 per cent of all foreign revenues and 27 per cent of the total world revenue; $9,222,231 in 1938, or 81 per cent of foreign revenues and 27 per cent of world revenues; and $7,817,329 in 1939, representing 81 per cent of foreign revenues and 27 per cent of world revenues.

RKO's cash from all foreign territories for the 31 weeks ending June 1, 1940, was $3,689,531 in comparison with $4,789,531 for the corresponding period last year, the affidavit continued. Furthermore, Mr. Schaefer said, the income from the United Kingdom, the greatest single source of foreign revenue, was $881,254 from June 5 to October 28, 1939, in comparison with the maximum possible cash receipts of $360,000 for the same period in 1940, because of the so-called "Embassy Agreement" on currency withdrawals, under which film companies are now operating in the United Kingdom.

Equity to Meet On Single Union

The Actors' Equity Council was to meet Friday in New York to act on the "one big union" plan for all actors. The Equity Council is scheduled to hear individual reports of members of a special committee, appointed by it to study the idea; and, possibly, to hear the report and recommendation of the committee as a whole. It was also expected that the council members themselves would read and discuss the detailed report of the accountant.

Opposition to the plan has been expected in all unions, from the officials who may lose their positions or who may have salaries slashed.

The international board of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, parent actors' union, on Wednesday in New York rejected the resignation of Frank Gillmore as president and his appointment as president emeritus. The change in designations was to have become effective on July 26th.

THE RELEASE CHART

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger (†) symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

QUO VADIS?

WERE one to consider the pronunciamentos of Mr. Thurman Arnold's anti-trust division of the Department of Justice concerning law, policy and program addressed at American industry, one would arrive at a certain and well defined picture.

In general, it is to be read in Mr. Arnold's documents that he has been engaged in an endeavour to apply existing law in pursuit of the establishment, or re-establishment, of competition in industry.

The program started, especially with respect to the motion picture industry, with a deal of preparation and considerable vigour and emphasis.

More recently, what started to be a lawsuit, a trial of the issue, has settled down to a campaign of round table debates, discussions, jockeyings, negotiation.

This is precisely the procedure which Mr. Arnold, dynamic and assured, originally and emphatically spurned. He went into office with a repute of strength, erudition, resourcefulness.

And this week the program of negotiation, lawyering and dickering—over in the Bar Association building in New York's Forty-fourth Street, not the courthouse downtown in Foley Square—won extension through the summer, with postponement of trial date—if, when and as—to October 7th.

MEANWHILE, the defendant picture concerns have of necessity continued to do business, and, lacking definitions, by walking softly and with methods calculated to evade irritations of the issues. Picture buying and selling has been slowed, but not stopped. Deals are of the familiar general pattern, but not so identical of pattern as they were. Also, with but a single exception, there is a policy, entirely new to this season, of suppressing news of circuit deals. There is, if not a concerted, a remarkably simultaneous and coincidental tenderness about arrangements with affiliated, semi-affiliated and quasi-affiliated theatres.

The over-all scene is no such picture as would have been forecast for today when action: "In equity No. 87-273, United States of America, petitioner, versus Paramount Pictures, Inc., et al, defendants," was filed in July, 1938.

A deal has been going on in the New Deal since then.

Among other facts is that there's to be a national election, with at least one unique issue in it, this November, and less than a month away, incidentally, from the tentative and formal trial date now set down.

The several ifs that might apply to the election and its outcome also considerably apply to the tempo and pressures of the prosecution, if any, of the suit, or to the character of the settlement if a consent decree were to be had.

As negotiations have proceeded, the unofficial report has indicated a changing of the issues and a tinting of the approach, point by point as the year has worn along.

Mr. Arnold in this, as in the several other suits which he has instituted in other industries, stated and re-stated his declarations for the competitive system of American industry, called for under the law.

BUT these days, for reasons much too complex for examination here, there is powerful influence against the principle of free competition. Those many bright young men in Washington who are Collectivists, State Socialists, State Corporativists, and the like, are most positively opposed, in principle, if not specifically, to the Arnold program and his policies requiring competitive endeavour. Those young men have been acquiring strength of late, too.

The real explanation of the current coloration, or lack of coloration, in the government's motion picture suit possibly may be that Mr. Arnold and his program are now out of tune with the ideology of 1940—and that might mean either that he was being in some manner curbed, or given the equivalent treatment of no help and support.

It should, however, be observed that if indeed a collectivist program were to be addressing itself at control, it would still be control, for the motion picture and all other industries.

JEROME MYERS

SEVENTY-THREE and tired, obscure and famous, Mr. Jerome Myers, painter-philosopher, lay down and died in his Carnegie Hall studio the other day. He was probably the first man of art to know and say that the motion picture was an art. His saying counted in the New York of thirty years ago and influenced those first attentions in the dawn of screen criticisms which laid foundations for the acceptance of the years to come.

Probably no American painter of note partook in the character of his expression, by word and canvas, so much of the spirit of the old masters of the Dutch. He himself, quite without pose or design, looked a very Rembrandt. He painted of the lingering old New York of the gaslight era, mostly Eastside, with rare sympathy, no pity and no repining. Poverty about, or personal penury, he accepted, considered like the weather. His canvases hang in the great museums of the world, in great private collections, in Europe and America. He recorded, softly, in a mellowed keenness without protest, the life of the tenements, women in shawls, broken men on park benches, merry tattered children in the streets, and made them classic. He was one to see, but not dispute.

It was in the pattern then for him to see and understand way back there that Charles Chaplin, nameless on the screen of then, was expressing with unconscious genius the poignant comedy of despair. He wrote Chaplin before many knew the comedian's name.

These lines appear in token of remembrance that it was Jerome Myers who, way back then, encouraged a certain hesitant young man in the notion that the motion picture had enough destiny in it to make it worth working for.

This Week in the News

Boycott by 10,000

A SEVERAL months' boycott, by college students, of Bryan, Texas, theatres, all of which are owned by Jefferson Amusement Company, operating in 37 south and east Texas towns, is assuming sizeable and serious proportions.

Jefferson Amusement operates three theatres in Bryan and several months ago private capital erected a large modern theatre at the gates of the Texas A. & M. College. They called it the Campus. College Station, where the college is situated, is an incorporated suburb of Bryan, about a mile away.

Ordinarily enrollment of the college is about 5,000, but with summer school now in session and an extensive preparedness educational course offered, the number has swelled to around 10,000.

The new Campus asked distributors for day and date releases with the Bryan theatres, which the majors asserted was an impossibility due to existing contracts with the Jefferson circuit.

So the students started a boycott. They have picketed the Bryan theatres and the boycott has spread to the general merchandise fields of the city, although picketing is confined to the theatres.

The merchants and theatres in Bryan have felt the boycott keenly and no sign of relenting is seen.

Distributors in Dallas, supplying prints in that section, report that business has suffered excessively by the boycott and all express inability to offer any plan of arbitration or hope of cessation.

"Bank Night" Data

THEATRES of the United States were contributing more than three quarters of a million dollars to Affiliated Enterprises, Inc., when the "Bank Night" scheme was banned by the Post Office Department as a lottery in April of 1938. This was shown incidentally in the rendering of a decision by the Board of Tax Appeals in Washington Tuesday. The issue was on a claim of deficiency of $60,540 by the Department of Internal Revenue, concerning Affiliated's tax returns for the years 1934-5-6. The decision, holding that the concern was not a personal holding company, eliminated $48,072 of surtax, but readjusted downward allowances for salaries to Clover Yeager and Maizie Ricketson, wives of the principal owners.

The board's review of the history of "Bank Night," revealed that it was devised by C. U. Yaeger, manager of the Rocky Mountain division of the Fox Theatres, in the fall of 1933, and was developed in cooperation with Rick Ricketson, a manager in the same area. Because they had worked for the company, the Fox Theatres were permitted to use the system without charge, but other theatres paid $5 to $10 per week, whether they used the system during the life of the contract or not.

Affiliated Enterprises was incorporated with a capital stock of 10,000 shares, but only 201 shares were originally issued, at 10 cents per share, and at no time did the stock outstanding exceed 401 shares.

"Bank Night" started with a cash capital of $800, represented by a loan made by Mr. Ricketson.

The income account for the three years under review:

1934	gross	$116,982	net	$25,382
1935		364,465		159,174
1936		770,558		399,792

No figure was given for the following year of 1937, but it has been indicated variously that it was as large as in the previous year, despite the fact that by that time steps to outlaw "Bank Night" had been taken in several states and that it was under charges before the Post Office Department which in the next April declared it a lottery.

Hitler Starts

HOLLYWOOD has been sending few, if any films to Europe's warring countries since the Nazis' invasion of the Lowlands. And it is now known that the Nazis have been seizing properties of U. S. film companies in German dominated countries. (Motion Picture Herald, July 13, page 12). Now comes the first word of Herr Hitler's probable intentions, cinemawise in the countries he has conquered. United Press reporting Tuesday from Berlin that Hitler's German administrator of the Netherlands, Arthur Seyss-Inquart, has formally and officially decreed that only Dutch films or those made in the Reich may be exhibited hereafter in theatres in the Netherlands.

And American newsreels, along with others, have about given up "covering" Continental Europe, including France. New Nazi regulations make outside newsreels subject to an almost impossible task. Most American newsreelmen have already left the Continent, or are preparing to leave.

Anent the week's activities of the American countries at the Pan-American Conference, in Havana, to build up the American shores against any Nazi or other subversive influences, there comes to light, in a cable to the New York Times, from Russell Porter, at Buenos Aires, the spending of from $50,000 to $100,000 a month by the Nazis for propaganda in Chile, and that the Nazis get their films shown and Britain's banned.

Canada Censors

REGARDED by the Dominion's film industry as a step towards federal censorship, a central censorship committee has been established in Canada, made up of the chairmen of each censor board in the respective Provincial governments. This central committee is under the guidance of the federal government, and seeks, it is said, to unify censorship viewpoints, especially on propaganda films.

It is noted that the Provincial boards still retain local control of censorship; however, it is felt that a form of monopoly control may come, similar to that which the Government exercises over news broadcasting.

Radio Dollars

BROADCAST revenues of radio stations last year showed an increase of 10.3 per cent over 1938, totaling $129,468,022, against $117,379,459, it was reported Tuesday by the Federal Communications Commission at Washington.

Broadcast expenses of the industry, however, increased only 7.9 per cent, from $92,503,594 to $99,789,920, it was shown by reports filed by the three national chains—NBC, CBS, MBS—and 705 broadcasting stations.

While the networks and their 23 affiliated stations had 54.1 per cent of the year's total business, their proportion of the net business (after the deduction of commission payments and amounts due to independent stations for network broadcasting) was 38.2 per cent, and the proportion of the 682 other stations was 61.8 per cent.

Time sales for the year involved commission payments amounting to $17,405,414, compared with $16,487,200 in 1938.

The broadcast-service income (revenue less expenses) of the three major networks was $5,631,228, or 23.9 per cent of the total; that of their 23 stations was $5,428,924, or 23 per cent, and that of the 682 other stations was $12,531,792, or 53.1 per cent, it was stated.

Of time sales, the major networks received $61,310,571, or 47.4 per cent of the total, in 1939 against $55,114,258, or 47 per cent in 1938; national non-network time was $30,472,053, or 23.5 per cent, against $28,109,185, or 23.9 per cent; local time was $36,815,770, or 28.4 per cent, against $33,402,801, or 28.4 per cent, and regional network time was $869,628, or 0.7 per cent, against $753,215, or 0.6 per cent.

As compared with 1938, the reports showed that major network time sales were up $6,196,313, or 11.2 per cent; national non-network up $2,362,868, or 8.4 per cent; and local up $3,412,969, or 10.2 per cent.

Foreign Films Here

MUCH has been said, is being said now and, no doubt, will be said about Hollywood's lost markets in Europe's World War II, but apparently little notice has been taken of the almost certainty that Hitler's dominations will practically end the market in the U. S. for foreign language pictures —not that they have meant much here in the past two decades. Any motion picture made strictly under the Nazi ideology, as in the Nazi countries, or made to conform thereto, as in all probability they will in the conquered countries, will find little or no place on theatre screens in the U. S.

N. W. Allied Bolt?

THE great northwest exhibitor territory of which "Fightin' Al" Steffes was for so long the undisputed warlord, until illness caused his temporary retirement two weeks ago, is hearing rumblings of an uprising.

Establishment of a new exhibitors' organization as a result of dissatisfaction over events at the recent convention of Allied of the Northwest, is reportedly in the minds of the so-called Al Steffes-Bennie Berger group. One of the bolters said "It's only a rumor," but then practically supported that rumor with the statement that, "Nothing is planned until after September 1st."

"Documentary" Jam

STOPPED, they claim, in production of two films after they'd started work, two documentary producers, Joris Ivens and John Ferno, this week filed suit in New York Supreme Court against New York University, the Educational Film Institute of the university, and the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation, which advances money to the institute for the making of educational films.

The suit was filed through Fitelson and Mayer, New York attorneys, and asks for a $20,000 judgment, claiming that Mr. Ferno and Mr. Ivens were hired to make two pictures, and were to be paid for two pictures, and that they were halted by the Institute, which informed them that the Sloan Foundation had refused to allocate more money for the pictures.

One film, to be made by Mr. Ivens, president of the Association of Documentary Film Producers, and maker of a number of features in Spain and China, was to be on "new economic frontiers," and to be six reels long. The title had not been chosen; but the script had been completed; and Mr. Ivens had done some shooting.

The other film, Mr. Ferno's, was to be on the problem of agricultural surpluses. This was to be three reels in length.

Story of Defense

THE big story in the American newsreels these days is the story of American defense. In six weeks, the five newsreels have had no less than 95 national defense items, turning more and more from the War in Europe. Last week, there was not a single European war shot.

The newsreels also are emphasizing refugee stories, principally of those arriving from England, giving most attention to children. Nineteen refugee items have appeared.

Some months ago, the five U. S. newsreels were giving at least one-third of each issue to the actual war. In six weeks, there have been 11 items on Canada's war effort and 38 on England's. There were 15 about France, six on Italy, one about "Russia on the move" and one "Nazi air raid."

Fathers' Rights

IF a film company uses a fictional character in one of its films in a subsequent film, or a series, the author or dramatist who created that character should receive additional payment—that is the contention of the Dramatists Guild, and the object of a campaign which it will conduct in September, its spokesmen in New York said this week.

Sequel rights should be secured by special clauses in contracts with film companies, the guild maintains, and points at several contracts already signed on the Coast containing, it claims, such clauses.

The guild also would have authors receive the privilege of working on sequel scripts, to prevent damage to the character's appeal.

Extant is one test suit on this topic: the suit by author Booth Tarkington against Warner Brothers for the use of his character, "Penrod," in a series. The suit may begin trial in New York Supreme Court in October.

However, the guild is not waiting for a precedent by suit; it wants uniform contract provisions.

Film Education

COURSES in the use of motion pictures in the classroom now are being given regularly in 114 universities and colleges in 27 states, according to the U. S. Office of Education, at Washington. Other institutions include instruction in the use of films for educational purposes in other courses.

Some indication of the educational effect of motion pictures in the classroom is given in the statement of the Louisiana Polytechnic Institute that "the student learns from five to 50 per cent more when the use of visual aids has been added to the usual verbal instruction."

SIX FOR FIFTEEN CENTS IN DETROIT SETS NEW HIGH

Alex Schreiber Reports on Cut Rate Competition with "Rebecca" on Bargain Bill of a Big Downtown Theatre

Detroit is now leading for the championship in bargain counter exhibition of motion pictures.

The Times Square theatre in downtown Detroit, playing six pictures on a bill for 15 cents, top admission, is "three up" on Chicago's Belmont with triple bills, recently given the limelight of protest attention by Jack Kirsch, president of the Allied Theatres of Illinois, exhibitor organization.

The Detroit shows take precedence, too, in the amount of running time, running shows totaling five hours and twenty-five minutes for a single admission fee. That is about half an hour more show than the Belmont has so far achieved.

The situation in Detroit was this week given attention by Alex Schreiber, Associated Theatres, Inc., headquartering in Detroit. Mr. Schreiber addressed his findings and observations to David Selznick in a heavily documented letter—this in sequel to Mr. Selznick's expressions of disapproval and surprise when he had been informed by Mr. Kirsch that "Rebecca", a Selznick production, had played on a Chicago triple bill.

Mr. Schreiber has been militant on the subject of multiple billing and price cutting devices for a long time, with varying responses, as his letter indicates. His communication to Mr. Selznick, under date of July 15th, reads:

Dear Mr. Selznick:

In perusing the July issue of the "Motion Picture Herald," we noted with proper respect that you endorsed the attack on the "three feature" exhibitors after Mr. Jack Kirsch, of the Allied of Illinois, directed a blast 10 days ago at these triple bills and particularly singled out your "Rebecca" in such blast.

What do you think of the following situation that has existed for almost a year and still exists in the City of Detroit at the Times Square Theatre? Not triple features, but five and six features at the advertised price of one admission—adults 15c—and yet not even at this low advertised price, but at the price of 5c, as hereinafter more particularly explained, and your "Rebecca" was in the midst of such showing this past week, both on Saturday, July 6th, and Tuesday, July 9th.

For your information, the Times Square Theatre is located in the downtown district of the City of Detroit, within three blocks of the City Hall, was originally a 1,500-seat house, but advertises 1,000 seats on the lower floor (the balcony, no doubt) being closed for the summer).

For the past year, we have been attempting to correct this abuse and have directed our attacks for assistance to the Cooperative Theatres of Michigan, of which we are a member, to Mr. Earl Hudson, of the United Detroit Theatres, and to all of the exchanges, most of whom have cooperated, but, to our regret, Paramount and United Artists still continue to service this house with their 1939 and 1940 product in addition to all the old pictures this theatre can use.

As mentioned, the Times Square Theatre's advertised price is 15c. They have in the past, and are continuing so to do, distributed to grocery stores, beer gardens, candy stores, ball parks, parking lots, and even house-to-house in the downtown and surrounding sections, thousands of passes, a few of which are herewith enclosed, which, you will note, for a 5c service charge will admit one or more adults to performances from Monday to Friday, inclusive, and likewise, other passes are distributed which are known as free courtesy passes and upon which no charge is made whatsoever.

Further, anyone desiring to see the Sunday bill of three features may come in as late as about 7:00 P. M. on Saturday and see the Saturday show of two or three features, followed by the Sunday show of three features, which usually begins about 10 or 11 o'clock and sometimes as early as 9 o'clock on Saturday.

The program for the balance of the week, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday is regularly three features, and on Wednesday and Thursday two features.

Thus, the public by the use of these service passes for 5c can see five features by coming in Tuesday night about 7:15 and remaining until closing, usually 2 the following morning.

Free parking is also provided in close proximity to the theatre and on Thursday dishes are given away free to the lady patrons in addition to a four or five feature program, and by arriving at the theatre about 7:15 P. M., the Wednesday and Thursday program may be seen, which is immediately followed by the Friday and Saturday program of two or three features.

If a husband and wife desire to enter the theatre the husband will be admitted for the 5c service charge, and if the wife desires a dish, she may receive same upon payment of 15c, or a total of 20c for both husband and wife.

If a dish is not desired, they both may enter for a total of 10c.

We are enclosing several weeks' schedules of the features shown at this theatre as appears from their advertisements in two of our leading newspapers, which is self-condemning and self-explanatory.

You will note that "Rebecca" was seen by thousands of people, together with five other features, on Saturday night for 15c and on Tuesday night, July 9th, with four other features for 5c, in addition to the free parking privilege.

Has All-Night Patronage

Besides the injury to the industry as a whole, we, of course, have a personal grievance as we are in direct opposition to the Times Square at our Loop Theatre, which is across the street from the Times Square. The Loop is a 550-seat house which we have been operating for over 13 years, ever since its construction, and for the past seven years or more, we have had a 24-hour policy. We have been known for years as the "biggest little theatre" in the state, and have during these years developed an all-night patronage as we have found it of great convenience to late workers, particularly, hotels, railroads, newspapers, restaurant, street car employes and others employed in the night life of the city.

Being open twenty-four hours, it is naturally necessary for one show to immediately follow the other, which until recently we changed at about 2 o'clock in the morning, but never in these seven years did we advertise more than two features on any program. However, because of the tactics of the Times Square management, we were compelled to move up our new show to about midnight in order to retain this night patronage. Incidentally, while we are open 24 hours a day, the Times Square usually closes about 2 or 3 in the morning, depending upon the length of the features or sometimes depending upon lack of attendance, and does not reopen until 9 or 10 in the morning, which policy was adopted from a prior opening of 11 A. M.

We believe, and, no doubt, you do, too, that if the policy of the Times Square is allowed to continue, it will have a disastrous effect upon the entire industry. All we can do, however, is complain, and if, as Mr. William F. Rodgers of MGM is quoted, "Triple bills are indefensible," what justification can there be for the servicing of a theatre of the Times Square with its present policy?

Incidentally, the Loop Theatre has always paid a good price for its pictures and is still doing so, in spite of the tactics of the opposition, and is attempting to maintain its price policy of 15c matinees and 20c evenings from 6 P. M. to 8 A. M.; likewise, 20c on Saturday and Sunday matinees and evenings. The Times Square advertises 15c at all times, whereas, in reality, the 5c service charge is in effect on week days, both matinees and evenings, and 15c on Saturday and Sunday.

Opposition Prices Cut

There is a third theatre within a few doors of the Times Square Theatre, having 250 seats, which is a 10c theatre, and it is now likewise resorting to the 5c so-called service charge for adults, sample passes of which are herewith enclosed, which policy they, apparently, adopted as a defensive measure against the Times Square Theatre. At no time, however, have we seen them advertise more than two features on any one program.

We have gone to great length in discussing this matter as we are trying to give you a vivid picture of same. It certainly is a travesty on justice and fair dealing when Paramount and United Artists and some of the independent distributors continue to service theatres like the Times Square that persist in continuing to operate under their present policy.

Have just read an article by Samuel Goldwyn in the current Saturday Evening Post, entitled "Hollywood Is Sick," in which he says the double feature is killing the industry. I'm wondering how he will react to the conditions as outlined in this letter.

ALEX SCHREIBER.

In addition to Detroit, Associated Theatres, Inc., under the direction of Mr. Schreiber, H. H. Smilay and William London, operate in Flint, Wyandotte, Highland Park and Trenton.

Screen's Job is Entertainment, Not Propaganda, Lesser Urges

The motion picture will and must never be a means of organized propaganda, Sol Lesser told The Institute of Human Relations of the universal religious conference at the University of California at Los Angeles. "In time of national crisis," he said, "I am confident you will find the industry alert to carrying out the purposes of democracy, but the industry's field basically must continue to be entertainment. In democratic society, entertainment is the common property of all, not the privilege of a few.

"The life blood of the industry is based on the continuation of human relations, emotional and actual. I should like to demonstrate to you that while not the means of propaganda for The Institute of Human Relations, motion picture becomes its best ally. In the motion picture the villain is always punished because of improper behavior. The hero or the heroine or both having the best of human behavior are rewarded. The public is entertained, but at the same time it has been given a subtle lesson in proper human relations.

"Do not let anyone tell you the American motion picture producer is unaware of his obligation to society. He gladly accepts his share of the burden to keep alive democratic ideals. There is no other industry in the world with so strict a code of ethics. The producer recognizes the fact that his screen plays are for family consumption. Good taste is a primary requirement of the Production Code, which must be subscribed to if a picture is to have general distribution. One of the first requirements of this code is that proper human behavior must triumph. Not only the producer but writers, directors and actors devote themselves in practical application to putting on the screen stories of democratic ideas, wholesome stories filled with drama of everyday life.

"One talks of propaganda pictures to end wars and threats of war. If anti-war pictures could have achieved this end, war would have been outlawed years ago." Citing a list of pictures showing the futility and tragedy of war, Mr. Lesser said: "Nevertheless part of the world is at war today and still other nations are piling up armaments for future wars.

"I would say that in a time of national crisis the screen could rally to a single cause and by concerted effort so bring to the public attention the single subject that there would follow unified national consciousness, but the screen should never be used in such a manner unless there be full knowledge and general approval that it is being used for the good of the nation. On such an occasion the screen might serve as an advertising medium to get over its point, but when such a crisis has passed anything touching upon advertising must be eliminated.

"Once the screen is accused of partisanship it ceases to be an entertainment medium. Theatres would soon become hotbeds of political discussion, and if the motion picture is to continue to be the greatest of all media mass entertainment we must keep theatres free of politics."

Actors Equity Seeks "Red" Charge Hearing

So that its members may be cleared of a freely voiced charge that they are Communists, or dominated by Communists, Actors Equity is reported ready to ask an immediate hearing before the Dies Committee.

The action would be the result of the charges of Republican Representative William P. Lambertson of Kansas that the Equity Council was dominated by Communists, and that actors, generally, had not "cleaned house" enough to deserve a reinstitution of such Federal unemployment relief as the Federal Theatre Project, which was ended by Congress last year.

MAJORS SILENT ON SALES TO AVOID 'IRRITATING' DECREE NEGOTIATIONS

No Announcements Made of Circuit Deals Except by RKO; Hesitation on Terms Seen Delaying New Contracts

The exact status of the distributors' circuit sales of 1940-41 product is one of the industry's mysteries of the day.

Some three-and-a-half months have passed since the new season's sales convention season opened, six weeks since it ended. Yet barely a handful of circuit deals have been announced. The distributors are purposely keeping them quiet so as not to "irritate" the present consent decree negotiations.

That circuit buyers, and large numbers of smaller operators have been cautiously stalling on new season buying in unprecedented fashion is generally known, pending determination of what concessions might be expected out of a consent decree or other settlement of the Government trust action. Such concessions, forced by the Government as the price of ending its prosecution, would, of course, have direct effect upon contracts, on buying and selling, on playing.

Aside from this, the eight distributor defendants in the trust action are, in all but one case—RKO Radio—most reluctant to divulge any circuit negotiations or consummations, reluctant to discuss the situation in any form—assuming a tight-lipped attitude because most of the independent exhibitor complaints which brought the Government's court attack were based on preferences to circuits, to the alleged discrimination of subsequent run independents. Accordingly, while both Government and defendants proceed with negotiations for a settlement, on the basis of a new order of customer treatment presumably for all, the majors have no desire at this time to publish whatever new circuit contracts they may complete.

14 from RKO

Whereas in past seasons, many of the distributors issued day-to-day trade press announcement of circuit deals consummated, through regular home office publicity channels, to date there have been announcements only from RKO, reporting 14 circuit sales, and Republic Pictures, listing a Famous Players Canadian Circuit buy. Republic is not a trust suit defendant.

At this time last year, circuit sales had been reported formally by practically every one of the distributors for 1939-40 product.

In one authoritative distribution quarter it was admitted that large numbers of circuit buyers also are holding back on buying in order to determine the real extent and potential length of the war boom in general industry.

With the distributors asking for more in rentals, to offset at least part of their losses in Europe, product buyers, while knowing what they can afford to pay at the present time, cannot tell what they can afford months hence, and, if they contracted now at higher prices, and the boom in big industries suddenly ended, they feel they would be left with a bad contractual bargain.

Present contracts for 1940-41 could not, of course, contain any of the main concession clauses which are expected to be incorporated into a consent decree because the exact nature of the clauses still is to be determined. The 1940-41 contracts are virtually the same as last year's, except for some percentages.

A consent decree could not change any contracts previously negotiated, but it could void existing contracts, requiring the distributors to sell all over again on the requirements of the decree, throughout the country.

Regardless of the circuit sales closed to date, the distributors have a much longer way to go this year than in many a past season to roll up the average 600 block franchises necessary heretofore to 35,000-odd playdates usually sold to the 83 large circuits alone. A consent decree breaking down large-block selling into smaller units, of, say, four, five, six or thereabouts, is still another problem for the circuit selling job still to be done for the season starting in September.

Despite opinion in some quarters during the first days of the sales convention season, last April, that the confusion arising from the prosecution might place selling virtually in a state of suspension, sales managers have been proceeding, at least with sales approaches to prospective customers, as normally as possible, all the while awaiting word from their lawyers on any new system of selling, and prepared to meet that contingency when it arises.

Some 1940-41 Circuit Sales

RKO Radio has reported to date 1940-41 contracts sold to Skouras-Metropolitan Theatres, 46 theatres; Randforce Circuit, Brooklyn, 42 theatres; Interboro Circuit, New York, 39 theatres; Island Theatres, Long Island, 12; Loew New York Metropolitan Circuit, 18; Lucas and Jenkins, Georgia, 48; Monarch Theatres, three theatres in Ohio, one in Pennsylvania; Maine and New Hampshire Theatres, 28 theatres; Loew-Poli Theatres, New England; Fred Dolle Circuit-Fourth Avenue Amusement, Louisville first runs; Grace Rodgers Circuit, Illinois, Arkansas, Missouri, eight theatres; Al Boyd Theatres, Pennsylvania, five; Tanner Circuit, Illinois, five.

Republic's big deal was with the N. L. Nathanson Famous Players Canadian Theatres, of 275 throughout the Dominion.

Warners are understood to have closed, among others, a two-year contract with Associated Theatres, of 24 houses, in and around Cleveland, and Tri-States Theatres, A. H. Blank are understood to have bought Twentieth Century-Fox, for Iowa, for three years, covering 26 theatres.

ITOA IS SEEKING RENTALS CHANGE

Increased rentals for first run houses and a reduction in rentals for subsequent run theatres are advocated by the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York. The association takes the stand that distributors should make up the loss in foreign revenue by increased rentals for the first runs instead of demanding higher prices from subsequents.

An editorial in the current issue of the organization's house organ refers to the testimony of Charles C. Pettijohn of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America in the recent Neely bill hearings at which Mr. Pettijohn is reported as saying that 85 per cent of domestic film revenue comes from first runs.

Test Runs for "Boom Town"

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer this week reported that 17 pre-release promotion engagements have been set for "Boom Town," starring Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Claudette Colbert and Hedy Lamarr, at admission price increases of from 25 to 33 1/3 percent.

The engagements will start August 9th in Cincinnati, Atlantic City, Harrisburg, Reading, Detroit, New Orleans, Indianapolis, Lake Placid, Syracuse, Seattle, Omaha, Denver, Colorado Springs, Tyler, Tex., Tulsa, and Los Angeles, where it will play at the State and Chinese theatres. Other dates are being added.

On Monday Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, in regards to "Boom Town," said: "The public will tell exhibitors whether they are willing to pay advanced admission prices. While our sales executives have found out that various theatre managers and circuit heads believe a high admission price should be charged for 'Boom Town,' nevertheless we have decided to conduct a few test experiments in advance of the regular release in order to make certain that the course we recommend to those who have contracted for the picture is the wisest."

Exhibitors' Advice Asked By "Sea Hawk" Screenings

To interest exhibitors in one of its most expensive productions, to obtain their cooperation in marketing it, to ascertain their opinions on its worth and to allow them some voice in determining a marketing policy which may mean a change in selling methods and increased admission prices, Warner Brothers on August 5th, in 37 key city exchanges in this country and Canada, is trade-showing "The Sea Hawk," starring Errol Flynn.

Gradwell Sears, general sales manager of the company, announced the policy, which presages similar trade shows for other Warner high budget pictures. He is scheduled, on the day the picture will be tradeshown, to address the various assemblages, by a special transcontinental telephone hookup. After the screenings the company branch managers will hold open forums.

SUMMER ROUND TABLE IN TRUST SUIT UPSET BY PARAMOUNT PALS

Exhibition Partners Condemn the Draft of Agreed Points So Far; Meanwhile Conferees Have Until Oct. 7 to Get Somewhere

It looked like a quiet summer of round-tabling in consent decree negotiations between Government and defendant majors in the motion picture anti-trust suit Monday when Judge Henry W. Goddard, in New York, set the trial date ahead again, this time to October 7.

But that was Monday.

It was about sundown Tuesday when a long smoldering eruption of opposition to the whole program and procedure arose from the exhibition partners of Paramount Pictures, Inc., a leading defendant, first named, indeed, in those papers filed at the courthouse in Foley Square in July, 1938.

The "Paramount Partners," as the vernacular of the trade calls them, are against everything they have heard about the decree.

Legally this means exactly nothing. The Partners are not parties to the suit.

Strategically it may mean considerable, whether the movement is spontaneously all all the Partners' own, or if it be part of a larger program of a department of utter confusion and delay.

Paramount Partners being who they are and what they are in weight, kudos and influence, it was to be expected that influences would be found to be extending themselves in many directions and stirring others to utterance.

Up from the South, for instance, not with bearing on the Paramount Partners' action, but commenting on what he had heard of consent decree drafts, came expression from Ed Kuykendall, of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, suggesting that provisions proposed about block booking arrangements would be no good.

It is to be observed now that Paramount Partners, in their unofficial relation to the action, are now aligned with those three defendant corporations, Universal, United Artists and Columbia Pictures, against a consent decree.

Incidentally, while there has been no official utterance, some observers have gained an impression that important executives in the defendant Paramount corporation, despite its participation in decree negotiations, are perhaps not entirely enthusiastic about the procedure, possibly also able to hear with composure about the opposition of their theatre affiliates.

Seventh Adjournment

This over-all situation of new confusions arrived on a previously calm scene. Monday morning, J. Stephen Doyle, special assistant attorney general, acting with the consent of the defendants, appeared before Judge Goddard in quest of the postponement. Seven times for seven weeks, since June 6, the procedure has been the same—well near routine by now.

As the case went over to October 7, there appeared a prospect of ten uninterrupted weeks to follow up on the optimistic forecast implied by Mr. Doyle when he said: "A substantial agreement has been reached on the major portion of the important provisions."

But for two weeks now, beginning at the Paramount Partners' meeting at Old Point Comfort in Virginia, those "important provisions" of the tentative agreement have been in the crucible. At that meeting there were strong individual, unofficial expressions of displeasure. Then, last weekend, the Partners moved north to reassemble again at Haddon Hall on the Boardwalk at Atlantic City. They were no cooler there.

The state of mind among them grew in heat and fervour when the Partners came up to New York on Monday. By then it was rather clear that the men who control 1,250 of the nation's better theatres were to put their weight behind their then crystalized opinion. They made their opposition to the consent decree known to the heads of the distribution companies, and to other circuit leaders. Fortuitously, there was a meeting of New York circuit chieftains in the office of Joseph Bernhard, of Warner Brothers Theatres, in Forty-fourth Street, that day.

There was no formal or documentary announcement of the Paramount Partners' eruption. It was percolated, warm from the pot. In substance it comes to this:

"Blocks of Five" Hit

The Partners do not want features sold in blocks of five as a proposed replacement of the present system of sales of complete programs, on the ground that the marketing of such small units is impractical for long range circuit operation.

They are against the proposed provision for trade screenings by distributors—intended to appease "blind selling" complainants—because this would require the spending of too much time by circuit executives and film buyers and bookers in the distributors' exchanges.

They are not pleased with the proposals for local buying, for arbitration and for the proposed curtailment of circuit expansion.

They feel that some of the provisions would not only increase costs of selling, but also of buying, all of which would logically be expected to be added to film rentals.

They disapprove the clause designating every theatre as "a run."

They do not want the clause which would allow an exhibitor, under certain conditions, to deprive another of product by arbitration.

They are strongly against "regulation of the industry by the courts," as would happen, in effect, under a consent decree.

Summing up, they do not want a consent decree.

Paramount partners and circuit officials who are understood to have participated in the meetings include E. V. Richards, Saenger Theatres, from New Orleans; Julius Gordon, Paramount-Texas Theatres, Beaumont, Tex.; Robert J. O'Donnell, Interstate Circuit, Dallas; Hunter Perry, Paramount-Virginia Theatres, Charlottesville; A. H. Blank, Tri-State Circuit, Des Moines; M. A. Lightman, Malco Theatres, Memphis; R. B. Wilby and H. F. Kincey, of Wilby-Kincey Theatres, Charlotte and Atlanta; E. J. Sparks, All-Florida Circuit, Miami.

Conferences Continue

The Government and defense counsel negotiating the decree this week continued their almost daily conferences, on the second floor of the Bar Association Building in New York's Forty-fourth Street. On Thursday they were joined by Paul Williams, Robert Sher and James Hayes, of counsel for the Government, who had spent the weekend in Washington discussing the tentative consent draft with Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general, chief Government "trust-buster" of the day.

Before Judge Goddard on Monday, Mr. Doyle for the Government observed that "there are only one or two matters of importance presenting great difficulties."

Among the "difficulties," it is understood, is a so-called "escape clause" which, if incorporated in the decree, would permit any defendant signatory to withdraw as a subject of the decree in the event that any non-signer obtained trade advantages over a signer. Some in the "'Big Five" are said to feel that the "Little Three": Universal, United Artists and Columbia, might obtain advantages if and when the five consent to the decree. The five, therefore, are holding out for inclusion of an escape clause in any settlement. The "little three" insist on a trial.

Another "difficulty" at the moment is the manner and method of arbitration.

Divorcement in Abeyance

As the drafting continues, circuit divorcement continues an outside issue, both sides leaving that matter for latter consideration, at the instance of Thurman Arnold, who, some weeks ago, practically admitted that it was too big an issue to link with a trade practice program. Some expect that the divorcement issue will be settled by the majors agreeing not to engage in any nationwide theatre expansion.

Besides settlement provisions hereinabove mentioned, the tentative draft embodies a specific proposal with respect to the acquisition of and changes in theatres in which the defendant companies are interested. It would also provide that the sale of one group of five pictures shall not be conditioned upon the purchase by an exhibitor of another group or any part of a group. Local buying would be set up, discrimination and preference runs prohibited, clearance would be arbitrated when in dispute and the forcing of shorts, newsreels, trailers, westerns, serials and foreign-made films would be prohibited. An exhibitor would have the right to cancel for religious, racial or moral offensiveness.

OPPOSITION CENTERS ON THREE CLAUSES

The revolt of Paramount Partners against certain parts of the tentative consent decree appeared in midweek to be getting additional support.

Most of the opposition appeared to be against the sale of pictures in blocks of five, advance trade screenings and the provision that all theatres are "a run".

Although divided in their opinions of some points of the proposed decree the Partners were reported to be unanimous and determined in their objection to these three clauses.

Outright condemnation or sharp criticism of one or another of the draft proposals came Wednesday from Ed. Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA; Max Cohen, president of New York Allied; Southeastern Theatre Owners Association, and Harry Brandt, president of the New York ITOA.

"What shall we find back home in Paris?" Autre writes

THE first tidings, in many months, to be had from Pierre Autre, able correspondent in Paris for Motion Picture Herald and Quigley Publications, have arrived in a letter to Martin Quigley.

M. Autre has been in military service since the mobilization, and since then, and yet, his address is "somewhere in France".

This letter, it is to be noted, was written June 14th, after Paris had been taken, but while France was still France, before the surrender.

There is poignant prophecy in M. Autre's speculation: "I do not know when you will receive this letter, maybe in one month. At that time, the situation will perhaps be cleared . . . and maybe then we can relax."

PIERRE AUTRE

After five weeks the letter has arrived, with the situation cleared indeed, with a dashing of the hopes of M. Autre and his compatriots. His letter follows:

Dear Mr. Quigley:

On these unhappy days, when my country is invaded for the third time in seventy years by the same enemy, when Paris seems to be now in German hands, when our army still fights magnificently for the freedom of the world, I am thinking of you and of all my American friends, who are showing so deep sympathy for us and try to help us as much as they can.

I did not write you for a long time. Please excuse me for my silence, but it is not always easy to write in war time, and sometimes one does not feel like it.

Thanks to God, I am still safe, and in perfect health, and for the time being rather far from the dangers except for the air bombing which may, of course, find you anywhere.

For more than three months now, I have been attached to the British Army, as liaison agent. This means that I have been living an entirely British life, with British officers.

No need to say that all this has been very interesting and I have the feeling that I have been doing a bit of useful work for my country.

Re. the cinema angle, I did not send you any news for months. In fact, it was quite impossible, as I have not had many chances to collect much information where I was. I went on leave and stayed in Paris from May 3rd to 14th, and I had taken back with me all the documents to send you a general story on the French cinema for the Motion Picture Herald and the Almanac. I had also started to establish statistics on the French Market in 1939 and 1940. . . . I still have these documents with me, but they are not finished. When I came back from my leave, the real war had started and I did not find much time to work on cinema.

Indeed, in spite of the fact that I am not with a fighting unit, I have been very busy, and, now, I do not feel like thinking of cinema. . . . Anyway, with the Germans in Paris, I do not know what has happened with all the American companies; I do not know where is Harold Smith, and all the others.

Maybe, you have had news from them already. I pray God that they remain all right.

I do not know when you will receive this letter, maybe in one month. At that time, the situation will perhaps be cleared . . . and maybe we can then relax.

I have seen all the refugees going down to the south and west, some in motorcars, some on bicycles, some on carts, some walking and pushing before them hand-carriages, carrying with them all that they have been able to take from home. . . . This is the most sad thing you could imagine. . . .

My parents had left Paris ten days ago with my automobile and they are now safe and quiet in a small village of southwest of France, at some friends'. . . . But I stayed one week without news and was deeply anxious. . . . What shall we find back at our home in Paris? Anyway, I do not mind, as if we are still living then it will be sufficient.

I have already heard of the death of some friends, among them my best and most intimate friend, Reservist Lieutenant Fernan Vincent, killed in action one month ago. He was the Managing Director of the French Cinema Chamber, and you can find his name in the Paris subscribers' list of Motion Picture Herald.

I knew him for twenty years, when we met at the college in 1920. We had been graduated together and followed also together the courses of the Paris Sciences University. He was married in 1936 and leaves two young babies. . . . His widow was in the country near Paris. I wonder where they are now. . . .

In spite of these anxious hours and the bad news such as the death of our best friends, please do not think a minute that our morale is low. Never the French spiritual forces have been so high; everybody is full of courage to face the danger of these times.

I do not know when I shall write you again, when I have news from you, but, if I survive this war, I am sure that I shall always find a support near you, and this is a great comfort for the days to come, which may be very hard.

Please convey my best wishes to the members of your staff. I remain, dear Mr. Quigley,

Yours very sincerely,

PIERRE AUTRE.

Dispute Rights To "Pastor Hall"

A dispute over motion picture rights to "Pastor Hall," British made anti-Nazi film acquired recently for distribution here by James Roosevelt and United Artists, was expected to be settled in New York this week, between attorneys for Grand National Pictures, Ltd., original distributors of the film, and attorneys for the administrator of the estate of the late Ernst Toller, German playwright and author of the story.

Leslie Kirsch, New York attorney for George Garfield, Toller estate administrator, had charged that Charter Films, producers of the film, had not acquired screen rights; that the sums offered him by Grand National interests for title clearance were "ridiculously" small; and that the Toller estate would "take necessary legal steps to protect its rights."

William Fitelson, Grand National attorney, said in New York on Tuesday that Grand National had the picture rights, and that there would be a "settlement." Jeffrey Bernerd, managing director of Grand National Pictures, Ltd., said, on the same day, that his firm had clear rights to the film; that Charter Films had purchased the screen rights to the story through a London agent; that the contract was sent to Mr. Garfield, in New York, who signed it; that it was then sent back to London; that the purchase money was paid; that GN had the distribution rights; that Mr. Garfield's signature on the contract was proof of GN's rights in the matter; and that the necessary documents were coming to America shortly, by trans-Atlantic Clipper.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President appeared in the prologue to the picture, filmed last week at the Twentieth Century-Fox Movietone studios, in Manhattan.

A. J. Laurie, of Esquire Films, Ltd., has acquired Canadian rights to the picture.

Questionnaire on Concessions

Approximately 70 per cent of the 110 members of the Affiliated Theatre Owners of Indiana operate concessions of some sort, it was determined by an organization questionnaire. Of the 72 who operate concessions 48 use popcorn machines, 54 have candy concessions and three operate soft drink concessions. Many houses have both candy and popcorn. The questionnaire indicated that only one concession operator reported business from the operation as unsatisfactory.

Ford Installed

Harry Cohen, western district sales manager for RKO Radio, was in Seattle this week to install Fred Ford, new exploitation director for the company in the Pacific Northwest territory. Mr. Ford succeeds Lou Maren.

Premiere of "Adventure"

Simultaneous premieres of Columbia's "I Married Adventure" at the Main Street and People's theatre in Chanute, Kan., Osa Johnson's home town, were held Sunday. Sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, the ceremonies were participated in by the mayor, city and state officials.

Broadcast Unit Sets New Music Payment Scale

Directors of Broadcast Music, Inc., established by the National Association of Broadcasters to rival and supplant American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers as a source of music for radio, screen and stage, met last week in New York City, adopted a new basis of payments for member stations, discussed acquisition of the MGM-Robbins music catalogues, and heard a listing by Neville Miller, president of the Broadcasters, of what he termed seven accomplishments of BMI in the new months of its existence. Among these were the placing of 100 musical compositions in the hands of broadcasters, and the acquisition of catalogues containing more than 5,000 copyrighted compositions.

Won't Accept Contract

Sponsors and advertising agencies whose programs are broadcast by the National Broadcasting Company's Blue and Red networks were informed by a letter this week, from newly elected NBC president Niles R. Trammell, that the company has "definitely" decided not to accept the new contract drawn up by ASCAP, replacing the present five year contracts with broadcasters, which expire on December 31st.

The organization's present member payment plan, based upon 40 per cent of the amount paid by each station to ASCAP in 1937, was described by BMI spokesmen as somewhat "makeshift." The new plan is described as more equitable. It will become effective next April at the expiration of present member station contracts with BMI, subject to approval by the NAB, and provides that stations be charged on a percentage basis: one and one-half to two and one-half per cent on the net receipts of stations, the latter percentage being applied on stations with net annual receipts of over $100,000.

Fuller details of the plan are to be divulged at the NAB convention in San Francisco on August 4th.

Mr. Miller's listing of the achievements of the five-month-old organization were given as follows:

(1) BMI has made the first comprehensive analysis of musical requirements of broadcasters and has established an organization of seven departments to meet their needs for 1941.

(2) In its first three months of operation, BMI has placed in the hands of broadcasters 100 compositions published under its own imprint, and it is now on a production schedule of 130 compositions a month, all of which are arranged for orchestras of various sizes.

(3) BMI's new popular tunes are being played in increasing numbers by radio stations and networks throughout the country.

Public May Buy Records

(4) Several hundred BMI compositions will be made available to broadcasters in transcribed form at nominal cost by the end of the year, and records will be made for general sale as well as for use of radio stations.

(5) BMI has acquired catalogs containing more than 5,000 copyright compositions.

(6) BMI has begun a comprehensive compilation of all non-ASCAP music available for performance. Non-ASCAP music already transcribed includes more than 7,000 compositions.

(7) BMI now has as members 306 commercial stations representing more than 68 per cent of the dollar volume of business done by the entire industry.

PLANS RELIGIOUS FILMS FOR CHURCH SHOWINGS

Retired Clothing Store Head To Produce 52 Three-Reel Subjects Annually

Creation of a circuit of churches for Sunday night showings of specially produced religious short films was envisioned this week in Hollywood by Charles Anson Bond, retired business man, who expects shortly to arrange for the filming of 52 three-reel subjects annually. Nucleus of the sales organization is a group of retired Protestant ministers.

This follows in sequence to the formation four weeks ago, in New York, of the National Catholic Film Service, by Dr. Eugene Colligan, former president of Hunter College, and Joseph Durkin, former newspaper man, to make available specially selected unit programs, mostly of short films, for Catholic schools and other institutions.

Three-Year Project

Mr. Bond, founder and former president of Bond's men's clothing stores, has formed Biblical Photo Plays, incorporated under the laws of Maryland, to carry out the work, a project he is said to have spent three years in developing.

The pictures, according to present plans, will present choir music led by Homer Rodeheaver, singing evangelist formerly associated with the late Billy Sunday, followed by two reels of a serial story of the life of Christ. The series will begin with the birth of Christ and the succeeding programs will continue the story.

It is planned that the subjects shall be interdenominational, with respect to Protestant churches, and in addition there will be special music programs offering Catholic singers and choirs.

Cost of the program, according to Mr. Bond, will be $10 weekly to each church. The subjects will be in both 35 mm and 16 mm, optionally, in color.

Mr. Bond declared that more than 1,000 Protestant ministers have been interviewed concerning the project and he said it was their opinion that the additional collection plate revenue from increased attendance caused by the film showings would more than take care of the $10 cost of the film, plus the projection equipment needed.

As a result of a survey Mr. Bond made among equipment companies, he found that the cost of the equipment—16 mm projector and screen—would be approximately $500 for a seating capacity of 500. For a seating capacity of 1,000, the equipment would cost $650, he said.

The churches can pay for the machines in monthly installments over a period of three years.

First aim of the organization is to make the starting subject and send prints throughout the country to sales organizations already established. Mr. Bond expects to line up approximately 1,000 churches within a few weeks after the first subject is shown, and then, with a definite market established, commence production of the series.

At present there are, according to his calculations, about 2,000 churches already equipped to show motion pictures, either 35 mm or 16 mm.

The former clothing merchant, one time mayor of Columbus, Ohio, and also former owner of a string of rural newspapers in that state, has spent $30,000 of his own funds in promoting the plan, in traveling about the country sounding out reactions to his idea.

In Jacksonville, Fla., he said, one minister told him that attendance at Sunday night services had increased from an average of 35 to an average of 500 through the showing of such motion pictures as are now available to churches from other sources.

No "Name Talent"

There are 210,000 churches in the United States, of which about 100,000 are estimated by church authorities, according to Mr. Bond, as film exhibition prospects.

Headquarters for the organization have been established at Suite 609, 815 Fifteenth Street, Washington, D. C.

Mr. Bond is making his Hollywood headquarters at the Plaza Hotel.

No studio facilities for production of the pictures have been contracted for so far. Mr. Bond does not plan to employ Hollywood "name talent" in his films.

Milwaukee Newspaper Opposes Proposed New Censor Board

A proposal on the part of a group of south side Milwaukee aldermen to substitute the city's present advisory motion picture board by a three-man paid commission with power to determine what films shall and shall not be shown in Milwaukee theatres is opposed by the Milwaukee Journal.

In a recent editorial, the newspaper stamped government censorship as totalitarianism. It declared that "we have no quarrel with such religious or other non-government organizations as attempt to advise, persuade and even order their own members to observe certain rules as to their choice of motion pictures," but condemned translating such censorship into government action. The editorial also said in connection with motion pictures that the responsibility for the child should be borne by the parent.

The budget for the new commission would be raised through a $2 fee on each feature reviewed, according to the aldermen plan. The present censor board was criticized by Mayor Carl F. Zeidler when it approved "The Primrose Path" despite objections from local groups.

The Mayor's latest appointee to the board is Valentine J. Wells, a postal clerk.

Condemn "Wives" Ban

The National Council on Freedom from Censorship, organized by the American Civil Liberties Union, has gone on record condemning the action of the New York State Board of Censors in banning "The Merry Wives," Czechoslovakian film, distributed by Edgar E. Lloyd. No appeal, to date, has been received by the Education Department's law division on the banning.

Spanish Industry Making Recovery From Civil War

The Spanish film industry has virtually recovered from the ravages of the country's civil war, has about 30 features scheduled for this year, and is receiving liberal credit from banks and every aid from the Spanish Government, Rafael Casau, Spanish film producer and distributor, reported this week in New York, while on a business visit. Mr. Casau hoped to arrange for the American and South American distribution of three feature films and some shorts from his producing company and for the distribution in Spain of some American independent product.

Theatres Crowded

Not only is Spanish film making resuming the progress it had made prior to the civil war, but it also reflects a demand for pictures from the country's theatres, he said. Those theatres are crowded, he reported.

People are trying to forget; and besides, there is an inflation; people don't care for money; they are spending more than ever before. Our theatres need from 250 to 300 features, per year, besides the native production, he said, adding that he hoped to obtain many independent American films.

Mr. Casau's firm is the Casau and Agusti Producing and Distributing Company of Madrid. The firm produced some shorts and animated cartoons last year; and, this year, expects to make three features, to be completed by February, the titles of which have not yet been chosen. Production will begin, he said, when he returns to Spain in several weeks.

Mr. Casau brought with him, for showing to American distributors, four features from other Spanish companies and some of the shorts which his own firm made in 1939.

The Spanish film man was, before the civil war, owner of a large restaurant in Madrid, and of a firm which operated vending machines in the city's subways.

The assumption by the Spanish Reds of rule over the Madrid area resulted in his imprisonment, the wrecking of his restaurant, and the loss of his vending machine enterprises. He escaped from Madrid, after several months in prison, visited France, England, and the U. S. In this country he studied motion picture production, picture making having been his hobby.

The war over, he returned and entered film production and distribution.

Lootens on Academy Council

Charles L. Lootens, chief engineer of Republic studio, has been appointed to membership on the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Republic is now contributing to the financial support of the Council, and under the Academy by-laws is thus permitted representation on the Council.

Three-Trailer Plan

Three trailers are being made by Walter Wanger for his "Foreign Correspondent," to be released by United Artists. The first, 80 feet in length, will incorporate scenes directed by Alfred Hitchcock; the second, 120 feet, will stress the film's leading players, and the third, 265 feet, will be general. They will be released three weeks, two weeks and one week prior to first-run openings.

Washington, New York See "Ramparts" Premiere

The March of Time's "The Ramparts We Watch" bowed on Tuesday evening in Washington and Hollywood for its first public exhibition, excluding some sneak previews in, and around, New York City.

In Washington, the film was displayed at the RKO Keith's Theatre, to a specially selected audience of politicians, army and navy officers, newspapermen, educators, and other assorted luminaries; and it was accompanied by much ballyhoo, some radio broadcasting, and by some pre-and-after-theatre partying. In Hollywood, it was unveiled to that production center's working press and notables, and to Government officials.

Louis de Rochemont, producer-director of the picture, entertained the cast, at a pre-premiere dinner party, in the Chevy Chase Country Club in Washington. A reception for the press was held at the Carlton Hotel, after the showing.

On Wednesday night, again it was previewed to about 1,500 persons in the Grand Ball Room of the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria, in New York City. The city's notables, including Mayor Fiorello Henry LaGuardia, had been invited; also, the heads and representatives of patriotic organizations and of associations and individuals who cooperated in the picture's making.

Goldwyn Dropping Suit Against United Artists

Samuel Goldwyn is dropping his suit in a Delaware Federal Court, against United Artists, and the late Douglas Fairbanks, Sr.'s Elton Corporation. His attorneys applied this week in that court, in Dover, for an order dismissing the suit, which had asked a declaratory judgment to end his distribution contract with UA.

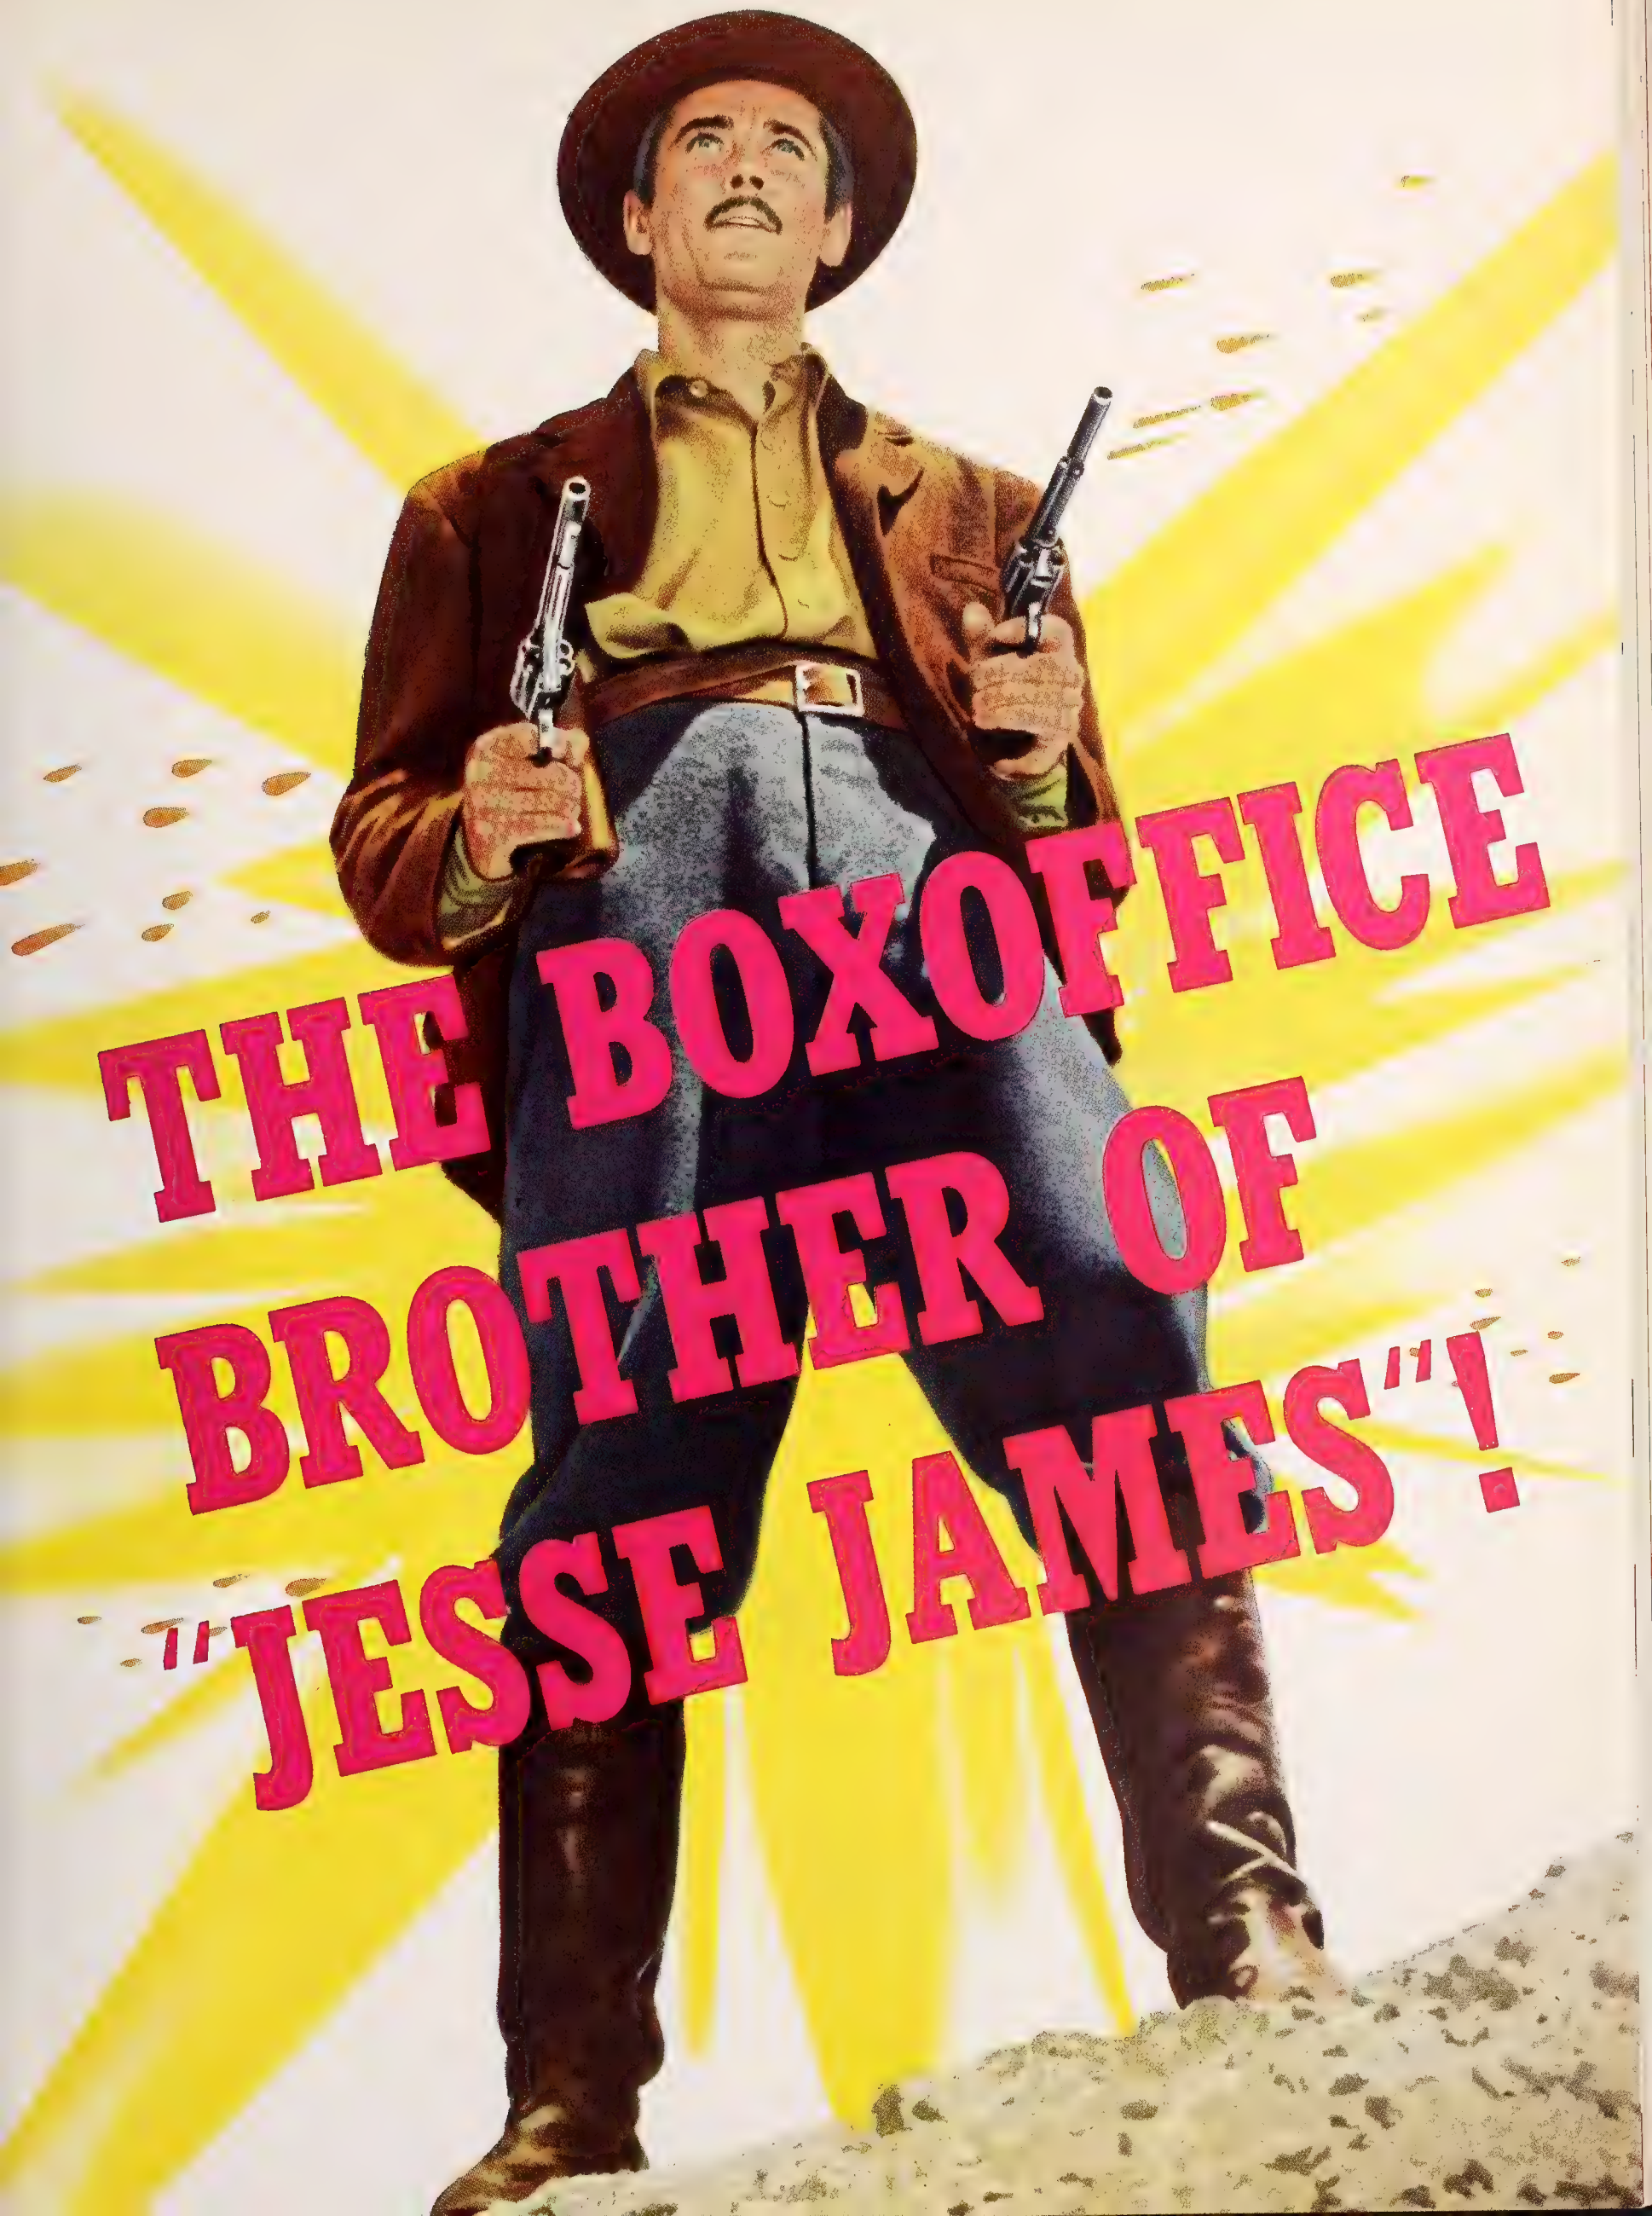
The new move follows a United States Circuit of Appeals suggestion that Mr. Goldwyn's Delaware action duplicates a similar suit, also brought by him in a New York Federal Court.

Mr. Goldwyn is expected to continue the latter action, which will probably not reach trial before the Fall. The court has granted motions by the defense to compel Mr. Goldwyn to amend parts of his complaint, and to strike out certain other parts. It is understood that Max D. Steuer, attorney for the producer, is complying with the court order, and also expects to hold pre-trial examinations of producer Alexander Korda.

Hirliman to Produce In Coral Gables

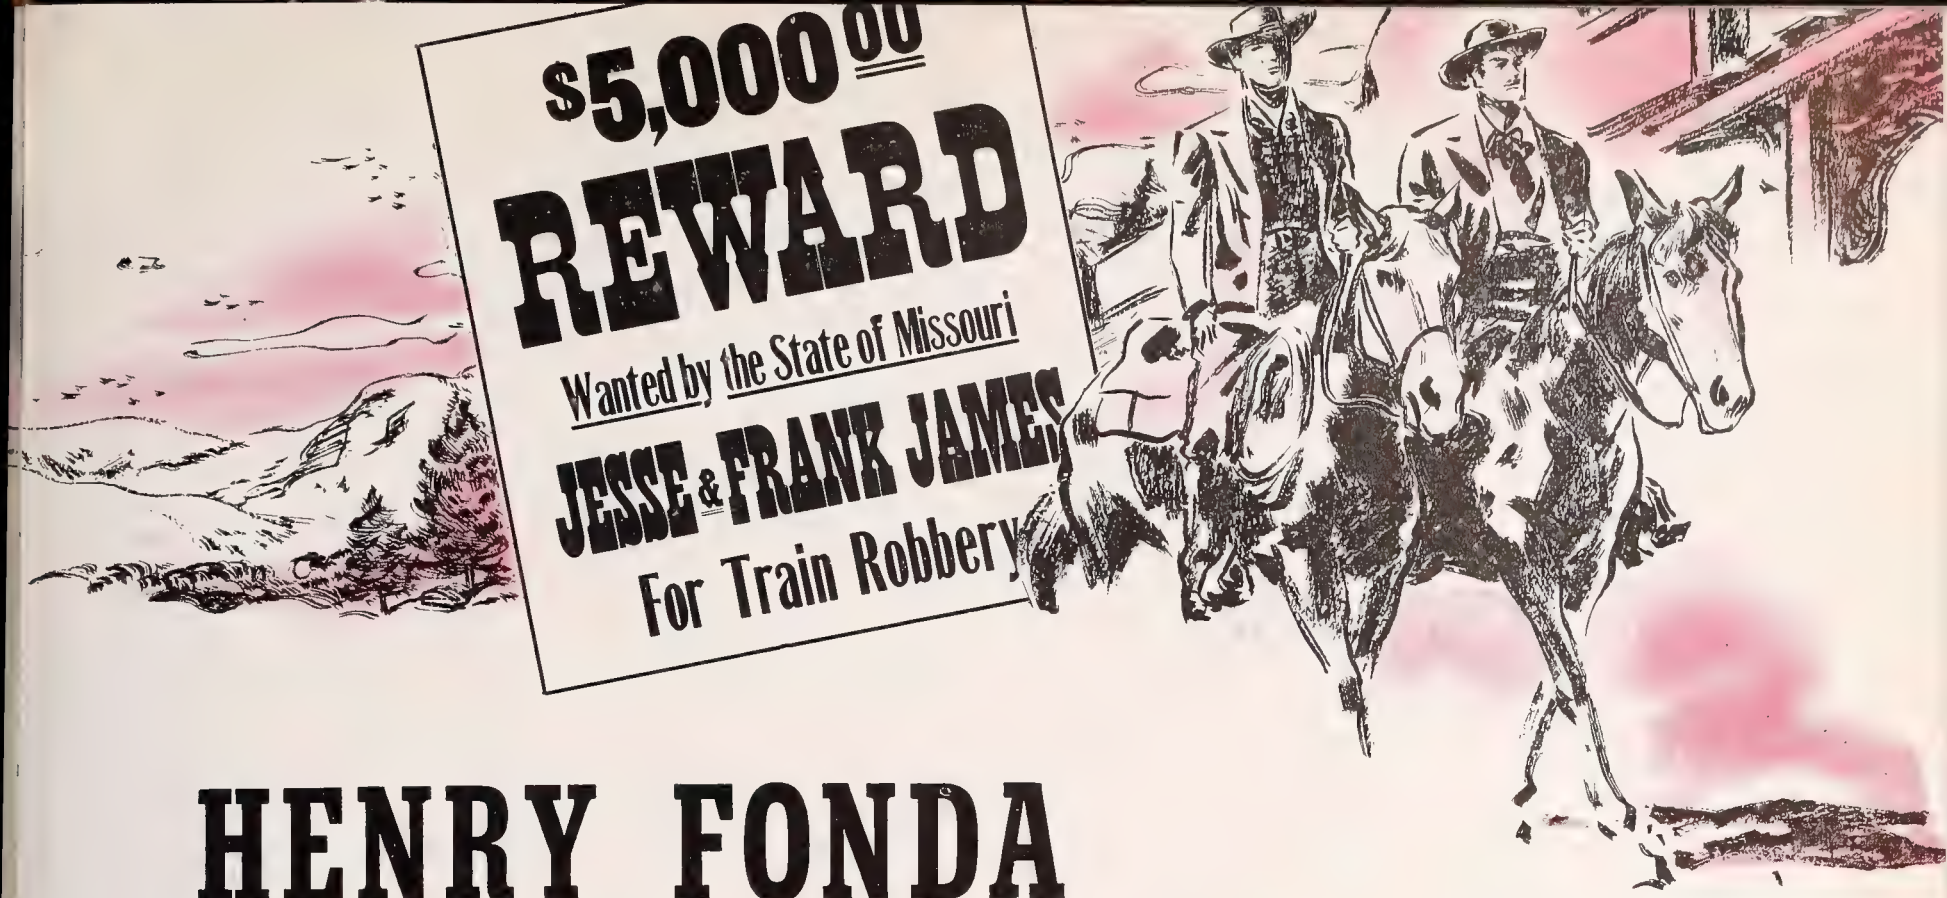
Colonnade Studios, in Coral Gables, Florida, have found a motion picture tenant. George Hirliman, independent producer, this week signed contracts for the production of four features by the Colonnade Pictures Corporation, work to begin immediately.

The first picture is to be "Adolescence," starring Leon Janney and Eleanor Hunt, from an original by Lawrence Meade.



The Coral Gables studio, remodeled from a former auditorium, was made ready for production two months ago by Arthur Sawyer, formerly of Sawyer and Lubin, whose announced intention was to make it an Eastern production center.

Harris, Gould Form Agency



Milton Harris, formerly with Loew's in Cleveland and Fox in New York and St. Louis, and Howard Gould, formerly with Fox in New York, Philadelphia and Detroit and lately with RKO Orpheum in Denver, Salt Lake City and Los Angeles, have formed Harris Gould Publicity Associates in Hollywood. The firm has signed a number of radio and screen stars who contemplate personal appearance tours.

WAR NEWS REACTIONS

In the belief that many theatregoers are anxious to avoid overemphasis on war news, Dan McLean has hung up a "We Do Not Show War News" poster across the entrance of his Embassy theatre in San Francisco. Mr. McLean reports the policy a success. However, the Strand theatre, next door to the Embassy, is playing up war news and likewise reports good business.

Central States Theatre Corporation, with headquartres in Des Moines, recently conducted a poll of patrons on the war news question. The results of the poll showed that the ratio was about three to one in favor of continuing war subjects in the newsreels. In Columbus, Neb., there were 540 patrons who favored war news against 200 not in favor; in Clinton, Iowa, where 5,000 questionnaire cards were returned, 75 per cent favored war news. Generally each situation polled was in the same proportion with the exception of one, where the poll disclosed a 50-50 result.

Merge Australian Theatre Circuits

Two of Australia's largest circuits, Hoyts and Greater Union, merged last week after two years of negotiations. General Theatres Corporation, a new parent company specially organized for the purpose, will control the aggregation. M. G. Sloan, a director of Hoyts, will head it and Norman B. Rydge, managing director of Greater Union, will direct combined circuit operations, it was said.

National Theatres, a Twentieth Century-Fox-Chase National Bank affiliate, owning several hundred theatres in this country, has a controlling interest in Hoyts.

In the new dispensation, it was expected that Charles Munroe, Hoyts executive, would remain; that profits from the aggregation would be split between Hoyts and Greater Union on a ratio basis; and that operations would obtain for 20 years.

Ellis Sees Better Business

Before leaving New York for the Coast and Australia, last week, Gordon Ellis, managing director of Associated Distributors, of Sydney, predicted better theatre business in Australia after the war, and added that the country's business leaders thought other industries would also prosper. Mr. Ellis had been in this country for six months.

Business in the Commonwealth is good at present, he said; new industries have been established; new development has been made of natural resources. However, he thought American companies would not, for some time, be allowed to withdraw their blocked currencies at a greater rate.

While in New York, Mr. Ellis acted as representative for affiliated producer-distributor companies, and for Mr. Rydge, head of Greater Union.

CANADA'S SHOWMEN REAP GOOD WILL

Dominion's Industry Uses All Devices of Ballyhoo for War Loan; British Actors Help

When the figures were cast up at Ottawa this week in the drive of Canada's film industry for the sale of war savings stamps, culminating in the special shows of July 15, the Dominion had about $800,000 more for the war chest—and a demonstration of a public relations job by the screen.

The movement started with the Canadian Picture Pioneers, an organization of those who have been in the pictures business twenty-five years or more. That resulted in a meeting of theatre men who chose N. L. Nathanson, president of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Ltd., for the post of general chairman. The organization set up also included Clair Hague, vice-chairman, and Ray Lewis, secretary-treasurer, with committees thus:

EXECUTIVE: T. J. Bragg, Oscar Hanson, Nat Taylor, Harry Alexander, Hon. Earl Lawson, R. W. Bolstad, Haskell Masters, Herbert Allen, Leo Devaney, B. Geldsaler, Col John Cooper, Jim O'Loghlin and J. J. Fitzgibbons; CAMPAIGN MANAGER; H. C. D. Main; PUBLICITY: James R. Nairn, Jack Arthur, Dick Main and Ben Cronk; FINANCE: R. W. Bolstad and T. J. Bragg; TRUST FUND: B. Geldsaler and R. W. Bolstad; TRUSTEES: Canadian Picture Pioneers' "Win the War" Fund.

TORONTO and ONTARIO Divisions: Harry Alexander, Archie Laurie, Herbert Allen and Clair Hague.

MONTREAL: B. E. Norrish, chairman; Eugene Beaulac, secretary.

HALIFAX: A. J. Mason, chairman; R. J. Macadam and W. H. Cuzner, co-chairmen; R. S. Roddick, secretary.

SASKATCHEWAN: L. M. Graburn, chairman; H. A. Bercovich, co-chairman.

MANITOBA: E. A. Zorn, chairman; Joseph Pearson, co-chairman.

CALGARY: J. H. Yuill, chairman; Frank Kershaw, co-chairman.

BRITISH COLUMBIA: Archie Calladine, chairman; L. I. Bearg, co-chairman, assisted by Major R. J. Catle of Victoria and Hugo Ray, Frank H. Gow, Howard Boothe and B. Plottel of Vancouver.

SAINT JOHN: Walter Golding, chairman.

The scheme offered to the Canadian public was simple—along with a required purchase of a minimum of two war savings stamps, to be attached to a certificate destined ultimately to become a bond bearing interest, the theatre delivered an admission to the theatre for the special performance. Thus in fact the admissions were free, and the customers in fact became investors.

Distributors supplied film without rental charge, and all manner of contributions were had, from newspaper space across the Dominion to a million admission tickets from the Southam Press. All of the devices that Jimmy Nairn ever thought of, from milk bottle collars to pet elephants, the full bag of exploiteers' tricks, gags, stunts, the complete catalogue of the art of ballyhoo, were applied by the showmen and press agents of Canada.

Hollywood turned out stars with British and Canadian ties, who flew into Canada at their expense to make personal appearances, among them: Maureen O'Sullivan, who appeared in a trailer on a hundred thousand feet of Eastman stock donated for the purpose, Alfred Hitchcock, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Ned Sparks, Vivien Leigh and Lawrence Olivier, Anna Neagle and Herbert Wilcox. J. J. Fitzgibbons of Famous Players was in charge of the contacts with Hollywood.

Incidentally the campaign was paid for by an assessment of two cents a seat among the theatres, of which some ninety per cent responded.

Selling Picture Industry

While the campaign was selling war stamps it was selling the picture industry and the motion picture theatre as a community institution to Canada. Some of the detailed reports:

Frank Miley, Jr., of the Granada Theatre, Napanee, Ont., with a 440 seat theatre, sold $4,427.00 worth of Stamps and Certificates. Charlie Mavety, not content to take bows for his work of delivering film free through his movie transport service, held a special show at his Circle M Dude Ranch at Kleinburg, Ont. He announced a Wild West show and started selling tickets well in advance to prominent officials in the film business. The rodeo rounded up $5,000. Manager Bucciarelli of the Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ont., grossed $3,000 in a theatre seating 760. Jimmy Cameron of the Toronto Publicity Department of Famous Players, sold the entire capacity of a downtown theatre to a department store . . . secured the advertising co-operation of the stores and did much of the work on milk bottle promotion across Canada. Ray Tubman and the Ottawa theatremen arranged for the personal appearance of cabinet ministers and others prominent in the Government, as speakers. The Governor General, Princess Alice and Princess Julianna of Holland were among those who appeared in the Capitol theatre with Maureen O'Sullivan. The Capitol topped the country with an individual gross—$10,000. Len Bishop of the Tivoli, Toronto, set up a booth on Yonge Street. Len acted as barker and his ushers sold tickets to the citizens who stopped to listen to his oratory. Jack Purves of the Village Theatre, Toronto, sold more than $3,200 worth of Stamps in a theatre seating 821. Jimmy Foy of Toronto proved to be one of the best individual salesmen and even talked himself into buying tickets.

St. John, N. B., was proud with a total of $18,000 garnered by a merger of the Rotary Club and the Strand theatre. R. G. March, exchange manager, was master of ceremonies at the special program. The arrangements with Rotary were made by F. G. Spencer, owner of the theatre and J. G. Armstrong, manager.

Famous Players Canadian Drops Convention Plans

Famous Players Canadian Corporation has abandoned plans for the 1940 managers' sales convention in eastern and western Canada because of the war and because of the attention which has been devoted to the Win the War Campaign of the Canadian film industry.

Tentative dates of July 30-31 had been set for the eastern convention in Toronto, the western meeting to be held later the same week at Vancouver. District managers attended a general meeting in Toronto earlier this summer and will call district meetings soon.

Contracts Expire

Upon the expiration of their producing contracts with Paramount, Dale Van Every and Stuart Walker will leave the studio.

LETTERS FROM READERS

Herald Necessity For Bengal Club

To the Editor of the Herald:

It is a considerable distance from India to the United States; moreover, war conditions have lengthened the period of transportation of mails between the two countries.

I am reminded that our first annual subscription to your magazine must be fast running out. I have, therefore, taken the precaution of forwarding today, by foreign money order, a further ten dollars to ensure the continued regular arrivals of a periodical that has become an institution with me.

Perhaps a précis on our Club would interest you. It is sponsored by one of the leading industrial organizations in India, Messrs. Martin-Burn, and provides recreation for the officials of their Kulti Ironworks and their guests. Kulti itself lies just within the western boundary of Bengal, 145 miles from Calcutta, in the heart of a vast coal and iron district. I enclose a photograph of the Clubhouse; it contains a cinema-cum-dance hall, billiard room with bar, card room, lounge and library. The building is in the process of being air-conditioned—necessary, you'll say, with a maximum shade temperature of 120 degrees in the summer.

We have three cinema shows per week with a maximum seating capacity of 225. Friends have been known to travel thirty or forty miles by road to see our pictures. Our leading distributors are M-G-M, Fox, Warner, Paramount, U. A., RKO and Universal. It is incumbent on me, a Civil Engineer, to provide the most suitable films available, without even the help of a trade show, for the Club Secretaryship is a spare time honorary job; leave of absence from the Ironworks to attend a pre-view in Calcutta has never been heard of and certainly would not be encouraged. Not an enviable task, you'd say? Quite right—until early last year, when it was my good fortune not only to be told about the Motion Picture Herald but to be given a copy by one of our distributors. Now the task of picking pictures is done for me!

Please, therefore, accept my sincere appreciation for the straight-forward, honest-to-goodness help contained in each and every issue of your magazine. There's simply no excuse for booking a bad picture.

With every good wish for years and years of successful publication.

JOHN H. ASHTON,
Hony. Secretary, Kulti Club,

PLEADS FOR SINGLE FEATURE RETURN

To the Editor of the Herald:

With all the producers hollering for more revenue, it would seem that they should try and cure the evil that reduces revenue from within. Someone once said that "there is nothing wrong with this business that a good picture will not cure," and I would like to add that "there is nothing wrong with this business that single features would not cure." The theatres today are not nourishing their patrons, but overstuffing them to death. With the really meaty plots limited to only a few at the utmost, how can we expect to keep our patronage steadily, when we give them two of them all in one dose. I remember a time when people took in a show and they would visit two of them in one day. This is not true today. These days, theatres keep their patrons glued to their seats for from three to four hours at a time.

Another disadvantage of the double feature evil is that the theatre cannot be systematized as to when the feature ends or begins. People always take the line of least resistance and, as a rule, if they think that they may be walking in the middle of a feature that they believe should be seen at the start for more enjoyment, they usually decide not to come at all.

Again, I repeat, that if the industry wants more theatre-goers, we must stop giving the public feature indigestion, and two meals at one time for the price of one.—

Mr. C. V. MARTINA,
Rialto Theatre,
Albion, N. Y.

OFFERS HOME FOR REFUGEE CHILD

To the Editor of the Herald:

In going through the Herald for June 29th, I noticed the letter from W. G. Enloe of Raleigh, N. C., in regard to the youngsters being evacuated from England.

For your information, am in a position to take one of these children, and would appreciate it very much if you would furnish me with complete information as to how necessary contacts can be made and how this is to be handled.

"All This, and Heaven Too" In Fourth Week

Warners' "All This, and Heaven Too," co-starring Bette Davis and Charles Boyer, started a fourth week at the Radio City Music Hall, New York, Thursday. Only two other pictures in the eight year history of the theatre have held more than three weeks. They were "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," five weeks, and "Rebecca," six weeks. In nine other situations the film has been held for a third week, in Providence, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Washington, Cincinnati, Denver, Boston, Louisville and Dayton.

Warners have so far set 195 pre-release openings on "They Drive By Night," which will be released August 3rd.

George Bagnall Resigns

George Bagnall, vice-president of Paramount and executive studio manager, resigned on Monday, in Hollywood, after five years with the company.

Monogram Turns To Color, Will Have 3 in '40-41

Monogram will make three pictures in full color for 1940-41, it was revealed by Edward A. Golden, general sales manager, who presided at the eastern district regional meeting at the Barbizon-Plaza Hotel, New York, Friday and Saturday, July 19-20. The three are "Gypsy Cavalier" starring Gilbert Roland, and two Golden West productions, "Black Stallion" and "College Sweetheart" from the Woman's Home Companion story by Leona Dalrymple.

Renfrew Series Pushed

Harry H. Thomas, general manager of the three company-owned exchanges in Philadelphia, Washington and New York, introduced Mr. Golden, who, in reviewing the past year's productions, pointed up to the Renfrew series starring James Newill. The presence of Newill on the coast-to-coast Ford summer hour is giving this group new impetus, Mr. Golden added.

"Stellar personalities are now available in greater numbers than ever before," said Mr. Golden. "Charles Bickford, Gilbert Roland, Irene Rich and Boris Karloff are those who will be seen in the new season's product."

Forty representatives of seven eastern exchanges and the home office reviewed the company's new lineup of 26 features and 24 westerns.

Among those who addressed the two-day sessions were Thomas P. Loach, vice-president and treasurer; Norton V. Ritchey, manager of the foreign department; Louis S. Lifton, director of advertising and publicity; Ben Welansky, president of the Boston and Pittsburgh offices; Steve Broidy, manager of the Boston office; J. J. Felder, New York; Sam Rosen, Philadelphia; William Moses, New York; Harry Brown, Washington; Mark Goldman, Pittsburgh; Harry Berkson, Buffalo; Nathan R. Sodikman, Albany and Lloyd Lind, New York.

Others present included Richard Perry, Lester Tobias and Sol Kravitz, of New York; Samuel Palan, Moe Sherman and W. Z. Porter, Philadelphia; William Liebler and Saul Perliman, Pittsburgh; Harry Crull, Arthur J. Hansen and D. Price, Washington; Jules Chapman, New York; Edward G. Schieber, John S. Harrington and Hugh G. Davis, New York.

Edward Golden, in Jacksonville attending the annual summer convention of the Southeastern Theatre Owners Association, left there Tuesday to preside over a series of Monogram regional sales meetings. He first went to Atlanta, where on Saturday, July 27, he will officiate at a meeting of the Atlanta, Memphis, Charlotte and New Orleans branches. He will then return to New York for a week, departing again on August 2nd for Albany, Buffalo and Cleveland. During the week of August 11, the Monogram sales head will cover the Detroit, Chicago and Milwaukee exchanges; followed by a tour of the Des Moines, Omaha and Minneapolis branches the week of August 19th.

Mr. Golden will visit Seattle, Portland and San Francisco the week of August 25th, and following this meeting will head for Los Angeles, Salt Lake City, Denver, Kansas City, Dallas, Oklahoma City, St. Louis, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh and New York City.

Monogram Monday extended the contract of Tex Ritter, Western star, for the new season. The deal calls for seven instead of eight films with the same budget as last year.

BRITISH TRADE PROTEST ON QUOTA GROWS; AMERICAN ADVANTAGE SEEN

New Plan Will Cut Product Commitments and Reduce Quota Percentage; Labor, Producers Join Criticism

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

The emphasis with which the British industry has for many months past appealed for new legislation has only been equalled by the emphasis with which it now, having got it, rejects it. With the obvious exception of the American distributors, no industry section, either collectively or through individual comments, has failed to make it clear that the new legislative quota scheme is a disappointment.

Plan Condemned

Though nobody, at the time of writing, has issued official comments on the montetary quota plan, representatives of producers, exhibitors and labor have, during the last few days, wholeheartedly condemned it. The condemnation is rather of its inadequacy than of any ethical or commercial defects the scheme may possess. Producers contend it does nothing for them. Labor fears the diminution of employment. Exhibitors are concerned with the prospects of a product shortage. Tailing behind come the shorts producers who have not yet agreed upon a coherent solution of their problem, but who have, nevertheless, attacked the new optional scheme.

The new quota plan, which has already been reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, does not supersede the Films Act of 1938. It merely supplies an alternative with which distributors can fulfill their quota obligations. The act otherwise remains in toto. In the immediate future efforts will be made by various trade sections to secure further legislation for the assistance of voluntary production. Exhibitors, producers, labor are all scheduled to meet.

The financial quota scheme is obviously of great benefit to American distributors in Great Britain. It decreases considerably the volume of their production commitments, reduces virtually their quota percentage to approximately seven per cent. Though they will spend more on each film they produce, they will get a bigger return on the pictures they make, which will be of super quality and world market caliber; they will also need to produce less films.

Agreement is general that while the volume of the American-sponsored production will drop there is the certainty that the quality of the films to be made will be higher. The minimum production cost of films made under this scheme will be £21,000. On labor costs alone, the average cost of a British quota picture will be brought to approximately £42,000. Under the scheme distributors will have to spend £1,000 on British labor for every 1,000 feet of quota film they sponsor. The quota pictures they make must have an all-in labor cost of £3 per foot. For every 100,000 feet of foreign film imported they must acquire one film of at least 7,000 feet.

The system has complexities explained best by example; the example of a distributor importing 100,000 feet of foreign films:

Under the new scheme he must acquire—or produce—one film of a minimum of 7,000 feet. Its total labor cost must be not less than £3 per foot, i. e., £21,000 net. Over and above this there is another stipulation which compells him to spend £1,000 per 1,000 feet on exclusively British labor on a total measured by the footage he would have had to acquire had he observed the old Films Act. This year it amounts to approximately 20 per cent, compelling him therefore to spend £29,000 on exclusively British labor, irrespective of how many films he makes. (The old standard was 15 shillings per foot; the new standard is measured in minimums of £1,000 per 1,000 feet.)

The principle established, it will be seen, is that the producers' quota commitments are measured not exclusively in terms of footage, but in terms of expenditure based upon the footage principle as formulated in the 1938 Films Act.

Reciprocity Invited

There are addenda to the foregoing financial clauses. A renter acquiring a British picture which may not otherwise have been acquired for quota and intending to distribute it abroad may, if he pays £20,000 for it, deduct this £20,000 from his total financial commitment under the new scheme. This device is a direct incentive to "reciprocity" and American distributors are likely to make wide use of it.

Under special circumstances the Board of Trade may register films otherwise unqualifiable for quota, particularly Empire films, if they and the Ministry of Information decide this is expedient on propaganda or political grounds. As will be seen later, this has given rise to much concern on the part of producers and their labor henchmen.

The alternative quota scheme which will be used by the American producer-distributors here is a direct offshoot of the exchange agreement which was concluded last year between the Government and the American majors. It is virtually a quid pro quo for their acceptance of the frozen credit policy and comes as a climax to many months of negotiations between the Government, F. W. Allport as representative in Europe of M. P. P. D. A. and the commercial experts of the United States Embassy in London.

As already indicated, the announcement of the scheme on July 10 (the order was dated July 2 and the scheme is retroactive from April 1) immediately called for a chorus of condemnation, criticism and disappointment from representatives of all trade sections. Foremost in the chorus of lamentation were British independent producers.

John Corfield, Chief of British National, and some of whose pictures have already found a haven on Broadway, Michael Balcon, impresario at Ealing Studios, Sam Smith, whose pictures seldom if ever secure wide showing in America, were among those first to contribute the weight of their dissentience. It was clear to them that most of the distributors would choose to operate under the new scheme. They could make pictures at a cost which no British producer, they claimed, was at present in a position to pay. The films made under the alternative plan would be assured a wide distribution in the States which must return, to quote John Corfield, "on routine selling alone well over 50 per cent of the money invested," leaving the balance to be recovered in this country.

Concerned Over Product Shortage

There was no guarantee that films here would be made by British concerns, unless such British concerns were prepared to accept terms and conditions imposed upon them and would sacrifice their independence for American distribution.

The exhibitors, who have remained diplomatically quiet since the new order was announced, are nevertheless concerned at the possibilities of a more intense product shortage. Their prime objectives are more films and better. The circuits in particular realize that they are likely to secure better films, but are anxious lest their booking position be weakened by there being fewer.

Nevertheless, the Board of Trade have made it clear that they do not think the reduction in volume which the scheme might bring about would be other than slight. A shortage of British films has been for some time, is still, and is likely to be a shortage of voluntary productions rather than of quality films. They state that if an emergency should arise they have the power, and if necessary would claim further powers, to adjust the percentage upon which the exhibitors' quota is based.

The disappointment of the labor group is the disappointment of a body which measures prosperity in terms of a multiplification of employment. According to ACT chief, George Elvin, they are emphatically dissatisfied with the monetary quota because it will mean fewer films.

War Insurance Discussed

Not included in quota legislation, but at present being explored by a production group and the Board of Trade, is a scheme of insurance against war risks. Under this it is planned to insure producers against the interruption of their activities or abandonment of a film consequent on enemy action. While it is not part of the Government's War Risk Insurance scheme, it is a fact that the Government would take a practical financial part in the guarantees necessary for its launching.

Shorts producers are not happy about the scheme, which has ignored them altogether. But it is probably a Government view that if only the shorts producers could bring it upon themselves to agree on what they wanted and present a concrete scheme for their assistance nobody will be more grateful, none more ready to put it into operation than the Government itself.

Meanwhile, the advantages to the American producer-distributor, to whom the quota has been an inconvenient tax on his activities, are immeasurable. By using films of multiple quota standard, as will be the films made under the alternative scheme, he can fulfill his obligations by approximately half the figure he would have been compelled to spend under the old system.

BRITISH INCREASE ADMISSIONS TAX

The chancellor of the budget Tuesday in London announced an all-around increase in the British entertainment tax to go into effect October 6th. The completely new scale starts at a halfpenny tax on seats between threepence halfpenny and fivepence, taking in the lower price tickets hitherto tax free.

The scale generally increases the amount paid by patrons, and the estimated yield in a year is an extra four million pounds, of which cinemas will probably contribute three and a half million. The cinema scale obviously follows conversations with the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association and will necessitate admission increases, with a share of the intake going to the exhibitor.

COMMISSION HALTS NBC TELEVISION FOR SUMMER TO GIVE FM AIR SPACE

New York Station Suspends Programs to Change Wave Band to New Allocation; Large Screen Apparatus Built

The frequency modulation system, sometimes called "static-less radio," and lately on the march, has not only won the Federal Communications Commission's recognition, as an important new element in radio but is also creating commotion in television's only partly-established world. Some time ago it was awarded exclusively the air channel heretofore used by the National Broadcasting Company's active New York television transmitter, W2XBS, and it is causing, apparently, the temporary shutdown of that station to permit cycle changes in the air waves.

Shutdown Announced

NBC announces that having been deprived of the use of its usual air channel and having been formally allocated, last week, to a new channel, under the new television setup decreed by the FCC, its New York transmitter must close down next Thursday, "pending necessary alterations to studio and transmitter equipment." The time of suspension was indicated as several weeks. With the suspension came the report that the NBC would also step up the number of lines in its transmission from 441 to 507.

The FCC is doing more than assign an NBC station to a new channel: it is re-allocating others; and last Saturday from its Washington headquarters came announcement that it had also granted the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories of Passaic, New Jersey, permission to establish television transmitters in Washington and in New York City. (Paramount Pictures are interested financially in the DuMont company.)

The channel assigned to the NBC transmitter by the commission is known as number one, in the new designations, and comprises the band of frequencies from 50,000 to 56,000 kilocycles. Also assigned to this band was the Don Lee television station in Los Angeles, W6XAO. Both of these stations had been operating on the former channel one, which has been given to frequency modulation.

It was noted that the commission's approval of the use of the new television channels was dependent upon the stations' use of them for acceptable programs of research and development.

Programs Submitted

All of the television stations extant, and those building, have submitted programs detailing such development to the commission.

The DuMont company, for example, is scheduled to try various types of film projectors, for their advantages; to experiment with mobile pick up units, and with radio and wire linkage; to ascertain public preferences for types of programs; and to use a coaxial cable between the Washington and New York stations. The Washington station will test the practicability of programs to Washington and Baltimore, from a single transmitter.

The NBC, of course, has carried out extensive experimentation, in most phases of television, and is expected to continue.

The Columbia Broadcasting System, permission to which was extended to operate its new New York transmitter, W2XAB (on Channel Two, 60,000 to 66,000 kilocycles), is expected to concentrate on the development of uniform transmission standards of a high quality. Thus, it will investigate synchronizing pulses, combinations of lines and frames, the effect of different polarizations on allocations, and the public reaction to certain programs.

The DuMont Passaic station, W2XVT, is expected to experiment with antenna systems using vertical and horizontal radiators; with systems of transmission other than those advocated by the Radio Manufacturers Association, or used by itself; with transmitter equipment, field patterns, noise, phase shifts, power tubes; and with the possible use of frequency modulation for television.

The commission assigned the DuMont Washington station to Channel One; its New York station to Channel Four (78,000 to 84,000 kilocycles); its Passaic station to Channel Four. At the same time, it specified that the Washington and New York transmitters should operate on one kilowatt for aural and visual; granted the Passaic transmitter permission to increase power to five kilowatts, aural and visual; and it granted the Columbia New York transmitter a power of seven and one-half kilowatts, aural and visual.

Lines Increased

Earlier last week the FCC gave the Don Lee System permission to establish a television station in San Francisco to operate on Channel One, which the system's Los Angeles station will use. The Don Lee System was said to be ready to try use of 525 lines. The experimentation in this direction is expected to improve the quality of pictures, allow more room for progress, and it will perhaps be better for theatre television. NBC's acceptance of the 507 lines is regarded in television circles as a compromise, and something which may bring various disputant elements of the industry together.

An all industry committee, the National Television Systems Committee, has been formed to consider standards, the FCC having virtually ordered the companies to agree on standards before they receive permission for commercialization. The Commission has indicated it will consider standards recommendations if they are made by a group representing the whole industry and, because the companies are anxious to obtain commercial sponsors, they are expected to reach agreement this summer.

PUBLIC WILLING TO BUY SETS

That the public is willing to pay from $100 to $200 for television receivers, even at present, with television programs few and the industry's commercialization distant, is reported indicated by a survey made at the New York World's Fair by National Newspaper Enterprises. Fifty-six per cent of the persons interviewed said they would pay $100; 37 per cent, $200; and 12 per cent, $300. Forty-four per cent said they would buy receivers this year, if such were offered at those prices. Eighty-eight per cent believed television had improved since last year. Music led the list of program preferences; sports, stage plays, and news events were then preferred on television programs in the order given.

W. R. Baker, chairman of the engineering section of the RMA, and research director for General Electric, is chairman of the committee, members of which are to be appointed by James Knowlson, president of the association. The FCC is cooperating in the committee's organization; the association is sponsoring it; but membership will not be limited to representatives of companies belonging to the RMA, it was said.

There was to be a first meeting of the committee in New York next Wednesday to be attended by, among others, James L. Fly, chairman of the FCC.

The National Association of Broadcasters will hold its annual convention in San Francisco on August 4th. Mr. Fly will attend.

DuMont Rentals

The Allen B. DuMont Laboratories last week re-instated its television receiver rental plan, because, it was said, of the increased production of receivers. The proposed television lease provides for a four month rental, at $50 for the first month and $35 per month thereafter, with a $3 monthly handling charge added.

Scophony Theatre Television

Scophony television equipment, adopted to the standards of the American Radio Manufacturers' Association, has been brought to the United States from England and will be demonstrated shortly in New York. Receivers now in this country include an 18-foot "large screen" projector for use in theatres, one which gives a picture of six feet, another of four feet and two each of the home models which have an image size of 24 and 18 inches.

The British Government considered the work of sufficient importance to give permission for five Scophony engineers to come to this country for the purpose of demonstrating the equipment and training American engineers in its use. In spite of the war situation, two of the Scophony engineers were released from service in the army, one was a major in charge of radio activities in Scotland.

Large Screen Television

Scophony is represented in this country by Arthur Levey. Arrangements are in work for the formation of an American company to be financed by what is said to be a group of leading banking houses. Plans are being made for demonstrating the large screen television (18 foot screen) in a New York theatre. It will be the same type of equipment, only modified to the present American television system, used at the Odeon theatre in London.

Solomon Sagall, managing director of Scophony, is also expected from England next month.

The only demonstration of big screen television in this country were by Baird, also a British company and affiliate of Gaumont-British, which showed its apparatus last summer, and by the Radio Corporation of America which showed an "in-between-size" television projector this winter which gave a 6 by 4 foot image. RCA has promised a 9 by 12 machine for theatres some time this summer.

RCA reported this week that development of theatre television equipment was going along according to schedule, but no early public demonstration is planned. It was said that it was possible that a showing of the apparatus would be postponed until the fall, at which time the whole television situation is expected to be clarified. Observers predict some kind of a television "boom" this fall with full commercialization possible as well as greater public acceptance of the new medium of entertainment.

BROWNE SENDS EASTERN IATSE AIDES TO COAST TO SETTLE UNION DISPUTE

Murtha Heads Group Ordered to Hollywood by IA Leader; Bioff's Offices Closed and His Assistants Deposed

With Willie Bioff, International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees studio union supervisor, now reposing in Chicago's Bridewell Prison until the end of August, George Browne, national Alliance president, last week ordered several Eastern aides to Bioff's Hollywood terrain to straighten studio union jurisdictional lines, which never were fully delineated and which have always been disputed.

Offices Closed

The first results were the closing, late last week, of the Hollywood IATSE offices; a mystery about the official disposition of two Hollywood IATSE officers, Steve Newman and Lew Blix and a declaration by Thomas Murtha, chairman of the Eastern group, that the closing had no relation to the jurisdictional tangle, but was merely "deemed advisable at this time."

Mr. Murtha, business agent of the Brooklyn IATSE Local 4, and president of the New York Central Trades and Labor Council, said this week that whatever recommendations he and the other Easterners arrived at would be submitted to the Alliance's executive board and that the status of Messrs. Newman and Blix also was a board matter.

Others on the jurisdictional committee are Sal Scoppa, business agent of the Studio Mechanics Local 52, of New York; and Bobby Burns, of Chicago.

The question of jurisdiction, always a matter of dispute in Hollywood, became acute last year, when the International dissolved its Studio Technicians Local 37, and replaced it with five new locals. The Eastern men conferred over the weekend, on this question, with Messrs. Newman and Blix, and with IATSE vice-president Floyd M. Billingsley, of San Francisco. Observers speculated that the results of the investigation might be a consolidation of several units.

The investigation by the Alliance was authorized at the June convention of the national delegates of the IATSE in Louisville, Ky.

Hollywood speculation centered this week on Bioff's future role. In jail now, and facing trial when he emerges on Federal income tax evasion indictments, he may never again be as potent a Hollywood force. Possible discontinuance of the IATSE Hollywood newspaper; the already announced closing of IATSE offices; and the possible withdrawal of Alliance unions from the American Federation of Labor Studio Unions may, according to observers, presage a feeling by Alliance leaders that Bioff's potentialities have shrunk on the Hollywood scene. Bioff remains, even in jail, the chairman of the Conference, through which he wielded his power over Hollywood labor and over the studios.

Musicians' Strike Looms

Failure of Warner circuit labor negotiators and those of the American Federation of Musicians to settle the eight months old strike of the Philadelphia Musicians Local, 77, against the Warner theatres in that city, may mean a strike against the Warner theatres, and even the studios, on a national scale, it was believed by some union officials disappointed by the failure.

The negotiators met in Philadelphia Friday, July 19th. They parted with mutual recriminations. A Warner representative said it was impossible to deal with the union men; and a union representative replied that the feeling was reciprocated.

The Warner men are understood to have offered to spend $90,000 per year on music, which, it was estimated, would cover vaudeville at the Earle theatre, and Sunday vaudeville at the Stanley, in nearby Camden; and it was understood that the union officials rejected the offer as "ridiculous," noting that Warners had spent about $180,000 per year, prior to the strike, and that they had asked the circuit to spend at least $160,000, which would cover music costs at several neighborhood houses.

It was Mr. Petrillo who brought about resumption of the negotiations, after those between Local 77 officials and Philadelphia Warner executives had failed, early in the strike. Mr. Petrillo met in New York several weeks ago with Frank Phelps, Warner labor contact. Then he and Joseph N. Weber, retired president of the AFM, whom he succeeded, arranged for Friday's meeting between the Local's officers and the Warner men.

The Local had already petitioned the national federation for aid, such aid being a national strike. The meeting was regarded as an attempt to allow local parties to settle the issue, national action being expected as the next move. Union spokesmen asserted the failure of the Warner circuit to agree with the union was a reflection on their leaders, and that a national strike against Warner interests would not only serve to join the issue, but also serve as a test for the musicians' campaign against canned music in theatres.

Publicists' Guild

The Screen Publicists' Guild of New York has established an initiation fee of $1 per month, retroactive to November 1st, 1939, for all applicants after next Thursday.

The guild will have a dance at the Hotel Pierre, in New York, on August 9th, proceeds from which will be used to pay the expenses of delegates to a meeting in Hollywood, with the West Coast Screen Publicists. At this meeting, a constitution for the joint organization will be adopted.

The newly organized Film Editors Guild of New York will hold its first regular membership meeting on Friday, at the Capitol Hotel, in that city, with president John Michon presiding. Officers will be installed.

TMAT Changes Title

The Theatrical Managers, Agents, and Treasurers Union, of New York, has dropped the "treasurers" from its title, that division having come under the jurisdiction of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees.

New Pennsylvania Contract

The Independent Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania is negotiating with the Pittsburgh projectionists' Local 171, for a new contract to replace that which expires next month. On the negotiating committee, for the ITO, are Dr. C. E. Herman, and Alex Moore; for the union, Lawrence J. Katz, Luther Thompson, and Lou Indo.

St. Louis Contracts Disputed

Operators of some 40 St. Louis neighborhood and suburban theatres this week extended the two weeks closing notice they had given to the city's projectionists' union, Local 143. The owners, negotiating with the union on a new contract to replace the one expiring on August 31st, have asked a 10 per cent wage reduction for the summer months, and have threatened to close their houses. The union has declined to accept the reduction unless the owners accept the new contract, which stipulates higher wage levels than the old contract.

Twenty-five of the houses involved in the threat to close are in the circuit operated by Fred Wehrenberg and Clarence Kaimann.

The Seattle Film Row Employees Union, Local B-21, have elected Phil Haberl, president; Carl Obery, vice-president; Robert Stansberry, business agent; Carol Brown, secretary-treasurer; Ted Blanck, Central Labor Council delegate; and Pat Madigan and Bernice Cadwalder, board members.

Nick, Weston Lose in Court

John P. "Big" Nick, deposed head of the St. Louis projectionists' Local 143, and Clyde Weston, its deposed business agent, lost more court moves last week, in their endeavor to fend off their scheduled Federal trial for racketeering.

Federal Judge Caskie Collet overruled six of their motions, refused to grant a severance of the defendants, and ruled that the Government need not make public its witnesses until the trial begins on September 9th.

Picket NBC Studios

On behalf of AFL electricians', stagehands', and janitors' unions, there was picketing last week of the National Broadcasting studios in Hollywood and New York. Representatives of the three AFL internationals have been trying to gain recognition for their workers in the company since the NBC New York Radio City studios were opened.

EQUITY APPROVES ONE ACTORS' UNION PLAN

Approval, in principle, of a "one big union" plan, to effect administrative economies and to abolish payment by actors of duplicate membership fees, was voted by the council of Actors Equity at a special meeting Friday, July 19th, in New York City. Equity is thus the first union of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, parent actors' union, to approve the plan, drawn up several months ago. The other unions are now considering the idea. The Equity council directed its committee on efficiency and economy to study the plan further, and to bring in more recommendations, indicating it had not agreed on all points of the plan.

Resignation of Frank Gillmore as its president was rejected last Wednesday by the international board of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, in New York. The board, however, lightened some of Mr. Gillmore's duties and reportedly reduced his salary accordingly.

World's Fair Promotion

In the first campaign of a series to be undertaken in all key cities in the East, Claude Collins, director of motion pictures and assistant director of promotion of the New York World's Fair, was in Pittsburgh this week to stimulate attendance at the Fair by means of posters and other promotional methods.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

You are apt to find more long-hair conducting among the dance band maestros than in the ranks of symphony batoneers, according to Roy Shield, director of music for the NBC central division, who points out that the great maestri for the most part are definitely not podium gymnasts.

Pointing out the fact that a good musician needs no soap box technique to help him play music, Mr. Shields says the men who make up orchestras have their own descriptive terms for various types of conductors, and if you want an idea of what the men themselves actually think about some members of the conducting fraternity you might consider the following glossary:

PUMPER: A conductor who uses one arm, or both, in a pump-handle or handshaking motion.

SWIMMER: Delivers the beat with both arms starting at the chest and shoving out sideways, like a breast stroke swimmer.

WING FLAPPER: Gets both hands about shoulder high and waves the palms up and down in an air beating motion.

COME TO GLORY: Raises hands to heaven in attitude of supplication.

SCORE NOSER: Sometimes called a bookworm. May use baton or hands, or both, but always keeps his head inside the score and never looks at the men.

MONKEY PUSS: Uses his face to express what passes for emotion. General effect of this is to scare the orchestra.

MANE FLAPPER: Flops his back hair up and down like a hoop skirt on a vibrating machine.

FURNACE TENDER: Uses the baton in a series of jabbing motions like a janitor poking the clinkers off a fire grate.

BOXER: Hands out plenty of haymakers, but never gets caught making a lead with his right.

CIRCUS: So called because he's all over the place—like a tent.

SETOA IN CONVENTION; N.Y. ALLIED JOINS MPTOA

Kuykendall, Ritchey Warn Southern Exhibitors of 'New Order'; Industry Critics Hit

The annual convention of the Southeastern Theatre Owners Association, headed by M. C. Moore, president, was held last Sunday, Monday and Tuesday in Jacksonville, Fla. Speakers at the three day meeting included Edward L. Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and Henderson M. Ritchey, director of exhibitor relations for RKO Radio.

Booking Plan Assailed

The "blocs of five" booking plan, reported in the consent decree settlement of the anti-trust suit in New York by the Government against the majors, was assailed in a resolution unanimously approved by the convention. The resolution said that plan would take from exhibitors the 20 per cent cancellation privilege now used. The convention also advocated a year's trial of the present national defense tax scale, before lowering of the exemption.

M. C. Moore was reelected preisdent, for his fifth consecutive term. Also elected were Tom Brandon, secretary; Colonel Thomas C. Orr, treasurer; and Oscar C. Lam, presentative to the MPTOA board.

Mr. Kuykendall told the convention the film industry was going to receive more attention from Washington than it had in the past, and if it did not put its house in order, the government would.

He said the Neely bill was "dead as a doornail," but, that the House Interstate Commerce Committee, which has been considering the measure, was convinced of the need for radical changes in the industry's business methods.

"The salvation of the business depends on national cooperative effort rather than individual brickbat throwing, such as seems to prevail at present," Mr. Kuykendall said, adding: "I say to you sincerely that unless we, as an industry, give some thought to cooperate activities among ourselves and cease trying to squeeze the life out of the so-called smaller percentage theatre owners, we are heading for chaotic conditions that will take us back to the nickelodeon days."

Mr. Ritchey in his address said theatre owners whether they liked it or not were faced with a brand new situation. Such problems, he said, as arbitration, clearance, over-buying, right to buy, score charges, cancellations, all of the things that have occupied exhibitors' attention for years need "no discussion here, for, either through the consent decree or governmental action, these problems will be solved."

"The solution," he said, "regardless of what it is, is ahead. Personally, I have every confidence that out of the efforts that have been put forth by both the companies and those representing the opposite view, will come a consent decree. If, as, when it does come, you are going to wake up in a new business and it's not too early to start thinking about it."

The RKO exhibitor contact said that every one in the industry should count 10 before criticizing product or the industry and that a great deal more enthusiasm would be in order in place of the present tendency toward alienating the public by criticism of product.

"Maybe we have too many third-termers who have lost their enthusiasm for a business that, despite its faults, has on the whole, done a superlative job. I hate double features, but I don't think a badly written, many times illogical article like Sam Goldwyn's in the Post [Saturday Evening Post!] will do anything to solve the problem."

J. L. Cartwright, public relations director for the Sparks circuit, spoke on the importance of goodwill in the community. He urged the exhibitors to take an active part in civic affairs.

Others who spoke briefly were Mrs. Alonzo Richardson of the Better Films Council, Atlantat; Willis Davis, in charge of public relations for the Lucas and Jenkins circuit, and John Alsop, former mayor of Jacksonville.

Edward A. Golden, general sales manager of Monogram, addressed the SETOA Tuesday. He urged the support of the small companies saying that with more companies in the field the exhibitor's position as a buyer was greatly improved.

Other speakers were Louis O. Gravely, Jr., of the U. S. Treasury Department; Nat Williams, of Thomasville, Georgia; Mitchell Wolfson, of Miami; and George F. Dembow, of Naitonal Screen Service, New York.

New York Allied Joins the MPTOA

Allied Theatre Owners of New York, of which Max A. Cohen, head of the Cinema Circuit, is president and chairman of the board, with a membership of more than 200, is now affiliated with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. The decision to become part of the MPTOA was made Thursday, July 18th, at a meeting of the executive board in New York City. The vote was unanimous.

The unit formerly was an affiliate of national Allied but severed its ties with that organization last year in a dispute over the acceptance of the industry's trade practice code.

New York Allied's move followed an invitation to join the MPTOA by Ed Kuykendall, president. The matter first was broached by Charles Hayman, head of the Buffalo unit of the MPTOA. The unit will retain its name and will be autonomous.

The New York unit was given a "warm and sincere welcome" on Tuesday, by Mr. Kuykendall, in a statement from Jacksonville, where he had been attending the annual convention of the Southeastern Theatre Owners Association.

Mr. Cohen automatically becomes a member of the MPTOA national board of directors.

Brandt Reelected ITOA President

Harry Brandt was reelected president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York Wednesday, July 17th, at a meeting at the Hotel Astor, New York, for his seventh term.

Other officers reelected on an unopposed slate included David Weinstock, vice-president, and Leon Rosenblatt, treasurer. Frances Bergman replaced Maurice Brown, secretary.

The board of directors, also reelected, includes: Leo Brecher, Laurence Bolognino, Bernard Brooks, Samuel Bleiweiss, Julius Charnow, Jack Hattem, Otto Lederer, Hyman Rachmil, Ray Rhonheimer, Abraham Shenk, Rudy Sanders, Samuel Strausberg, Frank Moscato, Joshua Goldberg, and Irving Renner.

Dates on Two Meetings Set

The annual convention of the West Virginia Managers Association will be held August 27-28 at the Greenbrier Hotel, White Sulphur Springs, according to J. C. Shanklin, convention chairman.

The annual convention of New Jersey Allied has been set for September 25-27 at the President Hotel, Atlantic City. The organization held an outing Wednesday at the Hollywood Hotel in West End, N. J.

Aquatennial Held In Minneapolis

The Minneapolis Aquatennial, which started last Saturday, July 20th, and which ends this Saturday, was expected to bolster Minneapolis theatres' box offices as 200,000 persons were expected to visit the city during the fete.

LITHO U.S.A.

U. S. Has 76% Of Latin Market, Europe, 15%

Hollywood product, already holding some 76 per cent of the South American and nearby market, is gaining on the 15 per cent held by European countries, whose pictures are fast becoming unavailable to Latin American exhibitors because of blocked shipping lanes.

This is the conclusion of the United States Government, made public on Monday in a report of the status of Latin American motion picture markets, as compiled by the Motion Picture Division of the U. S. Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce at Washington.

Latin America, however, with its 5,400 film houses, while an important market for Hollywood pictures, "should not be considered as a panacea for our European losses," the Government report stated, although, it was said, there are some hopes that a small portion of Hollywood's European losses may be recovered.

"Latin Americans have definite marked likes and dislikes as to types of films, but it can be generally said that the well-known United States film stars are well liked and that our pictures draw well at the box office; also, that our technique and photography are well liked," the report continued.

Native South American production contributes but nine per cent of the product consumed, as otherwise supplied 76 per cent by Hollywood and 15 per cent until now by Europe.

Argentine uses 66 per cent of Hollywood product; British West Indies, 88 per cent; Brazil, 57 per cent; Chile, 60 per cent; Costa Rica, 80 per cent; Cuba, 68 per cent; Dominican Republic, 90 per cent; Ecuador, 70 per cent; El Salvador, 85 per cent; Haiti, 80 per cent; British Honduras, 95 per cent; Guatemala, 75 per cent; Mexico, 63 per cent; Nicaragua, 75 per cent; Panama and Paraguay, 80 and 90 per cent, respectively; Peru, 71 per cent; Uruguay, 70 per cent and Venezuela, 70 per cent.

Mexico Now Has 1,005 Theatres

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

The progress of the motion picture industry in Mexico since sound pictures were first produced here in 1930 is contained in a report issued by the Government. The republic now has 1,005 cinemas which in the 10 years have cost $8,000,000 for construction and installations. That number compares with 242 stage theatres and 84 bull fight arenas.

Since 1930, according to the report, Mexico produced 231 pictures which yielded a combined gross of about $9,000,000 at home and abroad. Only two of the six studios in this country are now in regular operation.

Benefit by Monetary Exchange

Distributors and exhibitors of American films continue to enjoy considerable cash benefits from the progressive strengthening of the peso since it broke sharply June 11th from the six to one rate against the dollar that had obtained for six months and which was the peacetime low for Mexican money. The dollar is now worth from 4.90 to 4.93 pesos. That allows distributors more money to send home and is enabling exhibitors to get American pictures more cheaply.

Nobody knows just how the foreign exchange situation will go. A lot depends on the attitude of the United States towards the European war and what happens in Mexico now that the presidential election has been held. Financiers here believe that Mexico cannot sustain a cheap dollar under current economic conditions.

The national miners' union has appealed to the Government to strengthen the dollar as soon as possible, claiming that the below five to one quotation will drive most small companies and all cooperatives out of business because of less return from exports, high wages and operating costs.

Some sources expect the peso to weaken now that the elections are over. Other quarters see the dollar's value sinking to four pesos while others even forecast that before fall the dollar will be down to two pesos, its normal Mexican ratio.

Tax Complaint in Pachuca

Pachuca, great silver mining center, 90 miles north of Mexico City, will be without films if the municipal government ignores the petition of the four exhibitors there to reconsider its law which doubles the municipal tax on cinemas. The exhibitors say they cannot continue in business if this tax remains, while the government says that as the cinema is about the best business in the silver town it must contribute more to the municipal coffers.

Although several municipal governments have boosted taxes on the film industry, particularly cinemas, there has been no move, so far, to further burden the business with imposts.

Nazi Propaganda Film Causes Riot In Buenos Aires

by NATALIO BRUSKI
in Buenos Aires

In the June 22nd issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, page 61, the activities of Nicolas Di Fiore, a Buenos Aires exhibitor of Italian extraction, in the showing of German newsreels and "The Siegfried Line," a German propaganda picture, were published. The story described the riot resulting from the showing of "The Siegfried Line" at the Renacimiento theatre in Buenos Aires.

The film was withdrawn after one day and it was said that the authorities had not banned the film but had suggested to the exhibitor, who is also the distributor, that it would be convenient if a change could be made. This state of affairs lasted until July 3rd when the picture made its reappearance as the feature picture at the Renacimiento.

Rioting Starts Again

Nothing untoward occurred at the afternoon performance but the riot started all over again at the evening show. The authorities evidently were expecting trouble for over 100 plain-clothes detectives had been stationed in the audience and others were held in readiness in the streets adjoining the theatre. Patrol wagons had also been parked nearby and the tear gas squad had been called out as a precaution.

When the riot started, the house lights were put on and the police arrested all the rioters they could spot. The latter part of the film was run off with all the lights in the hall lit. Meanwhile hundreds of people had gatherered outside the theatre, where another demonstration was staged. In all about three score rioters were jailed. All vehicular and foot traffic was cut off in the adjoining streets in order to prevent the crowd from attempting to stage an anti-Nazi demonstration of major proportions.

Following the procedure of the initial showing the film was withdrawn the following day. Mr. Di Fiore had enormous difficulty in obtaining films to replace the program, finanlly succeeding in obtaining "Exiled to Shanghai," a Republic picture distributed locally by Ariston Films, and "Yo Hablo," a local production.

The real significance of the showing of this German propaganda picture and the resultant riots is important inasmuch as it can be regarded as a test case of what can and cannot be shown to local audiences.

Action Delayed on Cuba Booking Law

No action on Cuba's recently enacted anti-block booking law has been taken yet on behalf of the industry due to the unsettled political situation in the island republic.

Arthur Pratchett, recently designated industry spokesman in the industry's efforts to obtain relief from the stringent measure, is now in Panama, from where he will go to Cuba when the political situation is clarified. He is Central American manager for Paramount.

Meanwhile, the law does not affect existing contracts which have several months yet to run.

The Sea Hawk

(Warner Brothers)

Sixteenth Century Sea Melodrama

Showmen in business as long ago as 1924 will recall that in that year, and for many a return engagement in the next, the silent "Sea Hawk" rode the screens of the nation to a box office record long used as a measuring rod for other money-makers in an era of mounting grosses. While it is no more axiomatic in this instance than in any other that the success of an original is a guarantee of the prosperity of a new version, it is a fact of record that the Brothers Warner have invested the 1940 edition of "The Sea Hawk" with all the advantages inherent in 16 years of technological advancement and staffed it, off screen as on, with an array of talent such as is seldom assembled for a single production.

As showmen and theatregoers of 1924 remember, and as others may be told in exploitation and advertising utilizing superlatives, "The Sea Hawk" is a story of adventure on the high seas in the early sixteenth century, an account of the efforts of English privateers, proceeding without royal approval but in their queen's interests, to impede Spain's progress in the building of the Armada which was to attack England. It is a story full of heroics and combat, of man-to-man conflict, ship-to-ship battle, nation-to-nation diplomacy, a chronicle of swashbuckling, suffering, bravado, guile, chicanery, some carnage and a deal of romance.

Among the male actors supporting Errol Flynn, starred as the privateer who is captured by the Spaniards and consigned to the galleys but escapes to serve his country in honor, are such marquee personalities as Claude Rains, Donald Crisp, Alan Hale, James Stephenson, Gilbert Roland, William Lundigan, Montagu Love, J. M. Kerrigan, Fritz Leiber and a dozen others in principal roles, scores or hundreds in less prominence. On the distaff side the film offers Brenda Marshall, Flora Robson and Una O'Connor, the screen play by Howard Koch and Seton I. Miller requiring few feminine assignments.

Hal B. Wallis, executive producer reported to have made some $1,700,00 available for the filming of the work, employed Henry Blanke as associate producer and Michael Curtiz as director, both ranking personalities on the Warner production roster according to Hollywood estimate.

Gold Rush Maisie

(MGM)

Comedy-Drama

This time Ann Sothern's "Maisie" is enroute to a cafe in Arizona, where a singing job awaits, when her car breaks down near an abandoned mining town which experiences a boom precipitated by rumor, drawing thither a number of mid-continent families discouraged by conditions met with in the areas where crops are picked by itinerants in season. Touched by their distress, "Maisie" takes charge of one family, captains its cause, shares its fortunes, challenges the reserve of a young hermit whose ranch confines a water supply which, made available as result of her efforts, facilitates homesteading of the area by the itinerants and supplies a happy ending.

Again Miss Sothern employs the vèrnacular of the "Maisie" character and the manner of the previous "Maisie" portrayals throughout. And again the story is so constructed as to give her opportunity to enact a lady in her cups. This time, however, the nature of the story is such as to dampen the eyes of the audiences in sympathy for the lot of the migrants, without struggling for that effect, and to send a Hollywood preview audience into the night asking why more pictures like this and fewer historicals, biographicals and extravaganzas are not produced.

Edwin L. Marin directed this with simplicity and plainness his keynotes. Betty Reinhardt and Mary C. McCall, Jr., wrote the screen play from Wilson Collison's original. It's a J. Wålter Rubin production filmed out of doors for the most part and with a few interiors of Arizona variety.

The Ramparts We Watch

(March of Time-RKO Radio)

World War, I

With the issuance upon the screen of this feature length documentary discussion of American history during the war years of 1914-18, the estimable March of Time has essayed a feature production. This has been achieved through an elongation of the technique trademarked in previous short product manufactured by the March of Time forces. In addition to the usual presentation of facts and figures, delivered in customary curt style, the study has been seasoned with slices of human interest sidelights of various folks implicated in the bellicose proceedings. The case history addenda, although spasmodically and elliptically sandwiched in between newsreel and archive clippings, is a helpful and dramatic asset in sustaining audience attention through the plethora of journalistic history-page thumbing.

The occasion of its presentation offers exploitation opportunities for contacts with religious, political, social and educational groups. The arrival of the film has been heralded in advance announcements through the widely circulated pages of not only the periodicals belonging to the magazine backers of the film but also other nationally known journals.

Centers which have been receptive to the monthly visits of the March of Time to their theatre screens may be expected to be attentive to the subject. The nature of the material, as timely and as important as the issue contents of a news weekly magazine, may win the notice of audiences which look upon an inspection of world war history as an evening's entertainment. The sights and sounds of the times of '14 to '18 may offer the more adult of theatre goers some sobering and sentimental reminiscences.

The picture was eighteen months in the making. The player personnel to whom was entrusted the task of enacting the human interest incidents of the proceedings, is calculated as numbering 1,400 and considering the amateur standing of most of the cast the acting display is natural and effective. Under the producer-director leadership of Louis de Rochemont and the associate assistantship of Thomas Orchard, the vaults of many screen repositories have been consulted and the film findings have been stitched together to formulate a pictorial record of the United States history during the early years of the first World War and the turn of national events upon the country's entrance upon the military stage.

There are glimpses of various European rulers and dignitaries, American statesmen and personalities, including Woodrow Wilson, Theodore Roosevelt, Herbert Hoover and Franklin D. Roosevelt, then Assistant Secretary of the Navy, front line skirmishes, sea battles, and submarine sinkings of neutral ships. Through the personalized and localized medium of following the experiences of one American town and its inhabitants, the course of the United States' attitude toward the European dispute is traced from the beginnings of strict neutrality to a final declaration of war on the side of the Allies. The conclusion of the snapshot review ends with the signing of the Armistice together with an off-stage commentator's ominous sounding of future international events fated to follow the ratification of this pact. Using the the film's finale toast to the ramparts of democracy and freedom, the documentary summary ends on a call to national unity and a warning concerning the maintenance of the country's defense measures.

Girl from God's Country

(Republic)

Melodrama

Use of euthanasia as a factor in a screen plot is demonstrated for the first time in Republic's "Girl from God's Country," story of a physician who fled from the United States to the Alaskan wilds, where he set up a practice, in order that the name of his father might remain clear of the stigma of suicide. He is trailed there by a detective who recognizes him because of the similarity between the death of his father and the death of one of the doctor's patients. The detective attempts to take him back to civilization, but becomes snow blind. The physician saves the detective and the detective forgets the murder warrant outstanding against the doctor.

The mercy killing is treated as a past incident, the doctor nevertheless attempting to justify his placing a bottle of pain-easing medicine beside the bed of a patient suffering from gangrene and warning him that if he takes too much he will die.

Chester Morris enacts the role of the doctor; Jane Wyatt, who returns from her retirement from the screen which followed "Lost Horizon," has the role of a nurse who aids the physician and falls in love with him and Charles Bickford plays the detective. Support is given by Mala, Kate Lawson, John Bleifer, Mamo Clark, Ferike Boros and others.

Sidney Salkow directed from a screen play by Elizabeth Meehan and Robert Lee Johnson, who adapted an original story by Ray Millholland. Malcolm Stuart Boylan contributed additional dialogue. Armand Schaefer produced.

The Great McGinty

(Paramount)

Political Comedy

"I used to be governor of a state," a bartender in a saloon in a banana republic tells a customer at start of this comedy, which then moves the clock back to a time when he commenced his climb from the gutter to that eminence by voting for the machine's candidate 37 times in one day at $2 each, thus earning the respect and support of the boss who thrust him to the top by dishonest means and pulled him down by honest ones when he decided to go straight. The technique of ballot box stuffing, the devices by which graft is manipulated and politicians are made rich are depicted in whole and in detail as background material, but the treatment is for comedy and there is no preaching, moralizing or drawing of conclusion. There is, on the contrary, if reaction of a preview audience which laughed itself to the verge of hysterics may be regarded as indicative, 80 minutes of humor.

This is the first film to be directed by Preston Sturges, who also wrote the story and screen play, and it stands apart from other comedies treating of gangsterism and such matters on a number of points. It is a comedy played against a background of corruption in politics but neither indicts nor condones the practices it uses as incidents of story. It is full of fighting but the staging of the fights is the matter of moment. It contains half a dozen characterizations that could have been built up to support as many feature-length stories but they are handled as so many units in a mass. The retribution required to offset the offenses committed by the principal characters is shown in advance.

Brian Donlevy as the tramp who becomes governor and Akim Tamiroff as the boss who arranges the matter share dialogue and action that had a Friday night preview audience, made up in large part of paying guests, holding its sides. Muriel Angelus and Steffi Duna are the feminine principals. Paul Jones produced.

Blondie Has Servant Trouble

(Columbia)

Series Comedy

Professional previewers present at the Hollywood unveiling of this sixth in the series based on the comic-strip created by Chic Young congregated on the sidewalk in front of the theatre at its conclusion, as is their custom, to assure each other that this is tops for the series to date. It may be remarked that the series exerts its own appeal to the ladies and gentlemen of the resident press, ranking members of which decline to be diverted from attendance upon "Blondie" previews by any conflicting event.

In this number the family, inclusive of dog, are sent to occupy an estate in litigation, discover on arrival that it has something of a reputation as a haunted house and, upon trying to live in it, that the two servants on the premises are not those who are supposed to be there. Following a number of mysterious and startling incidents, it is revealed that the butler is a demented magician not above murder but not especially adroit in execution thereof. "Dagwood" captures him by accident but positively.

The story is by Albert Duffy, the screen play by Richard Flournoy, with Frank R. Strayer continuing on the series as director.

Burlesque Melodrama

This is a burlesque of "The Fallen Saved," originally produced on the Boston stage in 1844 and played in various forms by road companies until the turn of the century, offered showmen as a novelty inviting novelty in exploitation. Enacted with characters addressing the audience in asides, with dialogue that contains all the cliches and encompasses all the gestures in the tradition of the kerosene footlights, the play is introduced by a master of ceremonies (Billy Gilbert), who bids the audience hiss and applaud at will, the sound track thereafter supplying hisses and applause as cues to which and when.

Overacting is the keynote of the enterprise and of course plausibility has no part in it. The curse of drink is the theme, dealt with here for comedy purposes as it is in "The Drunkard," a stage derivative of the same original play now in its seventh year of a Hollywood run, but lampooning of the theatre of yesteryear is the objective. Settings have been made to resemble the painted drops of the ten-twenty-thirty era and the players run their emotions through a wringer. Exploitation reproducing the atmosphere of the days when melodrama was pronounced mellerdrammer is indicated.

One Night in Paris

(Alliance Films)

Mystery Backstage

A murder back stage and the solving of that murder during the opening performance of a musical comedy in a Paris theatre, is the story of this British melodrama. There is considerable stress placed on comedy and, of course, the camera shifts frequently from the melodramatic turn of events to the stage where various scenes of the "musical comedy" are presented.

Although the setting is Paris the cast is entirely British with the exception of the star, John Lodge, who, while an American, speaks with the clipped tones of the rest of the cast. Included in the cast are Judy Kelly, Hugh Williams, Joan Marion, Edmund Breon, Wallace Geoffrey and Geoffrey Sumner.

The story opens just prior to the start of the opening performance of the show. A disgruntled actress, who has been discarded by the producer, forces her way into his office and attempts to shoot him. The attempt is unsuccessful and the distraught actress recovers her composure in a dressing room.

"Inspector Bonnard" (John Lodge), who is in the audience, is called backstage to solve the crime. Various suspects are paraded before the Inspector, who gets his man in time to return to his seat before the final curtain.

Girls of the Road

Sociological Melodrama

Somewhat similar in theme to "Wild Boys of the Road" made some seven years ago this production also undertakes to show a sociological and economic situation that to some extent has passed from the public's mind but nevertheless exists in some degree today.

Often tragic, with few light spots and without romantic interest, the story concerns girls who, for various reasons, ranging from home environment to the desire for employment in other cities, leave their homes. They become wanderers thumbing their way back and forth across the country or using freight cars as means of transportation, living in hobo jungles and local jails, obtaining food by panhandling or stealing, all in the end becoming reconciled to the fact that there will never be any other kind of future for them.

Ann Dvorak is a Governor's daughter who, after hearing of the conditions that exist, leaves her palatial home to see what she can do to aid the more unfortunate. Shocked at what she finds she enlists the aid of her father who helps the girls organize their own living communities.

Reviewed at the Globe theatre in New York at an early afternoon performance attended by mostly a male audience who watched with interest the developments of the picture.—GEORGE SPIRES.

Produced and distributed by Columbia. Director, Nick Grinde. Assistant director, Thomas Flood. Based on an original screen play by Robert D. Andrews. George Meehan, photographer. Film editor, Charles Nelson. Running time, 61 minutes. Release date, June 20, 1940. P. C. A. Certificate No. 6397. General audience classification.

The Ranger and the Lady

(Republic)

Musical Western

Joseph Kane, associate producer and director, has taken an original story by Bernard McConville and produced a picture that contains all the elements of a good western melodrama. The Republic of Texas, before being admitted to the Union, a Captain of the Texas Rangers crusading to correct the unethical practices put into effect by his swindling superior and a young girl who joins the side of lawlessness to prove her father innocent of a crime for which he was shot as a traitor, all go into the making of an interesting and action filled story.

Roy Rogers portrays "Captain Colt" trying to keep the Republic of Texas together until the return of its leader Sam Houston while Jacqueline Wells holds the female lead and romantic interest and Henry Brandon is the General who imposes taxes on incoming freight for personal gain. The comedy in the picture is handled by Rogers' co-starring partner George "Gabby" Hayes and Si Jenks who looks and acts enough like "Gabby" to be his twin brother.

Along with the action, comedy and romance, Roy has opportunities to render a few songs including "Chiquita" and "As Long As We Are Dancing" both written by Peter Tinturin especially for the picture. Stuart Anthony and Gerald Geraghy adapted the story.

Jenkins vs. Armstrong Fight

(RKO Radio)

Light-Welterweight Fight

With the repeal of the Sims law prohibiting the interstate transportation and exhibition of prize fight films Pathe News has photographed the Lew Jenkins-Henry Armstrong non-title bout recently held at the Polo Grounds in New York. Ring side photography and the slow motion camera shows clearly the clever bobbing and weaving and short body punches of Henry Armstrong, the powerful uppercuts and fast footwork of Jenkins and the body shaking blows dealt by each. A few of the rounds are interspersed with off screen commentary giving background and color to the exhibition and explaining the judges' decisions on rounds that need technical explanations.

The camera throughout the fight has been concentrated exclusively on the ring itself with none of the film footage being used on the spectators for background effect. In fact the picture is presented much the same as in the days of the illicit distribution of prize fight films. A production staff of some thirty persons, many of whom are given screen credit, photographed and assembled the film.—Running time, 18 minutes.

tice is to victimize expectant mothers, who for various reasons wish to keep secret the news of their predicament. Through the ruse of running a "Mother's Home Clinic," a pair of quacks grow rich by charging their clientele exorbitant rates for hospitalization and by farming out the offspring for adoption against the wishes of the mothers. One of the mothers commits suicide when she finds she has signed away unknowingly her rights to her child. The baby, born with a spinal defect, had been given out for adoption as a healthy infant in return for a fat fee. Another of the girls is practically murdered on the delivery table and a third one almost loses her life in a fire started by the medical butchers to cover up their bungling obstetrics. The revelation is so inhuman as to be almost unbelievable but the seriousness of the presentation and the reputation of its backers would seem to argue for the validity of the indictment. The maternity material is handled in good taste by the producers and should be as sanely handled by showmen. Naturally, the theme is not ideal for inclusion on the kiddie matinee schedule.—Running time, 22 minutes.

The Bookworm Turns
(MGM)
Cartoon

This Hugh Harmon cartoon is set in a library. A raven, presumably Edgar Allan Poe's, is on the "voige of a noivous breakdown" to quote the raven. So off to the doctor he goes, Doc Jekyll no less, who decides that the raven needs a brain. A bookworm serves the purpose and Jekyll changes the characters of the bookworm and the raven. Jekyll becomes Hyde and decides to have some fun. Mr. bookworm is enlarged to a giant and starts after the raven, who is cowed. Then Hyde becomes Jekyll and changes the raven and worm to their original forms. Running time, 8 minutes.

The remainder of the subject shows how busses in Tokyo, Japan, due to the lack of gasoline use charcoal for fuel; a woman in Milford, Conn., utilizes old silk stockings to make interesting designs and tapestries; an architect in Knoxville, Tenn., who has designed his own home with a flat roof covered with water to insure coolness in the warmest weather. The subject ends with a tree on a Florida estate that produces fresh water and a hobbyist who reproduces in miniature World War fighting planes.—Running time, 9½ minutes.

Famous Movie Dogs
(Vitaphone)
Canine Color Parade

Canine cinema celebrities have their moment of consideration in this Color Parade contribution, which is dedicated to the memory of that stellar pooch personality, Rin-Tin-Tin. Answering a studio call for two dogs needed for script requirements, the hounds of various breeds and talents arrive for casting inspection. The spectator catches glimpses of some outstanding picture pups, including Asta of "Thin Man" fame. Finally, the lucky dogs are chosen and a rehearsal period for training the canine actors is begun. The shooting time arrives and the dogs perform their tasks before the camera in expert and well regulated fashion. The animals are appealing in their own right and when put through their paces become doubly attractive. —Running time, 10 minutes.

"Deadwood Dick"
Wild West Serial

The quoted and titled gentleman of this "see next week" chapter play production is purported to be have been one of the most colorful characters of the old west. Such a personality is potent serial bait for episode addicts. It seems, in this present offering of a weekly diet of adventure and excitement, that back in the days before the territory of Dakota was associated with the union of States the little town of Deadwood was being victimized by a band of desperados. The situation became so acute in these primitive and pioneer days when the scales of justice were swayed by a six shooter that the district's journalist, Stanley, was forced to forsake waging wars with pen and ink and substitute fists and firearms for editorial blasts. Christened "Deadwood Dick," the gentleman of the press sallied forth against the mob rule and in particular the mysterious wickedness of the gang's leader, "the Skull," a figure looking like something misplaced from "the Phantom of the Opera." The opening installment takes some time to get "Dick" alias "Stanley" out of his swivel chair onto a horse but this delay may be due to the gentleman's idealistic conviction that right makes might. However, once mounted in the saddle, the "fourth estate" crusader stirs up enough trouble to fill any paper's first page. The dramatis personnae for the marathon melodrama number such quaint personalities as "Calamity Jane" and "Wild Bill Hickok." Don Douglas assumes the title role with Lorna Gray in the background as a potential romantic force. Release date, July 19, 1940.

Running time, 15 episodes, first chapter: 32 minutes.

Loew's 40-Week Net Is Reported At $7,996,394

David Bernstein, vice president and treasurer of Loew's, Inc., in New York, on Monday, reported a net profit for the corporation of $7,996,394, after all charges, for the 40 weeks ended June 6th, 1940, compared to $8,173,060 a year ago.

The company's share of operating profit after subsidiaries' preferred dividends, for the 40-week period, before charges, totaled $15,594,078, more by $1,300,000 than the $14,271,675 share of operating profits reported for the 40 weeks ended in June, 1939. A $3,100,000 reserve this year to cover contingencies arising from the war abroad, reduced this year's net profits below those of 1939.

Following is the comparative earnings statement of Loew's, Inc., for the 40 weeks, subject to year-end audit:

	40 Weeks Ended June 6, 1940	40 Weeks Ended June 8, 1939
Company's share of operating profit after subsidiaries' preferred dividends	$15,594,078	$14,271,675
Depreciation and taxes	4,497,684	4,478,615
	$11,096,394	$9,793,060
Reserve for contingencies	3,100,000	1,620,000
Company's share of net profit	$7,996,394	$8,173,060
Per Share—Preferred Stock	$58.49	$59.78
Per Share—Average Common Stock	4.39	4.62

The company announced redemption with moneys in sinking fund of $375,000 principal amount of its three and one-half per cent debentures due 1946.

Bonds to be redeemed were drawn by lot. They will be payable August 15 at the office of Dillon, Read and Company, New York.

$2,417,117 Increase in Ticket Tax Receipts Reflects Improvement

The improved general economic conditions which have prevailed during the past year are reflected in an increase of more than $2,400,000 in Federal admission tax collections during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, as reported Monday by the Internal Revenue Bureau at Washington. Federal admission tax collections for the year 1939-40 were $21,887,916, compared with $19,470,802 for the fiscal year 1938-1939.

The year was closed with collections for June, incidentally the last month in which the 40-cent ticket tax exemption prevailed, at $1,645,603, a drop of $145,492 from the May total of $1,791,096 and the lowest total for any month since last January. The month's collections, however, were $154,340 above the June, 1939, revenue of $1,491,260.

Analysis of the Bureau's figures shows that collections in 1940 ran ahead of 1939 in nine of the 12 months, that the best month of 1940 was $369,000 better than the best month of 1939, and that the worst month of 1940 was $102,000 better than the worst month of the preceding year.

More than four-fifths of the $2,417,114 increase for the year was accumulated during the last six months (the first six months of the current calendar year). Collections for the six-month period totaled $11,167,831, compared with $9,155,227 in 1939, an increase of $2,012,504.

Because admissions of 40 cents or less were exempt from the tax, whereas beginning July 1st the exemption was dropped to 20 cents, the figures above afford no basis for comparison with collections to be reported hereafter. However, as an indication of the general trend of the amusement industries during the past year, the monthly collections for 1940, compared with 1939, are given below:

	Fiscal Year 1940	Fiscal Year 1939		Fiscal Year 1940	Fiscal Year 1939
July	$1,534,249.77	$1,618,813.00	January	$1,486,534.64	$1,564,134.28
August	1,513,468.12	1,425,062.88	February	1,852,763.82	1,503,127.31
September	1,852,256.12	1,668,827.04	March	2,390,931.82	1,606,996.13
October	1,727,931.46	1,596,367.00	April	2,000,902.18	1,384,721.72
November	2,117,644.42	1,985,127.78	May	1,791,095.76	1,605,987.70
December	1,974,534.56	2,020,376.64	June	1,645,603.31	1,491,260.37

A $10,000 increase in tax receipts was recorded in the Third New York (Broadway) District, where 1939-40 receipts were reported as $521,904, compared with $511,700 in 1938-39.

This increase was reflected in collections at box offices, which increased from $453,983 to $466,371, but there also was an increase in collections on tickets sold by brokers, from $10,444 to $14,193, and on permanent use or lease of boxes and seats, from 64 cents to $19.56.

Manufacturers Trust Company, New York, was beneficial owner of 5,600 shares of Paramount Pictures first preferred stock and 3,000,000 debentures when the company's registration became effective on May 26, 1937, it was disclosed this week in an amended report filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission at Washington. And a report for December, 1939, showed that the company still carried the 3,000,000 debentures but had increased its holdings of preferred stock to 5,710 shares.

Other Transactions Listed

The Commission's second and final summary of the transactions of film officers and directors in the stocks of their companies in May showed that J. Durell, New York, director, held no stocks, and Frederick L. Ehrman, New York, director, held 800 shares of common and 75 shares of preferred.

Another report showed that George J. Bonwick, New York, held no equity interest in Pathe when he became an officer on June 1.

Loew Theatre Shares Bought

The largest transaction reported was the acquisition of 17,067 shares of Loew's Boston Theatres common stock by Loew's, Inc., parent, which has been picking up the theatre shares steadily for more than a year and held 117,406 at the end of May.

An exchange of 504 Columbia Pictures voting trust certificates for an equal block of common stock and the acquisition of 800 more shares of common was reported by Abraham Schneider, company executive in New York, whose total holdings at the close of the month were 1,404 shares.

Another large transaction was the disposition of 1,000 shares of Twentieth Century-Fox common stock by Darryl F. Zanuck, head Fox producer, reducing holdings to 92,130 shares.

In General Theatres Equipment capital stock, Earle G. Hines, officer, New York, acquired 500 shares, giving him a total of 1,500 R. B. Larue, officer, New York, acquired 100 shares, making a total of 500, and Edward C. Delafield, director, New York, acquired 100 shares, representing his total interest.

In Paramount Pictures, Duncan G. Harris, director, New York, acquired 800 shares of common stock, making his holdings 1,000 shares, and in Monogram Pictures, Thomas P. Loach, officer, acquired 300 shares of common, giving him a total of 700 shares.

DOCTOR TAKES A WIFE, THE: Loretta Young, Ray Milland, Gail Patrick—An imitation of "The Awful Truth." Business good on account of July 4th celebration. Running time, 88 minutes. Played July 4.—Joe Schindele, Granite Theatre, Granite Falls, Minn. Small town patronage.

MISSING DAUGHTERS: Richard Arlen, Rochelle Hudson—A very good program picture. Story disconnected. Played it with fight pictures to above average business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

STRANGER FROM TEXAS: Charles Starrett, Lorna Gray, Sons of the Pioneers—Very good. Less than normal Saturday night business. Played July 6.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

TEXAS STAMPEDE: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—These westerns are fast growing more and more popular with better music and more beautiful heroines. Business above average.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

First National

FIGHTING 69TH, THE: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Jeffrey Lynn, Dennis Morgan, Alan Hale—This gave us the best business since the latter part of March. As a war picture, this is tops. It is hard to see where this could be improved on.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

THREE CHEERS FOR THE IRISH: Priscilla Lane, Dennis Morgan, Thomas Mitchell—I can recommend this as down the alley for a small town audience. What a change to have your patrons come out laughing and perfectly satisfied, which mine did for this feature. Plenty of action and comedy. Play it on my recommendation. Running time, 100 minutes. Played June 27.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

'TIL WE MEET AGAIN: George Brent, Merle Oberon, Pat O'Brien, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Binnie Barnes, Frank McHugh—They all liked this picture. More good comments and better business than most any show from Warners this year. Running time, 98 minutes. Played July 4-5.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Small town patronage.

'TIL WE MEET AGAIN: Merle Oberon, George Brent, Pat O'Brien, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Frank McHugh, Binnie Barnes—"One Way Passage" made over with a new cast and about as satisfactory as a made over dress. Frank McHugh and Binnie Barnes steal the show. Did not click. Played June 21-23.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BALALAIKA: Nelson Eddy, Ilona Massey, Charles Ruggles, Frank Morgan—Thanks a lot, Metro. For my district this was a natural and I am sure it will go over anywhere it's played. If weather conditions were OK, I would have done an exceptionally big business. Give this one your better playdates without hesitation. Running time, 102 minutes. Played June 27-29.—Mike Kieryluk, Vimy Theatre, Vegreville, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1940: Eleanor Powell, Fred Astaire, George Murphy—"Broadway Melody" pictures don't mean anything at the box office anymore. The dancing in this picture was very good but my customers are not satisfied with dancing only. Running time, 101 minutes. Played May 23-25.—Mike Kieryluk, Vimy Theatre, Vegreville, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

EDISON, THE MAN: Spencer Tracy, Rita Johnson, Gene Lockhart, Charles Coburn—Another swell picture from the ace company of the business. Just a good show, so good that it needs no comment. You cannot go wrong any day of the week but such a production deserves your best playing time. Running time, 108 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

JUDGE HARDY AND SON: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—Played with "The Cat and the Canary." See report on "The Cat any the Canary."—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

MAN FROM DAKOTA, THE: Wallace Beery, Dolores Del Rio, John Howard—For the first time Wallace Beery failed to go over. Story is poor. Supporting cast poor. Wallace did his best but was sold down the river. Don't think anyone liked this. Running time, 74 minutes. Played July 5-7.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MAN FROM DAKOTA: Wallace Beery, Dolores Del Rio, John Howard—I wouldn't rate this feature as a good Beery picture but business was fair and the public was satisfied, so why would I holler. Running time, 77 minutes. Played June 24-26.—Mike Kieryluk, Vimy Theatre, Vegreville, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

SECRET OF DR. KILDARE: Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres, Laraine Day—A good picture for any day of the week. Lionel Barrymore better than ever. Weather conditions was all that kept this one from being a big grosser. Running time, 85 minutes. Played May 13-15.—Mike Kieryluk, Vimy Theatre, Vegreville, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

SUSAN AND GOD: Joan Crawford, Fredric March, Rita Quigley, Ruth Hussey, John Carroll, Rita Hayworth, Bruce Cabot, Rose Hobart—We might just as well have had a small pox sign on the door when we ran this one. It's reputation traveled ahead of it from the neighborhood run, who pulled it. Crawford is a past number. She is passe as far as this town is concerned and this piece of fromage will finish her here. They used up a full dictionary and a full shelf of an encyclopedia in dialogue and then that all amounted to nothing. No comedy and no action and Metro had the guts to announce that they had another "The Women." I don't know who they were kidding. It certainly was not the public. It must have been themselves. These lying trailers burn me up. I wish there was a law against it.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Paramount

CAT AND THE CANARY, THE: Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard—Played with "Judge Hardy and Son." Isn't it a shame and a disgrace to our great industry that two such pictures are doubled on one program when real fine box office pictures are so scarce but that's the way it's being done, so to do some extra business on the Decoration Day holiday we arranged for this double bill. The weather man favored us with cool weather and the result was nice business on May 30-31 and June 1.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

GREAT VICTOR HERBERT, THE: Allan Jones, Mary Martin, Walter Connolly—This fine musical with the wonderful melodies of Victor Herbert did a little better than average. It was played on dish night but even with free dishes the picture also has something to do with the amount of cash that comes to the box office.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

OUR LEADING CITIZEN: Bob Burns, Susan Hayward—This down to earth sort of thing is always good with my people. Bob is tops.—Frank Sabin, Majestic Theatre, Eureka, Mont. Small town patronage.

ROAD TO SINGAPORE, THE: Bing Crosby, Dorothy Lamour, Bob Hope—Played with "The Flying Deuces." This is the show we arranged for the 4th of July holiday show and again the weather man thought that he would favor the showmen. So with a box office hit like "The Road to Singapore" and a laugh feast like "The Flying Deuces," a holiday and cool weather, we did nice business July 4-5-6 with this program. They still laugh and roar at the antics of Laurel and Hardy and we are still for them strong. Also for a real combination you can't beat Bob Hope and Bing Crosby, which resulted in the success of "The Road to Singapore" and we mustn't forget Dorothy Lamour in this. She was just what the doctor ordered to supply the romantic angle in this.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

STAR MAKER, THE: Bing Crosby, Louise Campbell, Ned Sparks, Linda Ware—This failed to draw them in. I thought it a very good feature. Nice tunes, good dancing.—Frank Sabin, Majestic Theatre, Eureka, Mont. Small town patronage.

Republic

JEEPERS CREEPERS: Weaver Brothers and Elviry, Roy Rogers—Our week-end patrons enjoyed this immensely.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MONEY TO BURN: James, Lucile and Russell Gleason—When the Higgins Family series started, I could not see much of a future for the series, coming in competition with the Jones Family and the Hardys but they seem to be making a place for themselves. This was doubled with "The Fighting 69th" and it was an ideal contrast for the other heavy drama to hear the roars of laughter. You knew that our patrons were enjoying it immensely.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

WOMEN IN WAR: Elsie Janis, Wendy Barrie, Patric Knowles—Good picture but business very light. Running time, 73 minutes. Played July 14-15.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

ABE LINCOLN IN ILLINOIS: Raymond Massey, Ruth Gordon, Mary Howard—A fine picture which was very well acted. Even a two day rain didn't keep my patrons away. All who saw it were very well pleased. Running time, 109 minutes. Played June 6-8.—Mike Kieryluk, Vimy Theatre, Vegreville, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

PRIMROSE PATH: Ginger Rogers, Joel McCrea—A highly entertaining picture. Do not play it on Sunday in small towns. I made this mistake to poor business. Running time, 93 minutes. Played June 30-31.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Small town patronage.

SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON: Thomas Mitchell, Freddie Bartholomew, Edna Best, Terry Kilburn, Tim Holt—A very creditable presentation to below normal business. Deserved SRO. Played June 26-27.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BARRICADE: Alice Faye, Warner Baxter — If Twentieth Century-Fox haven't a scrap heap of their own, I would gladly dispose of this one for them. My patrons were walking out about half way through the performance and I ducked into the office and locked the door. Running time, 71 minutes. Played June 13-15.—Mike Kieryluk, Vimy Theatre, Vegreville, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

GRAPES OF WRATH, THE: Henry Fonda, Dorris Bowden, Jane Darwell, John Carradine, Charley Grapewin—One of the best made pictures of the year. It is very depressing but will please everyone. I had a bunch of W.P.A. workers to see it three times. Running time, 128 minutes. Played June 13-14.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Small town patronage.

JOHNNY APOLLO: Dorothy Lamour, Tyrone Power, Edward Arnold, Lloyd Nolan—A very good picture but will not gross what you might expect. It will please most who see it. Running time, 93 minutes.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Small town patronage.

LILLIAN RUSSELL: Alice Faye, Don Ameche,

Henry Fonda, Edward Arnold, Warren William, Leo Carrillo, Weber and Fields—Good picture but business only fair. Running time, 126 minutes. Played July 10-11.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

LITTLE OLD NEW YORK: Alice Faye, Fred MacMurray, Richard Greene, Brenda Joyce—A very good picture but will not do business. People want to hear Alice Faye sing and look pretty. Running time, 100 minutes. Played June 27-28.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Small town patronage.

LUCKY CISCO KID: Cesar Romero, Evelyn Venable—Nix on this very ordinary western. Maybe O. K. for grind house.—Frank Sabin, Majestic Theatre, Eureka, Mont. Small town patronage.

MAN WHO WOULDN'T TALK, THE: Lloyd Nolan, Jean Rogers—Played with "Young As You Feel." I double billed two small ones and did just a fair business. Patrons were satisfied and so was I Running time, 72 minutes. Played May 27-29.—Mike Kieryluk, Vimy Theatre, Vegreville, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

United Artists

SAPS AT SEA: Laurel and Hardy—Not up to the standard of their previous pictures. A few good laughs. Running time, 58 minutes. Played June 30-July 1.—Joe Schindele, Granite Theatre, Granite Falls, Minn. Small town patronage.

TURNABOUT: Adolphe Menjou, Carole Landis, John Hubbard, William Gargan, Mary Astor, Verree Teasdale, Donald Meek, Franklin Pangborn, Joyce Compton—One of the funniest pictures ever shown at the Criterion and will please both young and old. One continuous laugh from start to finish. And the players, Carole Landis, John Hubbard, William Gargan, Verree Teasdale, Mary Astor, Donald Meek, Franklin Pangborn, Joyce Compton, all clever in their several parts and deserve special mention. Running time, 83 minutes. Played July 11-17.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

FIRST LOVE: Deanna Durbin, Helen Parrish, Robert Stack, Eugene Pallette, Leatrice Joy—This picture drew well and patrons were well satisfied. Deanna Durbin is now at the stage where a good male singing star taking part with her in a feature would make it big box office. Running time, 80 minutes. Played May 16-18.—Mike Kieryluk, Vimy Theatre, Vegreville, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

GREEN HELL: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Joan Bennett, John Howard, Alan Hale, George Bancroft, George Sanders, Vincent Price—Can't recommend this rather horrible (in spots) feature. Might do for a male audience liking raw meat.—Frank Sabin, Majestic Theatre, Eureka, Mont. Small town patronage.

I CAN'T GIVE YOU ANYTHING BUT LOVE, BABY: Johnny Downs, Peggy Moran—A poor excuse for a "B" picture. Running time, 60 minutes. Played July 9-11.—Joe Schindele, Granite Theatre, Granite Falls, Minn. Small town patronage.

SPIRIT OF CULVER: Jackie Cooper, Freddie Bartholomew—We enjoyed very good business on this picture, thanks to Foto-Nite.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

INVISIBLE STRIPES: George Raft, Humphrey Bogart, William Holden, Jane Bryan—Played this very late after all the circuits had done with it so my receipts were small. Also played with this the Academy Award short at a big rental so not so hot on this one. However, plenty of action. Running time, 82 minutes. Played July 4.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

IT ALL CAME TRUE: Ann Sheridan, Jeffrey Lynn, Humphrey Bogart, Zasu Pitts—This one was a fairly good feature, well acted, but the box office statement didn't show it, even with the very good weather we were having at the time. Running time, 97 minutes. Played June 10-12.—Mike Kieryluk, Vimy Theatre, Vegreville, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

SATURDAY'S CHILDREN: John Garfield, Claude Rains, Anne Shirley—Here is a sweet little drama with top billing to Garfield and Claude Rains stealing the picture as he usually does. A nice little picture but did not do the business that the price warrants. So do not be disappointed in your draw. Running time, 101 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

VIRGINIA CITY: Errol Flynn, Miriam Hopkins, Randolph Scott, Humphrey Bogart, Alan Hale—Very good show, though only about half as good as "Dodge City." Good cast and good story. I think Errol Flynn gives his best performance in this. Randolph Scott is especially good. Cast is all good. Made in color this would be a wow. Running time, 115 minutes. Played June 28-30.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor

GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

Looking At It From This Corner

Home office endeavor to give better last-minute promotional assistance to the man in the field is currently and considerably advanced by M-G-M's "Key Town Topics", a new weekly sheet service shepherded by Art Schmidt under the wing of Howard Dietz. Designed to give first-run metropolitan theatres "hot" exploitations developed after the pressbook has gone out, the same material is then made available for later and subsequent runs through pressbook supplements.

Offered in late issues of "Key Town Topics" and detailed in this section are some of the civic tieins made by Round Tablers on the Hardy Family third anniversary. Mayors figured prominently in the celebrations. The city heads were featured in broadcasts, cake cuttings, news breaks—importantly in the unprecedented seven-city campaign engineered by Harry Shaw and Lou Brown.

Promotions of this nature, taken for granted by the industry, and taken in stride by theatremen, are often a source of amazement to admen in other lines not so thoroughly sold to the public. Mebbe, that's why.

For the guidance of these wondering outsiders, there is no magic in getting local prominents to help the boxoffice. The cooperation, enthusiastically given, is had in exchange for the community work done by Round Tablers, even on campaigns pointed directly at the ticket-window. In support, for instance, is Lige Brien's project to get the local kids off traffic-dangerous streets by making recreational facilities available in the theatre building. And last week's issue told about the baseball league for juveniles organized by Warnermen Sid Mesibov, Pop Graver and Jack Mulhall.

Both boxoffice campaigns were officially approved by the city heads and leading clubmen alive to the benefits of child guidance, especially in vacation time.

Saying another good word for the industry while the saying is good, one must mention the thrilling job done by the film industry of Canada in staging the recent "National Theatre Party" to stimulate sales of War Savings Stamps. Sponsored by the Canadian Picture Pioneers, with N. L. Nathanson leading the drive, over a million dollars was raised by 975 theatres from coast to coast. Though it cost the theatres some $300,000 through cancellation of the regular night's performance, the committee expressed the general belief that national goodwill gained thereby was a fair return.

On this side of the border, theatres are advancing the cause of Americanism with such stirring programs as are reported regularly in these pages in conjunction with M-G-M's patriotic short subject, "The Flag Speaks". Every campaign stresses the comprehensive cooperation on the part of civic leaders, veteran and other organizations.

It is upon such occasions that the theatreman doubly entrenches himself and his operation in community regard.

Because the boys appear to be everlastingly at it to tie up with whatever is in the public spotlight, as evidenced by their contributions to this department, it is fitting here to again salute the endeavors of the quick-stepping Indiana-Illinois theatremen. Ably captained by Alex Manta, bossman, with the solid support of Jack Rose and Quigley Grand Award winner, John Burhorn, the showmen of the circuit leave little unturned, including the theatre, in keeping the customers informed of what goes on.

The exploitation highlights of Universal's "Boys from Syracuse" premiere, in Syracuse, deservedly are featured on a following page. The story stresses somewhat how much Gus Lampe had to do with this most successful job. It remains to tell, though, how unanimously the Schiner was credited by all concerned for what is agreed to be one of the tastiest campaigns to break in some time, locally or otherwise. The "all concerned", among others, importantly included Mayor Marvin of Syracuse and Jules Levey, the picture's producer, both of whom were pleased to say so, and publicly.

Sound showman and a most active Round Tabler, Gus well rates the many bows he is now requested to take—plus an especially deep one called for by this department.

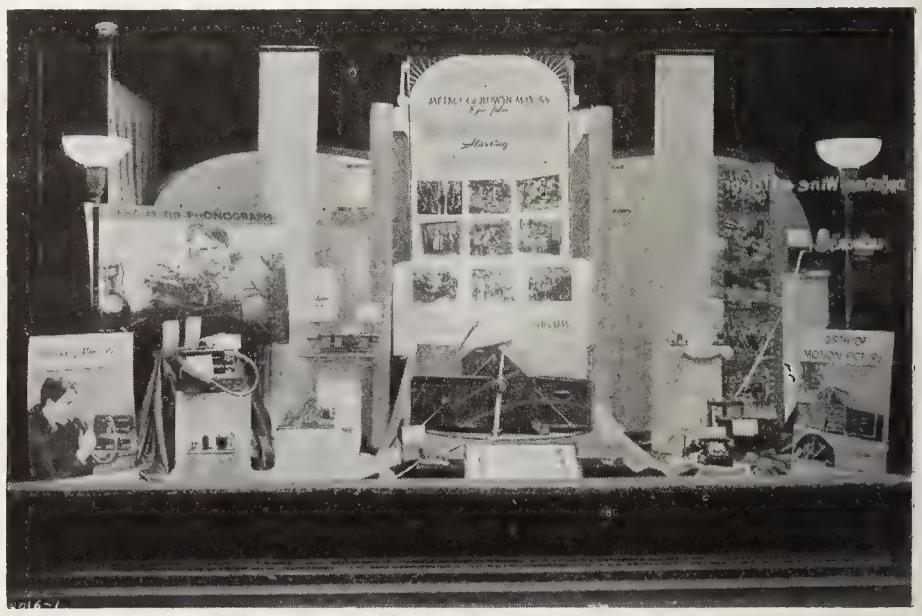
Round Table In Pictures

Attention-compelling was the tandem bicycle street bally used by Henry Suchman for "Lillian Russell" date at the Fabian Ritz, in Staten Island. Couple with appropriate back banners covered main streets during run.

Teaser street stunt arranged by Johnny Barcroft for "Torrid Zone" at the RKO Palace, Columbus, consisted of usherettes posing on busy street corners with ice block containing blowup of Ann Sheridan. Copy overall read: "Keep cool watching the hottest show in town".



Paid for entirely by cooperating dog food company was the pooch giveaway promoted by Arnold Stoltz for "The Biscuit Eater" at the Avon, in Utica, N. Y. In addition, a four-day pup want ad was run in paper under "Dogs For Sale".

Arranged by district manager, Gus Lampe, for "Brother Orchid" date at the Keith, Syracuse, was street stunt consisting of miniature cutouts of Robinson which were planted on table. Passersby were supplied with rings and invited to try their luck for tickets by tossing them over the figures.

Elaborate window display of the inventor's various inventions was arranged by publicist, Joe DiPesa, and his assistant, Al Longo, for date on "Edison the Man" at Loew's State, in Boston. Center of display featured highlight scene stills from the picture.

Official Welcome Given "Syracuse" On Syracuse Date

With the active participation of Mayor Marvin, through whose good offices the city's most important sources of cooperation were tapped, the three-theatre world premiere of Universal's "Boys from Syracuse," in Syracuse, was introduced with a campaign said to have reached a new high locally for theatre exploitation.

Directed personally by Gus Lampe, RKO-Schine district manager, credited for the success of the opening, the many branches of promotion that called attention to the event culminated in a giant three-hour street parade, starting at the airport where were met visiting stars and other celebrities, arriving via American Airlines. Ten bands, floats, units of local organizations and lines of bannered autos were in the procession that made the downtown area, and finishing at the downtown hotels where the receptions by the Mayor were tendered the guest and local prominents.

Store Personnel Costumed

In honor, the main streets were decorated with flags and bunting. Lamp posts carried double-faced shields plugging the picture. Day ahead promotion was featured with some 50 co-op ads. In addition, stores stressed displays of original costumes and togas worn in the picture. The costume idea was carried further by the stores, with elevator operators and main floor clerks attired similarly.

Publicity was widespread, papers getting behind the premiere with elaborate news spreads and photo layouts. Prominent among these tieins was a page-one replate by the Herald-Journal on the afternoon of the opening. Contests were also aimed to signalize the date, one on local "boys from Syracuse" who had made good in Hollywood, the other a candid camera tiein for best parade or other premiere pictures. American Airlines offered the visitor who flew the greatest distance to the premiere, via that airline, opportunity to meet the stars and attend the Mayor's official dinner, held after the premiere.

City Square Renamed

For street ballyhoo, bannered chariots were guided by costumed drivers. Lampe also promoted signs at main downtown bus stops, reading: "Official Chariot Stop—World Premiere," etc., and was able to have the city's largest square, for the campaign, renamed Sigma Chi, taken from the story. Gratis radio plugs reached 200, plus songs from the picture, the air tieins topped with broadcast from Keith's where the stars were presented out front and on the stage. Editorials in both papers on the event were other highlights as was extensive coverage by the wire services. Besides Keith's, the picture was also shown at the Paramount and Eckel, visited in turn by the stars.

Syracuse Schiners who worked with Lampe were Harry Unterfort, Gene Curtis and Harvey Cocks. For Universal, Lou Pollock, Eastern publicity director, and Ed Stein, of his department, were on hand.

Mayors Cooperate with Loew-men to Celebrate "Hardy" Anniversary

In bringing public attention to the third anniversary of M-G-M's Hardy Family pictures, Loewmen found the event of sufficient importance promotionally to engage the cooperation of city heads directly on behalf of "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante." For the Loew-Poli New England houses, a most unusual exploitation was devised by Harry Shaw, division head, and Lou Brown, publicity manager, with a 15-minute recording carrying congratulatory messages voiced by the mayors of seven cities in the division.

Brown went about it by promoting the mayors of Worcester, Springfield, Hartford, Meriden, Waterbury, New Haven and Bridgeport, to make individual recordings at local radio stations or music stores with recording equipment. The records then were gathered by the publicist, timed and programmed at a New Haven station where the voices were combined on a master recording. It goes this way:

Opening with music, station announcer introduces Brown who plugs the picture before bowing-in the first "speaker." After each voice, Lou introduces the others in turn, the recording finishing with added plugs for the attraction and concluding with music. The production is arranged to give the impression that each mayor is speaking from his home town via a remote control tieup with the introductions set to make the program appearing to be switching from one spot to another.

For radio tieins on the picture in the situations concerned, Brown had impressions taken from the master recording. These were used by leading stations where the picture has already played, with other towns to follow as the picture is booked.

In Baltimore, Mayor Jackson was prevailed upon by Bill Saxton to lend official recognition to the anniversary celebration by participating in lobby ceremonies at Loew's Century, in advance of the new Hardy picture. With one of the city's leading debutantes, His Honor posed for a cake-cutting, the confection a real 40-pounder promoted by Saxton for the occasion. Papers ran the shot and caption of the Mayor accepting the first slice of cake cut by the "debbie," which was publicized in advance in lobby posters and by the dailies. Cake was later sent to crippled children's hospital.

Corker Ties in With Annual Poppy Sale

Since the Palace Theatre, in Athens, Ga., for the past 20 years on each Memorial Day has cooperated with Miss Moina Michael, better known as the "Poppy Lady," in the dedication of the poppy anchor which is sent to Annapolis to be cast out into the sea in memory of the boys who went down, City Manager Moon Corker this year arranged for the expense to be shared by the sororities of the University Campus. Local dedication was held on the Palace stage with Miss Michael doing the ceremonies. Theatre was especially decorated for the occasion with two students dressed as a sailor and soldier holding the American and Legion Post flags on each side of the anchor. Corker reports that an abundance of goodwill is garnered through the event.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Students Broadcast Programs

At the Phoenix Union High School and Junior College in Phoenix, Ariz., the students recently prepared 15-minute broadcasting programs regarding "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" and "Pinocchio" at the local Fox Theatre. First the classes attended the showings, recordings were made of the programs and these were entered in the Fifth American Exhibition of Recorded Educational Programs sponsored by Ohio State University. The novel tieins were made by Louis B. Christ, manager of the Fox.

Bachner Hooks "Tom Brown" To Local Soap Box Derby

Getting aboard the publicity bandwagon in connection with Cleveland's Soap Box Derby, Dave Bachner of Warners obtained a trophy which was termed the "Tom Brown Safety Trophy" and arranged for it to be given as one of the prizes in competition heats. Stunt which took place day ahead of opening, broke in local papers with art and story, which included a strong plug for the picture at Warners Hippodrome.

Another stunt which brought additional publicity was tied with the Junior Aviator Squadron of the Cleveland Press, whereby a small number of the Aviator leaders were invited to attend the first performance. Subsequent stories appeared in the paper.

Levy Promotes Double Truck To Introduce Cooling Plant

To inaugurate the summer season and to indicate the theatre's readiness for it, Manager Milt Levy, Commercial, Chicago, put together an unusual double truck featured by The Calumet, his sectional newspaper. Headed by atmospheric "cooling streamers", the layout included summer copy from the leading merchants in the area, topped by a giant institutional spread by Levy on behalf of his air-conditioning plant.

No individual screen attractions were included in the promotion, all copy aimed at merchant's coolness.

ORGANIZATIONAL AID GIVEN "FLAG" DATES

Civic and Veteran Groups Tied to Comprehensive Campaigns On M-G-M's Patriotic Short

Encouragement of short-selling generally is noted in recent reports due principally to feature-worthy campaigns put on by members in behalf of MGM's "The Flag Speaks." As has been previously noted, tieins on the "Flag" short have been aimed importantly to civic and war organizations, the campaign at the St. George, Staten Island, in Harry Black's division of Fabian Theatres, by Ed Goth, publicity head, being a representative example.

All local service organizations were contacted and notified of the booking, it being emphasized that the subject matter fitted in with organizational Americanism campaigns. Publicity prepared by Goth was released under the name of the Legion to insure wide acceptance by local dailies.

Display Shows Flag History

Lobby exhibition featured a display depicting the Stars and Stripes in replicas of every type of flag since the founding of the nation. Animated effect was created by illuminated shadowbox in the center setpiece with the flag keeping continually waving by a blower contrivance. Extensive street parade was headed by uniformed 60-piece band, called the "Fabian Melodeers," a group organized by Harry Black and sponsored by the Fabian Theatres.

The stage activities preceding showings featured a concert by the Richmond County American Legion band, a Ladies Auxiliary Glee Club and fife and drum corps. Program opened with presentation of county colors against background of huge American Flag and closed with the audience singing the Star Spangled Banner. Children were admitted at special prices.

Ties Legion to Benefit

For the date at the Oaks, in Oakmont, Pa., Manager Steve Rodnok, Jr., invited heads of all local organizations as his guests, when "The Flag Speaks" played in the downtown Pittsburgh area. This was done in advance of a benefit campaign for a charity cause, wherein a percentage of every ticket sold by the Legion was donated to the charity. Other local associations cooperated in the selling of tickets and by announcing the showings at their meetings. Attraction was mentioned in assemblies by superintendents of schools who cooperated further on an essay contest for high school students, the winning essays published in local papers. The press cooperated further with featured articles on such subjects as the proper way of hanging and saluting the flag, the material including direct plugs for the picture.

Merchants were further tied up in the newspaper advertising in which prizes and guest tickets were given for the best store decoration incorporating the flag. The Round Tabler also featured a street parade sponsored by the Legion a day ahead, by taking movies of the procession, together with shots of the store fronts, winners in the essay contest, etc. These shots later shown at the theatre for extra business. Additional attention was gathered by an offer of guest tickets for the oldest American flag presented at the boxoffice and patriotic exhibits for lobby showing were topped by the wearing of American Legion uniforms by the personnel.

Recruiting Service Cooperates

For his date on the short at Loew's Park, in Cleveland, Arnold Gates widely distributed a souvenir herald, in color, with attraction credits bordered by a series of small panels containing the names of all presidents, their states, birth and death dates, and time of inauguration. The unusual piece of advertising was duly noted by newspaper critics and radio commentators, to whom copies were addressed. In addition, Gates was able to obtain pamphlets from the United States Recruiting Service, detailing correct procedure in saluting, hanging and displaying the American flag. Gates placed attraction stickers on the front cover and arranged for the pamphlets to be planted in stores, doctors' and dentists' offices, etc.

General interest in the short was stimulated at the Randolph, in Randolph, N. Y. by Walt Davis, by cooperation obtained from a local club woman who saw to it that the schools, veterans, churches and general public were sufficiently informed of the engagement. Concentration of the publicity was tied together at the theatre with Davis arranging an elaborate display in keeping with the showing.

Stages Patriotic Program

Hooked exclusively to a tiein with his American Legion Post, the campaign put on by John W. Guiton, Jr. at the Rialto, in West New York, N. J., centered around a stage program at the theatre. This included welcome by the Mayor, talks on the flag by members of the high school faculty, "colors" ceremonies by Legion squads, musical numbers by the senior and junior groups, preceding the showing of the film. The event was advertised mainly by a colorful four-page program, listing the offices of the Post, the schedule of stage ceremonies, theatre credits highlighted on the front page, plus cut of the flag in color. For added attention Guiton arranged a street parade to the theatre which was duly noted in the newspapers together with other publicity given the event.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Notaro's Nelson Program

Landed by Pat Notaro at the Columbia, in Sharon, Pa. was a neat plug on "Ozzie Nelson" and his band, which ran in the radio column of local daily, calling attention to the half hour program of Nelson recordings and spot announcements on the air. Radio program was gratis to the theatre and story on Nelson and his band was also landed.

Tieins Publicize New 'Cool' Plant

To bring attention to the installation of a new air conditioning system at the subsequent-run Lex, Chicago, located in a highly-competitive residential section, Manager Robert F. Griffith put together an extensive campaign spotlighted with contests aimed at adults and children.

Featured in a co-op page run by the local papers, the "cooling" contest offered guest tickets to readers who made up the longest list of two, three and four letter words from the slogan "Cooled by Refrigeration," using letters in each word no oftener than they appeared in the slogan. In addition to names and addresses, number of words submitted were required with each entry, of which the theatreman reports over 500 submitted.

Offers Books as Prizes

The second contest was tied in with "Young Tom Edison," the attraction that marked the cooling installation. Griffith distributed heralds containing boxes reading, "Mickey Rooney is a good 'Young Tom Edison' because," those submitting answers asked to do so in exactly 17 words. Winners were awarded copies of the 230-page book, "Mickey Rooney Himself."

Publicity for the new equipment was also secured in the downtown papers, with other mention planted in the P.T.A. weekly, American Legion programs and other well-read neighborhood publications, including the theatre program. The front was decorated in keeping and other devices utilized for a campaign successful enough, Griffith reports, to have increased attendance appreciably from the first day of the installation without going over the theatre's regular advertising budget.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Grimes' Special Sports Show

To aid in the local Sportsman's League Game Fund campaign, Round Tabler Ken Grimes, of the Warner, in Erie, Pa., arranged for a special midnight show of sports reels consisting of "Hunting Hounds," "Hunting Dogs," "Gun Play," "Fly Casting" and "To the Victor." Members were circularized and advised of prizes which had been promoted for giveaway to those selling the most tickets for the engagement. Newspapers covered the events on sporting pages and aided generally in putting the event over, through readers and art work. According to reports, the event was a huge success with over 1,000 members attending in a body.

Burke's "Fu Manchu" Tieup

For his date on "Drums of Fu Manchu," Bill Burke at Schine's State, in Fostoria, Ohio, tied up with the sponsors of the air program "Adventures of Fu Manchu" which brought spot plugs immediately following their radio program over WHK each week during the life of the serial. Sponsor also paid for two three-column ads to plug Burke's kid show and serial. The continuous plug on the radio and the 15-week newspaper plug aided considerably in putting over the shows, as did the classified ad contest put on.

Recreation Rooms Provided by Brien

For the direct promotion of juvenile attendance at Warners Prince, Ambridge, Pa., Manager Lige Brien has provided a recreation hall in the theatre building for the use of local youngsters, the space large enough to accommodate several hundred at one time. That the juniors were immediately interested is indicated in the attendance of over 300 at the inaugural ceremonies, which coincided with the second birthday of the theatre's successful kid club.

Games and indoor sports, active and quiet, are scheduled for Wednesday nights, with each club member required to take part in some activity. Various treats at the meetings have been provided by Brien in addition to prizes for the programs promoted from cooperating merchants. Events will be timed to various holidays and the schedules will be supervised by officers elected by the members of the theatre club, numbering over 800. Working with the Round Tabler, a recreation leader has been appointed to act as co-advisor.

Theatre features will be plugged at the meetings and a civic goodwill aimed for by taking the youngsters off the streets to cut down on traffic accidents. This purpose, stressed by Lige to the newspapers, brought generous publicity to the club project, the dailies agreeing also to give regular space to weekly activities, including items of interest to parents.

Callow Ties "Heaven" Date To Junior League War Fund

Campaign for opening date on "All This and Heaven, Too" at the Earle Theatre, in Philadelphia, reported by Ev Callow, tied in with the Junior League war fund drives, the importance of which locally gave the date a wide break in the society pages as well. For this reason, mailing list of the social register was used for the sale of tickets and other important women's clubs were also tied in to aid the drive.

Radio was used extensively especially for opening night broadcast, and other devices to spread the word included wide distribution of bookmarks and autographed photos of Bette Davis and book tieup with leading stores.

Featured publicity included serialization in the Daily News and other publicity promotions consisted of co-op ad pages making a play on the title. Still another publicity source was tapped by tying in with the Record's "Cinderella" contest with the donation of a trophy from Bette Davis as one of the major prizes.

"GULLIVER" ANIMATION

Working plan, below, and cut, left, illustrate the 25-foot "Gulliver" animation constructed of cardboard by Manager R. M. Thomason, Princess, Bowling Green, Ky., and blownup from pressbook ad. Right arm holding "Gabby" moved up and down every six seconds. Eyes were cut out and pupils mounted on arms moved left and right. Lamps were mounted behind eyes for lighting at night.

Cocks' Kid Shows Prove Successful

In an effort to garner a little extra kid business, Harvey Cocks at Schine's Palace, in Syracuse recently inaugurated a weekly Quiz contest at his Saturday matinees, for which the theatreman promoted gifts from cooperating merchants. One week a boy asks the questions and a girl is the judge, the following week the procedure is switched. In addition, six kids are picked at random from the audience to sing, dance and recite, records are made of the proceedings and later played back for the audience after which the discs are given to the kids who participated.

With the Arthur Murray dancers appearing nightly at a Syracuse Hotel, where they also teach dancing, Cocks promoted them to put on a series of dancing nights on the Palace stage, which included a square dance, waltz, La Conga, etc. Dancers give an exhibition of the particular dance advertised in advance, audience applause deciding winners.

LaDue Imports Loggerhead for "Million B. C." Stunt

The difficulties of importing a 100-pound loggerhead turtle from Louisiana for ballyhoo on "Million B. C." at the Strand, Akron, Ohio, proved worthwhile for Manager John LaDue, since the reptile proved a publicity standout for the drive. Featured by the dailies was the granting of the first turtle license by the mayor, the permit framed and displayed out front. In addition, the loggerhead was planted in the front decorations which were emphasized by costumed caveman and woman for added effect.

Other standouts of the LaDue campaign included a walking 24-sheet in the downtown area, distribution by the cavewoman of cards reading: "I'm looking for a caveman like the one in," etc., cartoon books for Saturday kid matinee gifts and circus heralds put out by box magazine carriers.

IN COURTS

New York Brokers Fight Limited Ticket Fee

Six theatre-ticket brokers who say they are acting also on behalf of the forty-one other licensed ticket agencies in New York City attacked the validity of the 75-cent limit on theatre ticket brokerage fee imposed by legislation enacted last April in a suit brought in the New York Supreme Court. The nominal defendants are License Commissioner Paul Moss and Police Commissioner Valentine.

The action, which charges that the legislation is unconstitutional, also questions the validity of the rules giving effect to the statute which were promulgated by Commissioner Moss. Both measures were instigated by the League of New York Theatres and Actors Equity Association after they encountered difficulties in enforcing their own code.

The action served notice that the plaintiffs would apply on July 29 for a temporary injunction restraining enforcement of the regulatory measures from Justice Sidney Bernstein.

Sound Restriction Being Decided

Judge P. B. O'Sullivan of the Superior Court in New Haven, Conn., is deciding whether Maria Adorno will be permitted to operate a 900-seat open-air theatre without sound range restrictions. The matter was appealed to the higher court from a recent decision of the State Police Commissioner which imposed a 250-ft. radius of sound. The theatre was built and equipped last summer but has never obtained a permit to operate.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger (†) symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

MARKET NOTES:

Attachable Penny Chute

A PENNY CHUTE attachable to any make of coin changer has been developed by the GoldE Manufacturing Company of Chicago. The device, according to the manufacturer, was suggested by the expectancy of greater occasions for making change in pennies because of higher admission taxes. The chute is made of plated steel and clamps on the side of all standard coin changers, becoming an integral part of the machine. Attachment is by means of thumb screws.

The chute holds from 150 to 160 pennies, and issuance of the coins is by a push-button control. For theatres requiring more service than a single chute provides, a double chute is available, This unit has two push-buttons, each of which ejects one penny so that any desired number of pennies can be dispensed.

Booklet on Latex Cushions

A BOOKLET describing foamed latex cushions as applied to theatre seating, has been issued by the American Seating Company. The discussion, which is illustrated, deals with the characteristics of foamed latex itself, and also with its application to the arch-spring construction employed in the seats of American auditorium chairs.

The color characteristics of the various available lacquers and pigments under ultraviolet light, and the manner of their application, are discussed and illustrated.

Gentlemen:
The Cyclex Projection Lamps which we installed in the Orleans Theatre in November, 1939, have more than met our expectations, both in reference to improvement in projection and in reduced operating cost.

Previous to the installation of Cyclex, we were using Low Intensity Lamps, which gave us fair illumination, but the power bill was about $26.50 per month. This was reduced to about $10.00 a month. We now have as fine a projection as any theatre in Montreal and are had anticipated. at the same time saving more money than we

We can highly recommend the new Cyclex Lamps to any exhibitor who is anxious to improve his projection and still save money.

Yours very truly,

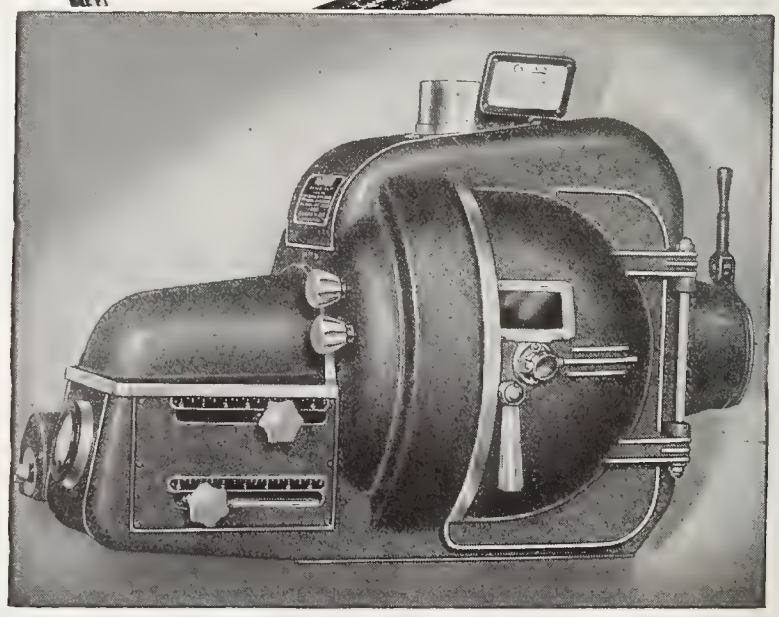
Dear Sirs:
With reference to the pair of CYCLEX projection lamps which you installed in our Teatro Santos Suarez on April 17, 1940, we are more than satisfied with the improvement in the projection, and what is of equal importance, with the economy effected in the consumption of carbon and electricity, which amounted to an average of $10 a month.



We also take this opportunity to advise you that before selecting your lamps we tried other makes which were available in the market, and we were convinced that the best results could be obtained with the CYCLEX lamps.

You are at liberty to use this letter, if you deem it convenient to do so.

Yours very truly,
EMPRESA DIAZ Y LOPEZ,
(Signed) Humberto Lopez.

The originals of these two letters are on file for reference.

THE STATEMENTS above, . . . just two of countless comments from exhibitors everywhere furnish convincing proof that Cyclex the IMPROVED projection light source PAYS FOR ITSELF in savings! You owe it to yourself to investigate this amazing projection lamp!

That Rear Wall Acoustic Puzzle

INDICATIVE OF the direct interest that is being taken by Hollywood these days in the facilities of the theatre to present its product effectively, is a letter received early this month from the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences, raising a question regarding the acoustical disposition of rear auditorium walls as dealt with by C. C. Potwin in a group of diagrams in the June 1st issue. The letter, addressed to Mr. Potwin, with a copy to BETTER THEATRES, discusses a matter of critical importance in sound reception therefore the points presented in it by Jack Durst, chairman of the Council's subcommittee on acoustical characteristics, and Mr. Potwin's reply should be of general interest; indeed, the correspondence goes far in clearing up an issue that has been confused for some time.

▶Admitting that the control of reflections "has unlimited possibilities," Mr. Durst states the belief of his committee that the principal benefit of such control lies in the direction of these reflections away from the audience rather than towards it. He specifically refers to the drawing at the upper right-hand corner of page 13 in the June 1st issue.

"This," he points out, "indicates the reflected sound would be directed towards the ceiling and away from the audience, while in the upper left-hand corner of the same page (both drawings are repeated here) the sloping portion between the upper wall and wainscoting is angled in the opposite direction and would, therefore, tend to reflect sound towards the audience, unless the degree of slope is greater than might possibly be interpreted by the proportions in the drawing. The same is true of the rear wall contours shown on the same page.

"We have recently had the misfortune to have one of our newest preview theatres in this vicinity designed on the premise that controlled reflections from the rear wall would serve a useful purpose in reinforcing the sound energy at the rear of the theatre.

"As a result, this theatre presents an extremely difficult problem in the adjustment of its acoustical response characteristic. The reinforcement obtained in the rear section is far from imaginary, but unfortunately is entirely below 500 cycles and is of uneven phase distribution.

"The net result is a definite 'muddiness' in the low frequencies, and a very disturbing lack of presence [liveness and fidelity of sound] in the seating area concerned. When the characteristic is altered sufficiently to obtain even a small degree of presence in the rear section, the center and front sections of the house are highly objectionable from over-emphasis of this part of the frequency spectrum."

Formation of the Wall When Tilted

In reply, Mr. Potwin cites these factors:

1. In auditoriums with amplified sound, in which the sound system itself can be adjusted to supply sufficient volume at rear rows, tilting of the rear wall to reflect sound into the audience is usually to be avoided.

2. Should an auditorium require such reflection into the audience (as might be the case in a very deep auditorium), this can be done by tilting the rear wall inward so that broken-up reflections may be absorbed quickly in the audience area.

3. The wall so tilted inward should not be a large, plain surface.

▶"I refer to my column," continues Mr. Potwin, "in the issue of July 22, 1939, in which I discussed rear wall formation and the usual necessity for designing this surface in a series of small slopes superimposed on the main slope in order that proper diffusion may be obtained. . . .

"The inward slopes for the rear wall shown in the sketches in the June 1, 1940 issue are a group of small slopes which in the final design would vary in size, dimension and degree of projection from the fundamental slope. . . .

▶"With respect to the inward tilt just above the wainscot area along the side walls, this surface is usually not greater than 2 feet in height above a 4- or 5-foot wainscot, and is varied in the degree of projection from the vertical, depending on the size of the floor plan. Its purpose is fundamentally a practical one due to the fact that lower wall areas are easily reached by the audience. A truly vertical wainscot of hard material 6 or 7 feet in height along the side walls frequently produces objectionable reflections. The 2-foot inward tilt has been used both advantageously and successfully in actual theatre design work."

Display Methods

Yet another recent communication merits being passed on to readers. This one, from Ernest Wagner of Wagner Sign Service, Inc., Chicago, offers, with the aid of an interesting sequence of photographs, some instructive comment on marquee advertising. Referring to BETTER THEATRES' publication during the past year of considerable material on carefully planned arrangements of marquee copy (we've applied the term "typographical" to the method, to indicate a certain relationship to printed advertising), Mr. Wagner goes on to say:

"I have noted with interest the series of drawings showing different copy arrangements in the June 29th issue, and it occurs to me that you would be interested in the enclosed pictures of an actual situation. I think they illustrate vividly the lack of thought given by theatres generally to the selling of pictures.

▶"The first photograph is one taken prior to the opening of the house and shows the word 'Newsreel' in 30-inch letters. This size of letters was readable from eight blocks away, and this marquee has a circulation of a million people daily, so the advantage of this size of letters as an attention-getter is tremendous in this locality.

▶"The second picture shows copy that would create interest in that it puts 'The War Gets Real' in 16-inch letters, but in my estimation, this is more important than the word 'News' that is emphasized in 24-inch letters. However, it still shows some degree of showmanship.

"Now for the first four weeks that this theatre was in operation, an arrangement had been made with our company whereby they were provided with any and all sizes of letters desired. After the four weeks, the owners decided that they could save money by the purchase of one size of letters only. One of their first pieces of copy with their own font of 10-inch letters is shown in the third picture enclosed, with the line 'Bombing of Paris.'

▶"This was the first-run of 'Bombing of Paris' on Broadway. Ten-inch letters were used entirely for the announcement and these letters will read only two blocks. The only real attraction on the end of this board was 'Bombing of Paris,' therefore had this 'title' only been used, with 30-inch letters for 'Bombing,' and 24-inch letters for 'of Paris,' it would have been possible for from 200,000 to 400,000 more people daily to have known what the theatre was playing. There is no question but that this would have increased attendance by 300 or 400 more people. In other words, it is my contention that to make a saving of, say, $10 a week, around $100 a day was thrown away."

WANTED: A SOUND BASIS FOR ATTRACTION DISPLAY DESIGN

[In short, what Mr. Lee is puzzled over, and what he thinks should be done about it, is—but perhaps you'd rather read his letter. And don't let his manner of signing off fool you. S. Charles Lee is the Los Angeles theatre architect of the same name.—THE EDITOR.]

Dear Editor:

Covered six different cities last week and paid particular attention to the advertising displayed by the theatre operators in the various communities. Saw one theatre with every available inch of front and lobby area covered with coming-attraction announcements. When I took off from that town in my Pegasus [See photo of Peg and its pilot presented herewith.—Ed] I deliberately circled over this man's theatre and noted that the roof was the only space not covered with advertising matter. Nevertheless, although I had spent a fair amount of time in front of this theatre, the current attraction had not registered.

Pilot Lee and Pegasus.

One notices this rather often, and it certainly brings up the question of how architectural and advertising functions are to be co-ordinated to the end that the current attraction is readily and easily impressed on the consciousness of every passerby. With increase in traffic speeds, the problem of focussing attention on the current attraction displays becomes a greater one.

Just where is the show sold to the public? Have people made up their minds to see a certain picture on the basis of newspaper advertising and publicity, and do they then wait until the picture comes to their community? Are they sold by the marquee? Are they sold by the stills and posters out front? Are they sold by the coming-attraction lobby displays? Are they sold by the trailers? ARE THEY SOLD? [Of this whole mess of questions, Mr. Lee, we like the last one best.—Ed.]

I have talked to many showmen and have had a wide variety of answers. What I sought to find out was simply this: What portion of selling is done directly on the theatre premises? Of course, there are differences in the value of on-the-premises selling according to specific location—it appears that a subsequent-run or "grind" house will sell on a somewhat different basis from that of a first-run or neighborhood theatre. From the opinions that have been expressed to me, I gather that, assuming some advertising and publicity has made the picture known to the public, the selling is done first by the marquee, and second by the posters.

Then there is the matter of coming-attraction displays. Few operators have been able to give me a helpful analysis of the effect of this type of advertising on patrons. Should the patron entering a theatre in anticipation of the picture he is to see today, be asked to consider the picture that is to be shown tomorrow? Is the patron psychologically conditioned to receive the message that the coming-attraction advertising is supposed to convey? When he leaves the theatre, if he has enjoyed today's picture, the coming-attraction advertising probably registers favorably. But what if he failed to enjoy today's show?

Should you have some worthwhile answers to these questions, let me have them. If not, maybe your readers have. These attraction advertising matters present some problems that the theatre operator and architect must solve together.

Your Poster Case Examiner,

S. CHARLES LEE.

Cooling Malpractice

One of the most, if not the most extensive survey of the effects of air-conditioning—which is definitely to say, of the careless or ill-informed application and operation of air-conditioning systems—on theatre patrons is represented in a report prepared by Dr. George W. Riley of New York, past-president of the American Osteopathic Association, for the annual convention of the society in St. Louis. And its recital of evil effects indicates that the efforts of authorities, medical organizations, publications and the air-conditioning industry itself, to end the ill effects and make air-conditioning a real asset to theatre and public alike, haven't been altogether successful.

▶Elsewhere in this issue, J. T. Knight, Jr., points to the complaints of patrons and declares that these "constitute managerial troubles," rather than those of air-conditioning, provided the system has been properly designed and implemented. The answer, says Mr. Knight, "is: First, to know your plant; and second, to know more about air-conditioning."

Pointing out the evil of having temperatures too low and of poorly designed ventilation systems, Dr. Riley's report quite properly states:

"Air-conditioning, installed and operated correctly, is too splendid an improvement, and the industry is too publicly valuable, to be handicapped by these drawbacks and criticisms. Those concerned with the installation of air-conditioning systems should see that they are built and operated in such a way that the public health is not endangered."

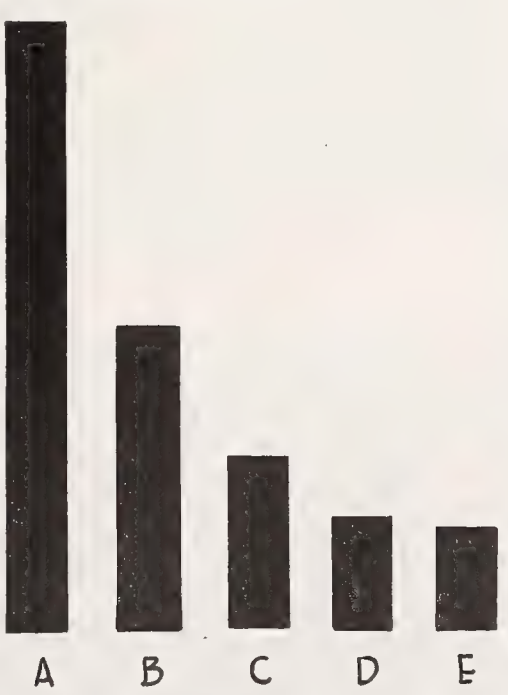
Bringing White Projection Light At Last to the Smaller Theatres

How research has brought the high-intensity arc lamp within the modest budget

By W. C. KALB

FOR MANY YEARS the low-intensity reflecting type carbon arc lamp served the projection needs of the small theatre in a very satisfactory manner. It gave more light on the screen than had previously been available from the condenser type low-intensity lamp, and the operating cost was substantially less. The fact that the screen light from the low-intensity carbon arc is somewhat yellow in quality was not seriously disturbing so long as all pictures were in monochrome. It is true that some theatre patrons, since the introduction of the high-intensity arc in the larger theatres, have expressed a preference for the snow-white light which it supplies. For the small neighborhood theatre, however, any loss of patronage due to this preference was more than offset by convenience of location near the homes of the majority of the regular patrons.

Color Demands Change



The advent of color in the motion picture industry has completely changed the situation and placed great emphasis on quality of projection light. Color features are photograped with carbon arc lighting of daylight quality and are processed for projection in true color values with light of similar quality. It is well known that daylight is composed of all the spectral colors in approximately equal proportion. Since this is also true of high-intensity projection light, such light gives very accurate color reproduction on the screen and greater realism than can otherwise be obtained.

Fully half of the light energy given off by the low-intensity projection arc is orange and red, with less than one-fifth violet and blue. The result is a light of definitely yellowish tint. Obviously a light of this character detracts appreciably from the color accuracy of the picture thrown on the screen, and the effect upon the observer is correspondingly less realistic.

The education of the public to the need for higher levels of illumination is another factor affecting those theatres still equipped with low-intensity projection light. Simplified high-intensity lamps, using "Suprex" carbons, brought snow-white projection light and higher levels of general illumination within the economic range of a large class of theatres of intermediate seating capacity. The theatre-going public soon indicated its approval of the resulting improvement in personal convenience and visual comfort. This fact, however, serves only to complicate the situation for the small theatre, which cannot afford the cost of installing new lamps that offer no appreciable economy in operation. Most theatre managers recognize the box-office value of snow-white projection light in abundant volume, but for many small theatres, installation and operating costs of high-intensity projection lamps have heretofore been really too high.

Small Theatre Aided

This economic problem of the small theatre has now been solved. During the past year several new projection lamps have been placed on the market designed to meet the specific needs of the theatre of small seating capacity. As a convenient descriptive term these lamps have been called One-Kilowatt Arc, since that term approximately defines the power consumption at the arc. Most of these lamps are of the direct current type, but one employs an alternating current arc in conjunction with a converter which changes the 60-cycle power supply to 96 cycles, thus eliminating the flicker that would result from a slight difference in power circuit and shutter frequencies.

Graphic representation of relative operating cost per 1,000 lumens: A—Original low-intensity arc; B—High-intensity condenser type; C—Low-intensity reflector type; D—"Simplified" high-intensity; E—"One-kilowatt" arc.

These new lamps are all of the high-intensity type and give the same advantages of snow-white projection light possessed by the original condenser type high-intensity lamp and the later "simplified high-intensity" designs. They give 15 to 80% more screen light than is obtained from the low-intensity reflecting lamp, thus permitting general illumination in the theatre to be raised to the more comfortable standards established by the larger theatres in which high-intensity projection has long been in use.

Operating Cost Reduced

In addition to low installation cost, these new lamps have the further advantage of low operating cost. For example, at the average power rate paid by small theatres, the operating cost of the one-kilowatt arc is from 20% to 35% less than that of low-intensity projection lamps, the actual saving depending on the power rate and on the current at which the lamps are operated. The operating cost for the same volume of screen light is on the order of one-half as much as that of low-intensity reflecting lamps.

The development of projector carbons and projection lamps has kept abreast of progress in other phases of the motion picture industry. Striking improvements have been made in the brilliancy of the arc crater, in total volume of screen light available, in efficiency of light production, in economy of operation and in quality of projection light. The most recent development, the one-kilowatt arc, supplies screen light at the lowest cost per unit of volume ever attained in direct current projection arcs. Graphic comparison of the average operating cost per 1,000 screen lumens is shown for various types of projection lamps by the relative height of the several bands in the chart below.

The advantages of high-intensity projection light are today fully recognized by the public as well as by those identified with the motion picture industry. The advantage of abundant snow-white projection light arc now within the economic reach of theatres of every size.

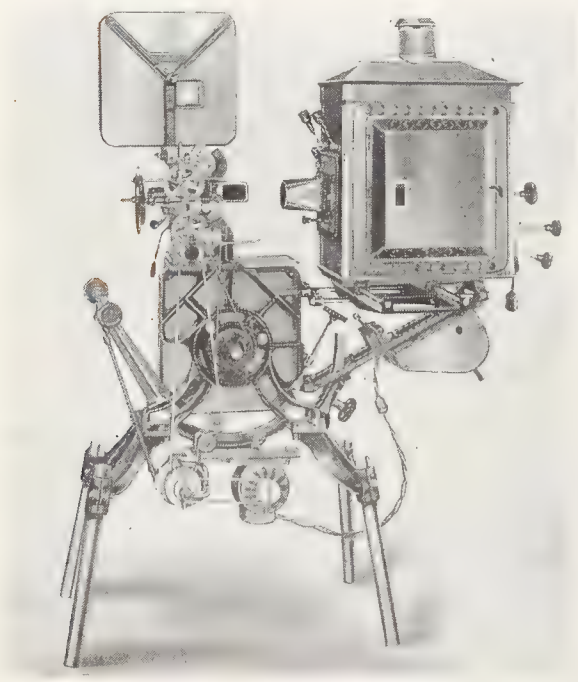
. . . and F. H. RICHARDSON summarizes



The Search for Better Projection Light

SINCE THE motion picture is nothing but variant intensities of light, its history has been importantly a continual search for better means of providing light, beginning with the weak, colorful (literally just that) a.c. electric arc employed in the beginning, to the powerful, brilliant light sources of today.

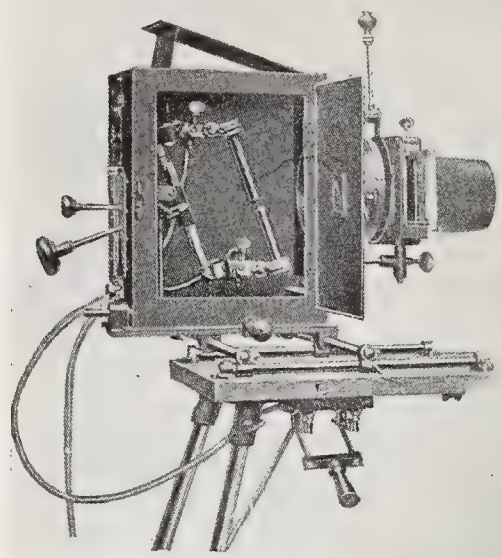
In 1896, the motion picture made its debut in the amusement field with a light source supplied (except in rather rare instances where direct current power was available) alternating current, the maximum amperage being 20. The only carbons available were those used in street lighting. Carbon manufacturing was itself but little past its infancy. The product was full of hard and soft spots, metallic and other impurities, and contained cracks galore.

To add to the difficulty, the "operator" of that day had only the most nebulous understanding of the electric arc, the carbons which produced it, or of the lens system by means of which the light was projected to the screen. The screen image that was not smeared with rainbow effects or that did not have more or less dense shadows at top or bottom or on at least one side, was a rarity.

The motion picture was regarded as a novelty—it would only continue to be a box office attraction so long as it was a novelty. This view was almost universally held for at least the first ten years of the "moving picture's" existence. Naturally, carbon manufacturers refused to undertake the necessary experiments and install the added plant equipment required to improve their product. In fact, as late as 1910, this writer took it upon himself to correspond with the company that is now the leader in American carbon production, urging that some of the many faults present in carbons used for projection be eliminted. He was promptly advised that he was "crazy" and would do well to attend to his own business and not meddle with things he did not understand. This, however, he refused to do, and as files of the old Motion Picture World (afterward merged with MOTION PICTURE HERALD) will show, he gave the matter publicity a-plenty.

Not really so long ago—a Powers 6B projector with Powers lamp.

Adjustable Transformer



Along about 1908 improvement began all along the line, slowly at first, but with accelerating speed as the motion picture began to look as though it was here to stay. Carbon faults gradually disappeared, lamps were made stronger and were built more accurately, the means by which the carbons were fed (by hand, of course) were vastly improved, the improvement finally culminating in the automatic feed. Either in 1910 or 1911, J. H. Hallberg, a New York City supply dealer, introduced a low-voltage transformer capable of adjustment in three amperages, which rapidly displaced the rheostat for controlling the a.c. arc. Next, along about 1912 (so far as recollection serves), motor-generators were introduced and gradually installed, after which time d.c. became the usual motion picture light source.

About this time the power of the light source began to be increased and we even heard of the use of as much as 40 amperes at the arc! It is a little known fact that as late as 1910, the City of New York restricted the power of projection arcs to 20 amperes.

Accompanying these paragraphs is a picture reproduced from the Power's Cameragraph 1908 catalogue, loaned to me by the International Projector Corporation. Of the lamp shown, the catalog had this to say:

"An important feature is the manner of mounting on the stand. A series of sliding rods allow double motion, sidewise and forward and back so as to give a forward range of adjustment of 5 inches and a lateral range of 7⅛ inches.

"A second feature is the dissolving shutter or dowser. This operates by a movable spindle with spring attachment, holding it in proper position when open or closed. This shutter is a great convenience to the operator, as it enables him to close it and to adjust his lamp (by throwing in the switch, allowing the light to burn a few moments to produce the proper arc), then to operate the mechanism, lifting the shutter with the left hand [Opening the dowser is meant—F.H.R.] at the same time. Besides being a great convenience to the operator, this shutter is a safeguard against setting fire to the film."

Lamp illustrated in catalog of 1908, about the time the dowser was introduced.

This makes queer reading to men of today, but it does seem to establish very closely the time when the dowser first came into use. I can well remember that no such "new-fangled" contraption was in use at least as late as 1907. The lateral adjustment alluded to was to permit sliding the whole lamphouse over to the left several inches to provide for projection of slides through a stereopticon lens mounted on the left side of the projector mechanism. This was rather important then, when illustrated songs were almost invariably a part of motion picture theatre programs.

The First High-Intensity

First of the major improvements came when, along about 1912, the late Samuel "Roxy" Rothafel, then managing director of the Capitol theatre, in New York, installed two high-intensity arcs. All moviedom was agog over that experiment. It proved highly successful but too costly in operation for any but the deluxe theatres. White light did not become available to the average theatre until the introduction of the "Suprex" carbon arc in the early '30's. But the small theatre, with necessarily limited patronage, hence compelled to watch every penny of expense, still was the goat.

Improvement, has continued, however, until today the smallest theatre, too, may have snow-white projection light of sufficient power to illuminate its smaller screen at the average of 10-foot candles required for proper showing of colored pictures.

SOUND CONTROL BY ARCHITECTURAL FORM

WHITNEY THEATRE, Hamden, Conn.

Jacob Weinstein and Ben Schlanger, Architects

LOUNGE: Finished in Salubra wall paper, carpeted with Alexander Smith broadloom.

■ Combining in its auditorium treatment, the functions of lighting, vision and acoustics as an integral basis of design, the Whitney theatre in Hamden, Conn., is particularly interesting for its use of acoustical forms and its slight floor pitch. Hamden is an outlying residential section of New Haven, and the Whitney is one of two theatres operated in this area by Maurice and Meyer Whitney, who have yet another house under construction. The front is of simple design with facing in Pittsburgh architectural glass of a cream color, with red striping, above the marquee, and blue, with marble-like veining, at the left of this area, and at one side the name of the theatre has been sandblasted into the glass. The marquee carries Wagner silhouette attraction boards and trim and name letters are lighted in neon.

The interior is finished throughout in painted hard plaster, except for trim here and there in Tekko and Salubra wall papers. The floor plans are shown in accompanying drawings. Construction is of brick and steel.

SEATING: Both photographs and longitudinal section (below) indicate the relative flatness of the auditorium and mezzanine, or balcony, floors. The mezzanine seating is arranged on a non-stagger plan, and the main floor seating is arranged on both a stagger and non-stagger. Only eight rows out of 28 are staggered. These start at the twelfth row. All obstruction of vision of the screen by persons seated in the row ahead or in any other row is avoided. The maximum floor slope on the main floor is in the downward portion, amounting to about 2 feet. The upward or reverse portion of the slope amounts only to about 12 inches. The rate of pitch in the floor slope is changed at every second row in the staggered rows, and at every row in the non-staggered rows. The modified floor slopes of the main floor have made it possible to keep the mezzanine seating platforms no more than an average of $7\frac{1}{2}$" above one another. There are no intermediate steppings between platforms. The modified floor slopes of the main floor also has resulted in a screen position, vertically, calculated to prevent any feeling of bending forward to see picture from the upper level. The Whitney has a capacity of approximately 900 chairs, of which about 200 are on the mezzanine level. The chairs are of the American Seating Company's Bodiform type.

ACOUSTICS: The auditorium is designed to control sound purely by its size and by the shape of interior surfaces. No acoustical materials are used on the wall or ceiling surfaces. The size, or cubic-foot volume of the auditorium, combined with its shape, has been planned in such a manner that the reverberation time is held within desirable limits primarily by the absorption of the chairs, aisle carpeting, and the audience. In order to control the destination and dispersion of sound reflections, the side walls are designed in a series of horizontal angular forms which vary in size and in degree of projection from the vertical wall. These angles are planned to eliminate multiple reflections between the side walls and to prevent other objectionable reflections from reaching the audience. The area of the balcony rear wall is reduced by sloping the ceiling at the rear. The portion of the rear wall which is exposed to sound incidence is convexly rounded in such a manner as to disperse reflections which might produce echoes. The balcony fascia is also designed for sound dispersion in angular forms, consisting in two horizontal splays, or tilted panels, in the recesses of which are light sources, and the underbalcony ceiling has a slight downward slope toward the back to strengthen the sound level under the balcony. The ceiling consists of a series of segmentally designed splays which co-ordinate with the wall forms to control both direction and diffusion of sound.

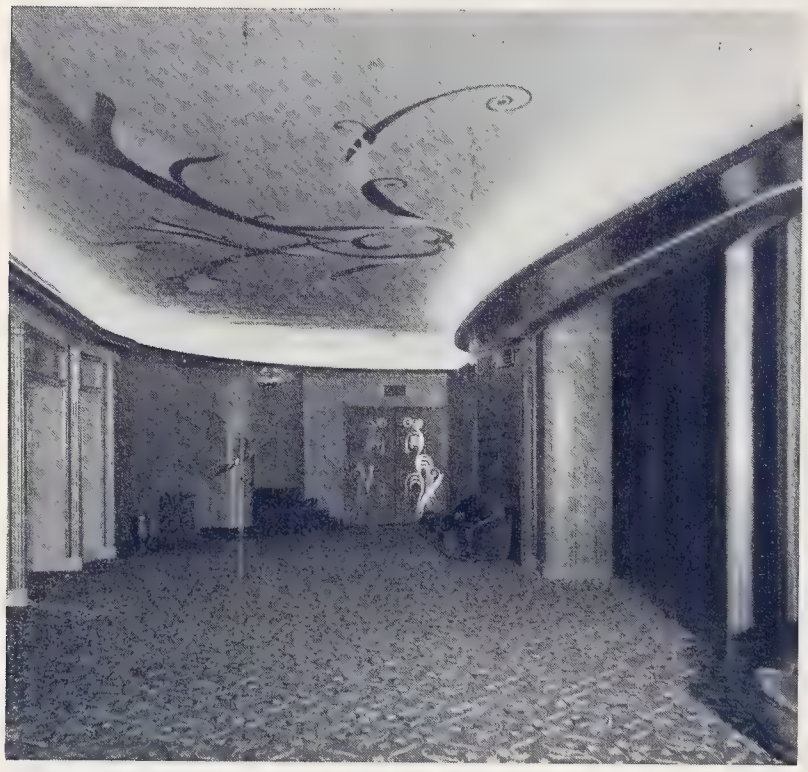
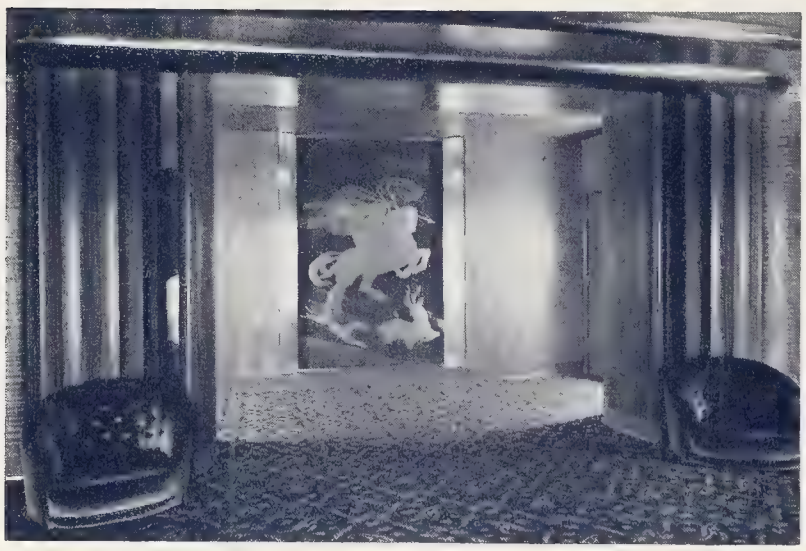
SECTION: Auditorium side wall.



LIGHTING: The Whitney lighting is all of the direct concealed type. When pictures are not being projected, the bulk of the lighting is from a concealed cove in the fascia of the mezzanine. While these lights are not visible to the audience, they hold such a position as to enable them to light almost the entire surfaces of the auditorium. For lighting over and under the mezzanine seating, lamps are concealed in small pockets in the ceilings, a sort of multiple downlighting of simple small units all placed where they are not visible to the audience. During the picture projection period, controlled re-reflected light from the projected picture is the main source of light. While the wall areas, some covered with wall paper, others painted, are not highly reflective, the ceiling is painted a very light shade of beige color, and the groovings in the ceiling plastering re-reflect the screen light directly downward instead of at a glancing angle, which would send annoying screen light reflections into the eyes of the audience. Small concealed and shielded emergency lights are built into one of the side wall projections. The base finish throughout is hard white smooth plaster; a greater portion of the auditorium ceiling is of run plaster groovings designed to control both screen light reflection and high-frequency sound reflection.

The narrowness of the ceiling steppings from which air is introduced into the auditorium demanded diffusers of special design, and Agitair outlets were adapted to these locations (see description of this type of diffuser on page 27). Air-conditioning of the Whitney provides cooling entirely by General Electric compressors, supplying 60 tons of refrigeration.



Projection equipment includes two Simplex E-7 projectors, Peerless Magnarc lamps supplied by Hertner motor-generator, and RCA sound system.

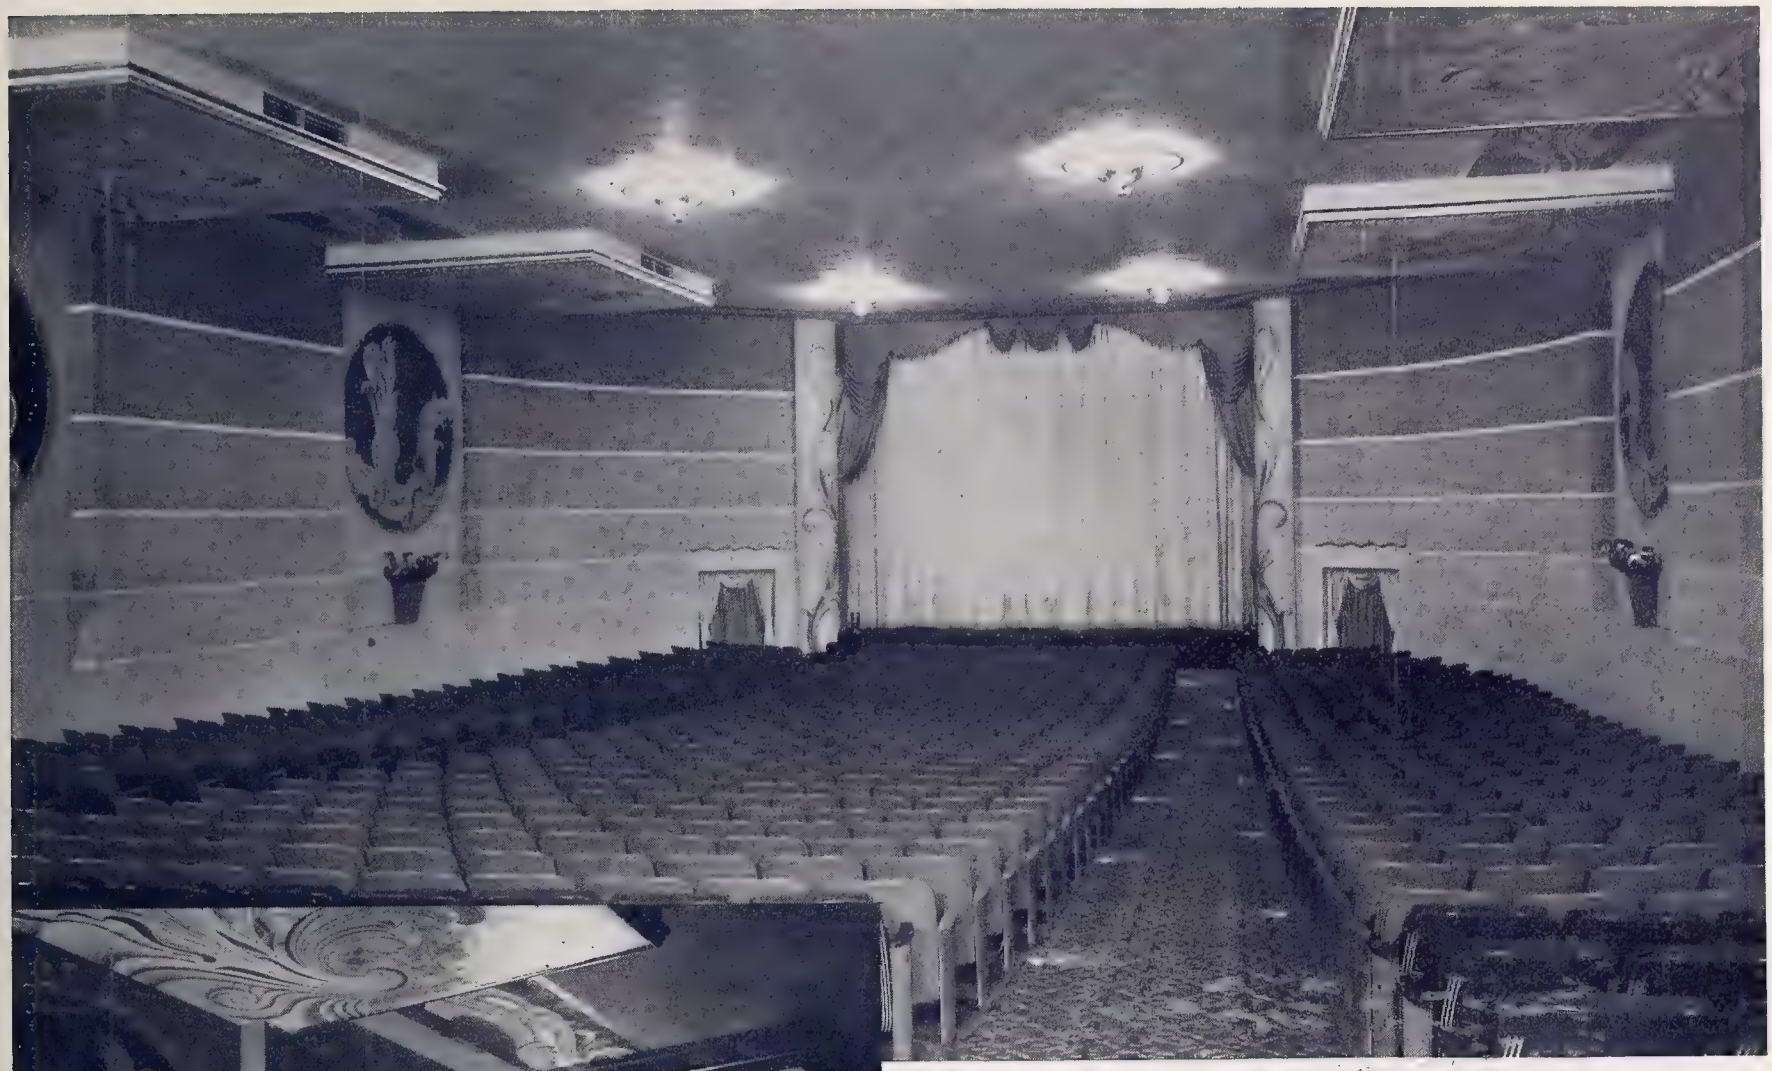
LUMINOUS DECORATION

FOYER AND (below) ENTRANCE TO AUDITORIUM



TOWER THEATRE, Fresno, Calif.

S. Charles Lee, Architect

■ The Tower theatre in Fresno, Calif., is one of several California houses in which "black light" decoration has been used. The theatre, a Fox West Coast property, is a neighborhood operation in a city of 60,000. The project embraces considerable commercial space (see floor plan) in addition to the 1,000-seat theatre, and adjoining the building is a paved parking lot accommodating 200 automobiles. Since the street intersection approached at an angle, a corner entrance was developed, making the marquee signs visible from every direction of the traffic flow. The building is faced in cement plaster painted a light cream, and the low front is dominated by a tall tower marking the location of the theatre, with little or no obstruction to vision, for miles around. The vestibule, designed with the marquee, as a continuation of the sidewalk area, has an expansive opening of 50 feet, with the box office, correspondingly shaped, at the center. This is trimmed with neon troughs. Poster cases are staggered for clear vision from the sidewalk. Both marquee and tower are brilliantly lighted in neon combining white and cerise, while the tower is topped by a ball built of projecting prongs of vari-colored neon. In the daytime, these prongs are barely visible, the ball appearing as round; at night the prongs of neon take shape, scintillating on a flasher. The tower rises to a height of 80 feet above the street.

FOYER AND LOUNGES: Entrance from the vestibule is directly into a spacious, carpeted foyer treated, as is the entire interior, in a modern baroque style, colorful and expressing fantasy. Walls are finished in Golden Narra wood, while pilasters and columns are of black walnut, and columnettes are painted gold. The pilaster ceiling is finished in blue, trimmed with gold, and is lighted by pink and white neon. On the axis of the entrance the foyer opens into a shielded approach to the auditorium, which is entered from either side of this central passageway. On entering this area the patron faces a carved glass panel set in an aluminum frame and lighted from the sides. . . . All of the lounges are located on a mezzanine level, a main lounge opening into a women's cosmetic room and giving access to men's toilet. The outer wall of the main lounge is built of glass block, which provides natural light during the day and is at night illuminated on the outside by floodlights on the roof of the marquee. Other walls are tinted blue, while the ceiling is rose. Lighting is by white metal fixtures, and furnishings have blonde wood frames and turquoise blue fabrics.

AUDITORIUM: The auditorium, with a color scheme of blue gradating from light near the floor to dark at the ceiling, is finished in tinted plasted except for projecting sidewall panels, the underside of which is of Masonite boards applied over acoustic material. These panels are furred down from the ceiling and are decorated in silver and with modernized floral ornamentation executed in luminescent paint for "black-light" effects during picture projection. The ornamentation is done in red, blue and gold on a silver field and the ornament also appears red, blue and gold under the ultraviolet energy of the "black light" sources. The decoration was first painted in these colors in regular paint, the same colors were applied in luminescent paint. Fluorescence is produced by near-ultraviolet equipment concealed in urns below the panels. Each urn contains three 100-watt General Electric "black light" sources together with the necessary transformers. This equipment was installed by the Keese Engineering Company. The architect, S. Charles Lee; R. H. McCullough of Fox West Coast Theatres; and Walter Bantau designed and engineered the "black light" ornamental scheme. (In the accompanying photograph showing the "black light" illumination of the luminous decorations, light from the urns appears; this is an effect due to the sensitivity of photographic film, whereas actually only the glow of the decorations appear to the eye.) The side walls are finished in Acoustite. The rear wall is designed in tilted sections to control sound reflection. The ceiling, which is of hard plaster, is tinted lemon yellow, and for general house lighting a ring of neon is concealed around the outside of lunettes in the ceiling, while inside the lunettes is concealed lighting in three colors. Aisle carpeting, as well as the carpting throughout the theatre, is burgundy with a pattern in yellow and gold, while the stage and exit drapes are blue and gold. . . . Seating is in a four-aisle scheme with two styles of American chairs, one forming a loge section across the rear. This section is divided from the other rows by a Lucite rod lighted from below the floor with the word "Loge" etched thereon. The floor slope includes an upward pitch extending forward from the third row.

The entire theatre is air-conditioned, with cooling by a York refrigerating plant located at one side of the building at the stage end. Auditorium outlets are at edges of the ceiling panels.

LAKE THEATRE
Painesville, Ohio

GEORGE A. EBELING, Architect

FORWARD SECTION OF FOYER.

VIEW OF FOYER FROM STANDEE AREA.

■ Although Painesville, where the new Lake theatre is located, is not considered a suburb of Cleveland, the thirty miles distance between the two cities is so improved with transportation facilities that the majority of the inhabitants make frequent trips to Cleveland for business, amusement and social activities. Many Painesville residents have their businesses in Cleveland and consequently commute daily. The owners, J. H. Shulman and A. G. Schwartz, who had operated two theatres in Painesville for ten years, therefore wanted a theatre distinctly urban. The "L" plan of the theatre provides an interior with large areas alloted to vestibule, lobby, offices, men's lounge and foyer (see floor plan). The lobby, which is 26 x 50 feet, is done entirely in aluminum, and blue, blue gray and gray velour, with peach color in radiating bands on the ceiling. The cornice or ceiling mold of the lobby is partly done with aluminum leaf, glazed down to a partially reflective surface. The balance of the cornice is a deep peach color. The bands of velour on the walls are shaded from a blue gray to a light gray at the top, and the wainscot is deep blue leatherette. The doors between the lobby and foyer are likewise covered with deep blue leatherette. The foyer has a minimum depth of 26 feet. The walls are covered with powder blue velour with heavy seam covers of the same material and color. A festooned gold rope with tassels is effectively used as a suggested cornice around the walls of the foyer. The woodwork and ceiling are enameled in a medium ivory. Along the walls of the foyer are built-in, bleached maple benches, following the curves of the foyer walls. The benches are upholstered in ivory leather, and a candy stand is made to match the benches in color. A lounge alcoved off the foyer is done in red, gold and silver damask, with woodwork in ivory enamel. At the back of the salon is a large mantel with electric fireplace. The mantel front and shelf are black structural glass.

Auditorium: The auditorium seats approximately 1,200 on a single floor, with the seating separated into forward and rear sections by a middle cross-aisle. The auditorium has powder blue velour on the walls, while the ceiling is of buff-tinted plaster with concentric arcs decorated with modern ornament in pastel colors. The side walls are divided into panels by moulded wood pilasters. These pilasters are arcs of circles in plan and their projection from the wall is increased as the pilasters extend upward, culminating in a flared fluted cap, concealing the auditorium's lighting. In addition to the lights concealed behind the pilaster caps, there are six semi-indirect lighting fixtures, extending through the air diffusers. The walls are decorated with modernized Greek female figures, silhouetted against the blue velour. Combined with the figures are corner ornaments suggesting panels, also a silhouetted painted frieze, running around the entire auditorium, except across the proscenium. The figures, corner ornaments and frieze are painted on heavy canvas, the shades and shadows slightly mottled with a light shade of buff paint, then glued on the velour.

The Lake is air-conditioned, employing storage refrigeration and one 25-ton compressor.

■ An unusual provision in the front treatment of Bart Dattola's Dattola theatre in Tarentum, Pa., consists in a ticket booth on either side of the entrance doors. The front of the Dattola, recently installed by the Artkraft Sign Company, Lima, Ohio, is entirely of porcelain enamel. The finish is of gray, red and white ripple. The vertical sign, which is designed integrally with the Artkraft marquee, is also of ripple porcelain enamel; maroon with white letters and stripes. Attraction panels are an integral part of the marque construction, using Artkraft silhouette letters. The marquee is of maroon ripple porcelain enamel with green stripes. Illumination is by 102 fifteen-watt white lamps for the soffit, 144 six-watt yellow lamps for border, and 68 twenty-five-watt white lamps for the attraction panels. Artkraft poster frames are of extruded aluminum.

Fluorescent carpeting as installed in two theatres . . .

Lighting Fluorescent Carpeting

• Offering authoritative counsel on equipment and its arrangement for effective use of self-luminous floor coverings in auditoriums—the second article of a series on what the theatreman needs to know about "black light"

By C. M. CUTLER and H. J. CHANON

SELF-LUMINOUS carpet, in addition to its decorative effect, is of immediate interest to the theatre owner as a means of traffic, or directional, lighting. Such application expands the showman's "bag of tricks" for arousing patrons' interest and is the most "intriguing" because it serves the utilitarian purpose so admirably. Carpet glowing without the source of energy being obvious, creates a sense of mystery that fascinates the patron.

In the present method of aisle lighting from low-wattage filament lamps recessed in the seats, very little attempt is made to provide uniform illumination on the aisle carpet. Instead, successive spots of light serve as markers.

In one of the first fluorescent carpet installations, the 2½-watt Argon Glow lamp, located in regular aisle lights, was employed as the energizing source. This lamp operates without a transformer and is, therefore, a convenient source, since it can be used in a regular filament-lamp socket on standard lighting circuits. Unfortunately, the near-ultraviolet energy produced by glow lamps of this rating is of too low an order to be satisfactory. Furthermore, the size of the electrodes in the lamp is relatively large and accurate control of light is not practical.

It is a natural inclination to locate the energizing sources in conventional aisle lights so as to confine the source of radiation below eye level; however, there is at present no practical source of near-ultraviolet of the right output and physical dimensions to fit into seating aisle standards and illuminate uniformly.

The problem then becomes one of finding some other method which gives satisfactory results employing available light sources in an efficient and effective manner. First, from the viewpoint of planning an installation it is well to remember that, although the energy produced by "black light" sources is invisible until converted to visible light by fluorescent materials, it obeys the same laws as does the energy produced by filament or fluorescent lamps. In this respect, the theatre operator and designer need only apply his present knowledge of lighting practice.

For example, if an ordinary light source produces a certain illumination on a surface 10 feet away, the illumination at 20 feet would be only one-fourth that at 10 feet. This is the inverse square law which applies to "black light" energy and the resultant brightness of fluorescing surfaces in exactly the same way.

The "Downlight" Method

Higher degrees of contrast can be obtained with fluorescent materials than with non-fluorescent materials. In the latter case, the degree of contrast is limited by the reflection factors of the materials employed. Furthermore, the visible light from the "black light" source is confined to a deep violet of very low value, whereas the fluorescent material glows in rich color as though it were luminous from within.

In order to use the energy most efficiently, it is desirable to confine it as much as practicable to the fluorescent carpet or other treated areas. This suggests the use of downlighting equipment recessed in or suspended from the ceiling of the auditorium. The sketch in Figure 1 shows a cross-section of a typical theatre auditorium with equipment placed directly over the aisles. When the near-ultraviolet energy is kept from the seating area, one avoids fluorescence of eyeballs, tinted eyeglasses, teeth, hair preparations, etc.; thus there is no occasion for offense or embarrassment on the part of patrons.

In actual practice, it is not possible to confine entirely the energy in the beam to the aisle proper (Figure 1). On the other hand, the atmosphere of the theatre would be distinctly unpleasant, the picture would be viewed with much less comfort, and a general haze would seem to pervade the place, if some general illumination were not provided. This may be supplied from conventional lighting arrangements, or in part from fluorescent decorations on ceiling and walls. With well designed concentrating equipment (Figures 2 and 3), the effect of the small amount of near-ultraviolet energy which spills into the seats flanking the aisle is satisfactorily counteracted by this general illumination.

A reflector of parabolic contour has the property of collecting light from a source at the focus and redirecting it into a concentrated beam (in the case of the paraboloid), or into a thin wedge (in the case of a parabolic trough). A concentrated beam would be applicable from above only if units were installed at very close spacing. This spacing can be increased by directing the beam through a prismatic lens, which spreads the light along the aisle, but not crosswise. Such a prism glass is included in Figure 2.

On the other hand, a parabolic trough directs the light to a rectangular area of greater relative length without the intervention of any spreading glass. This is the method that has been employed in Figure 3.

Two Types of Lamps

The lamp included in Figure 2 is of the capillary mercury type (100-watt Mazda lamp CH-4) with integral reflector of paraboloidal form. A Corning No. 587 filter screens out the visible radiation. The energy absorbed is very considerable and it is therefore recommended that a coarse mesh wire screen be included below the filter as protection in the event of glass failure. For fanning out the radiation along the aisle it is desirable to select prism glass which directs more of the rays forward than back.

The sketch suggests mounting the lighting equipment and transformer in a ceiling recess finished with plaster ring. This construction affords simple maintenance. inasmuch as the reflector and lamp can be lifted out for servicing.

Where it is not feasible to use a ceiling recess, the lighting unit may project from the ceiling, with the transformer placed ahead of it so as to be out of the view of the patrons of the theatre.

In Figure 3, the source is identical with that in Figure 2, except that it is not incorporated in a projector bulb. Instead, the lamp is so placed in a separate parabolic trough that it lies in the focal axis. By placing it backward in the trough the light is directed predominantly forward, thus providing greater shielding of the audience from both the ultraviolet, and the small amount of visible violet light.

Spacing of Lamps

The theatre operator and designer is primarily interested in how many units must be used and what spacing must be employed to energize the carpet satisfactorily. In order to specify the energy requirements, it is necessary to know (1) the efficiency of the material in converting near-ultraviolet energy to visible light, (2) the energy distribution of the downlighting equipment, and (3) the level of general brightness used when viewing the picture presentation. Other factors, such as permanence of the fluorescent dyes, maintenance of the equipment, and maintenance of the output of the light sources themselves, must be considered as in the case of any lighting problem.

Influence of Pattern

Tests of response have been made on three types of fluorescent carpet manufactured by the Alexander Smith & Sons Carpet Company. In Figure 5 their appearance is indicated when illuminated with visible light and with "black light." Since different colors are employed to make up the patterns, certain parts of the rug carpet naturally will be brighter than others. The brightest areas, particularly if they represent a considerable percentage of the total area, determine the amount of energy required. Patterns A and C in Figure 5, have approximately the same general brightness when energized with a standard source, whereas pattern B is fully 50% higher in brightness.

Experiments in an auditorium, with equipments of the type suggested in Figures 2 and 3, and with carpet types A and C, furnished the data on spacing for the

The photograph of the carpet was made with no other illumination than the Westinghouse ultra-violet lights overhead. Yet the beams of these lights are invisible . . . and the carpet itself seems to be illuminated, giving off a beautiful and magical glow of an intensity more than ample for complete visibility underfoot.

NOTE: Spacings marked with an asterisk can be doubled if twin units are employed at each location. This may be desirable in some architectural and decorative treatments.

For ceiling heights below 20 feet, such under the balcony in the auditorium, an EH-4 Mazda H-ood (mercury) lamp can be substituted for the type CH-4 lamp illustrated in Figure 2. This lamp as a wider distribution of energy than the CH-4 type, and the concentration directly under the lamp is less. This characteristic avoids a bright spot directly under the fixture. In general, a ratio of spacing to mounting height of 1-to-1 will result in satisfactory brightness uniformity.

The above suggestions for downlighting fluorescent carpet do not cover all effective equipments and methods. Satisfactory carpet brightness has been reported in several theatres where the only energy striking the carpet came, merely incidentally, from the mercury units directed at side wall or ceiling murals treated with fluorescent paints. However, where no use of fluorescence is contemplated otherwise than in the carpet, the downlighting systems suggested, or other designs which incorporate close control, will be found most efficient.

CARPET Selection & maintenance

Foyer and lounge floors, and stairways, are always conspicuous—keep them well groomed.

Combining Solid-Color with Pattern Carpeting

• A consideration of possible tricks to meet special conditions of floor plan and related peculiarities of interior treatment

WHAT facilitates the job of selecting furnishings for an establishment in which furnishings are an important commercial factor, as they are in theatres, is knowledge of what the market affords. Buildings are not designed around furnishings; interior accessories have to be adapted to the finished structure, the forms and style of which are determined primarily by dimensions, site and class of clientele. Thus arises a certain number of theatres which present, upon arrival at the furnishing stage, problems which are not solved most effectively by the usual methods.

The extent to which carpeting enters into the realization of a successful interior scheme, makes it a means of dealing with those special situations arising from peculiar dictates of structural form and dimensions. For example, the theatre in which the site has compelled an especially long lobby and foyer area, or the use of a foyer for both traffic and lounge facilities. There are any number of such special conditions which really require, if one is anxious to achieve the most effective result, careful study of the influence of carpeting.

Conditions Need Study

In these situations, dismissal of the chore of selecting carpeting by merely choosing what seems to be an interesting pattern and color scheme, then applying it to the whole house indiscriminately, is not to deal with the real problem, but rather to evade it. The question is: Does this pattern and color scheme, however interesting it may be in itself, answer your specific needs, meet the peculiar conditions of your theatre?

A large percentage of theatres are well adapted to the use of a single style of carpet throughout; others need a different treatment in some areas. It is in the latter group that a combination of solid-color and patterned carpeting often supplies the answer.

As an example of conditions that sometimes have to be met, Figure 1 shows a floor plan with lounge area opening off one side of a foyer, the dimensions of which make it pretty strictly confined to traffic service. In the Whitney theatre in Hamden, Conn., having a similar relationship of lounge and foyer (see pages 11 to 13), patterned carpeting is used in the foyer, and broadloom in the lounge. This could be reversed, however, as indicated in Figure 1, with the foyer having patent-back broadloom, such as Bigelow-Sanford Lokweave and Chase Seamloc, in the foyer, made up in a sectional arrangement to give a directional effect; and with the lounge carpeted, more ornamentally, in a pattern.

The possibilities of directional effect in patent-back broadloom carpeting are of practical interest in connection with many theatre floor plans, but this utilitarian function does not by any means express the limits of its value. This type of carpeting consisting in broadloom sections cemented to a backing, can be ornamented with cut-outs emblems and other decorative devices; it also can employ the very same sectional treatment used in achieving a directional effect, to emphasize form.

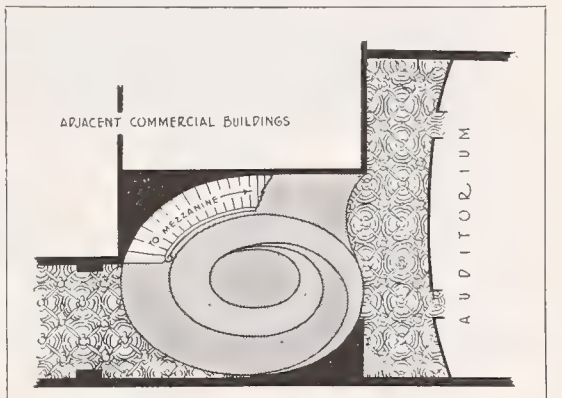

FIGURE 2

Influence on Form

Such application is indicated in Figure 2. Here, by way of example, is a lobby practically continuous, except for doors, with a foyer, making a rather long and narrow entrance area, imposed on the designer by commercial properties adjoining the site. This area opens up into a foyer which, to effect an interesting approach to the auditorium, the designer chooses to make circular, forming a rotunda substantially two stories high, with a stairway curving up to a mezzanine balcony. The rise in height takes place just ahead of the stairway; the lobby-foyer entrance area, has a normal one-story ceiling.

In keeping with the effect desired, the circular foyer or rotunda is ornately treated, with paneled or mirrored walls, let us say, a moulded ceiling, perhaps suspending a chandelier, and an ornamental stairway and mezzanine balcony; at the same time, the low-ceilinged, narrow entrance area is simply designed, with part of it having display cases along the walls. The ornate wall and ceiling and stairway treatment of the foyer proper suggests a floor more or less plain, while the general severity of the walls and ceiling of the entrance area suggests a patterned floor.

Broadloom is well adapted to the main part of the foyer, and in the patent-back type of carpeting, it can be readily made up in curved stripings to give the circular or oval effect of the foyer emphasis, which it more or less needs because, in actual structural formation, the oval area straightens out opposite the stairway to become part of the long, narrow entrance area.

Taking Stock of Your Air-Conditioning Investment

• Offering some thoughts for the consideration of those who installed air-conditioning this year and those who didn't and now wish they had

By J. T. KNIGHT, JR.

AS WE GET further into the warm season, the theatre operator without air-conditioning begins to wonder whether it was a mistake not to have installed it, while the one who did install it this year has been having some new experiences with increased fixed charges. Those two situations are typical of each year.

To the theatre owner, air-conditioning really should be regarded as a sort of insurance—not the kind of insurance sold by an insurance company, but business insurance just the same.

It insures more business, provided he has real entertainment value in his pictures. . . . It insures frequent attendance by people who want relief from the heat, even though the entertainment value of his pictures is not all that is to be desired. So, as insurance of more business, of placing the theatre in a better position to compete with other forms of entertainment, air-conditioning is definitely justified.

Without air-conditioning, a heavy handicap is placed upon the entertainment value of any picture during the warm months for entertainment value sufficient to overcome physical discomfort is just too much to expect from even the best pictures.

The "Growing" Minority

The theatre owner who has installed air-conditioning and is operating it his first season, is often in for both praise and criticism—the natural development ills of progress. His patrons who can now view pictures in greater comfort may still complain and criticize. These complaints, however, really represent managerial troubles. The answer or solution to such troubles is:

First, to know your plant; and second, to know more about air-conditioning.

Repeated calls for a service man and transmitting the complaints to the contractor who installed the job is not the answer in the long run. The manager must know enough to sort out the complaints, discard those complaints without merit, and use the complaints that have merit as the foundation for changes in the arrangement of the equipment or the operating policy, or in the technique represented in the equipment arrangement.

Patron complaints resulting from air-conditioning are generally not specific in character—for instance, "It was too hot in the theatre," or "I was cold," or "It's drafty," etc. Such comments usually leave the manager out on a limb so far as knowing what to do about the conditions. If, in that particular instance, the manager or his staff has not kept reasonably accurate periodic data, then even the consulting engineer will have trouble in determining whether or not the complaint is justifiable.

Frequently the question has been asked, "If we can't expect to make all our people

...for Air Conditioning

Walt Disney did, too!

Entire new Studio-City enjoys cooling in summer and heating in winter by G-E. Now Pinocchio, Jiminy Cricket, Mickey Mouse and all the other famous Walt Disney characters are created in cool comfort...in the new Studio-City in the San Fernando Valley near Burbank, California. It's the first such studio-city to be completely air conditioned. And the Disney Engineers turned to G-E for the right equipment.

Complete Control. In the Animated Building one hundred per cent fresh air is conditioned and circulated. This fresh air supply is divided into two streams—one cooled, the other warmed. In circulation the hot and cold supplies are automatically blended to assure constant volume of air flow and correct room temperature. In this building alone there are 158 thermostatic control points.

A 1400 ton installation. In summer outside air is precooled by a 67° natural water supply. (In winter this same supply pre-heats the air). Therefore the operation of blowers, water circulators and refrigeration equipment is effected with but 1300 horsepower. The total cooling effect is over 1400 tons.

Some special problems. Cleanliness is particularly important in the Camera Building. A single particle of lint or dust might ruin a "frame." Floors are waxed; operators dressed in lintless material must pause in a "dedusting" chamber before entering.

Heat from the large lights in the Camera Building raises still another problem. Lights for a single camera produce as high as 240,000 Btu of heat each hour. (It would take 40,000 lbs. of ice a day to equalize this heat source.) Special exhaust hoods draw off part of this heat. The balance is easily handled by the Air Conditioning system.

The special needs of the large sound stages accommodating large groups of performers—then again a single performer—are met with full control plus quiet, even distribution of air.

Outside noise from planes using Union Air Terminal was another worry. Careful placing and sound baffling of air intakes, and acoustically treating ducts, walls and ceiling was the answer.

So...

The Disney Studio-City installation of G-E Heating and Air Conditioning is but another indication that no matter what your heating or cooling needs, G-E has the right equipment.

There is a size and type of General Electric Air Conditioning equipment to meet your needs—to give your patrons the comfort they demand—whether your theatre's seating capacity is small, medium or large.

comfortable, then what can we expect from our air-conditioning plant?" In the first place, you can expect that practically all your patrons will be more comfortable than they would be if you had no air-conditioning; and probably the majority will be completely comfortable.

Some Facts About People

A recent study made by Dr. W. J. McConnell and M. Spiegelman, an engineer, of New York, of the reaction of 745 clerks in the offices of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, shows some findings which in the writer's opinion would indicate a top or maximum degree of satisfaction which could reasonably be expected in a theatre installation. A report of this investigation was published in Heating, Piping and Air-Conditioning in May.

Men and Women

Some of the conclusions arrived at in the above study are interesting. The most satisfactory effective temperature for men was found to be about 1.2° cooler than for women. "In general, men are not as susceptible as women to discomfort, especially at extremes of temperature as recorded in this study. Even at the optimum temperatures for women, which differed somewhat from the optimum for men, men still registered a greater percentage of comfort votes than women. . . ."

Another interesting conclusion: "In the morning the most satisfactory Effective Temperature is about one degree higher than in the afternoon. The decrease in feeling of comfort from morning to the afternoon is accompanied by an increased feeling of warmth. This may perhaps be due to the effect of the mid-day meal."

Weather Variation

Further, "The most satisfactory temperatures for July, August and September show slight variations from one month to another."

Also, "No significant relationship between outdoor temperatures and indoor Effective Temperatures could be found. The conditions of the experiment were not adapted to determine such correlation, since the range of variation of indoor Effective Temperatures was limited. Although day-to-day changes in outdoor effective temperatures may be looked upon as a guide to day-to-day changes in indoor effective changes, the relation between the two is not so close that it can be depended upon for all occasions. . . .

"The greatest proportion of comfort votes from men, 77.8%, is found in the interval 68.6° to 68.9° Effective Temperature," and "for women a maximum of 65% comfort votes is recorded in the interval 69.8° to 70.1° Eff. Temp.

These findings are interesting to the owner of a theatre which is air-conditioned because they help him to appraise the performance of his plant.

To begin with, it is important to make a few comparisons of the air-conditioning loads in an office and a theatre. By occupancy load, we mean the number of people within the air-conditioned space. In the office, the occupancy load is relatively constant as compared to that of a theatre. The proportion of fresh air to total air handled is relatively smaller in an office than in a theatre. This air from the outside, or fresh air, is called "air for ventilation." Occupancy (people) and fresh air (for ventilation) constitute the major items in any office or theatre, and in both these instances the conditions are more serious in a theatre. It was for this reason that it was previously stated that the conclusions in the above outlined study can be taken as maximum for theatres.

Therefore, within the range of conditions most satisfactory for men and women, 77.8% of the men, and 65% of the women reported complete comfort.

From a Business Man—

Mr. Frank P. Ganucheau, manager of the American Bank Building in New Orleans, had this to say in a talk he made on the results of air-conditioning.

"There are certain individuals who cannot be converted [to air-conditioning] and insist that they do not want air-conditioning." This indicates that there is a small percentage of people who just don't want it and they are not going to like it and therefore won't be comfortable in an air-conditioned area. Well, there are some few people who won't like the swellest motion picture ever made. Such idiosyncracies must be expected.

Mr. Ganucheau continued, "There is only one group or class of people that objects to air-conditioning [remember he is talking about an office building] and that is the salesman or outside worker. You will find that salesmen or other outside workers who are in their offices only a comparatively small part of the day, will object to air-conditioning for the reason that, as a rule, they come into the building wet with perspiration. The individual who is wet with perspiration, when he enters the building, is uncomfortable for the first half-hour because the moisture is being removed at a very rapid rate. This individual will most probably not remain in the office more than an hour or two. It is a human failing to remember discomforts and to take all agreeable things for granted. Therefore, he forgets that he has been exceedingly comfortable for an hour or so and remembers only the first half-hour of discomfort!"

NO OTHER DEVICE IN THIS FIELD HAS EVER RECEIVED SUCH ENTHUSIASTIC AND IMMEDIATE ACCEPTANCE

Jacob Weinstein and Ben Schlanger, architects, and Paul D. Harrigan, air conditioning engineer, selected the type "R" Agitair for the Whitney Theatre, Hamden, Conn. Both appearance and performance are so satisfactory that another theatre for the same owner will soon be similarly equipped.

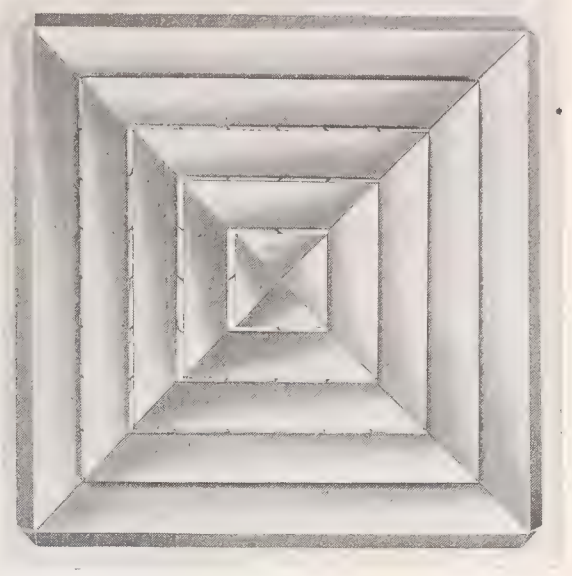
The above statement comes from a man who is not an air-conditioning engineer, but a layman whose observations may be logically associated with reactions of the public. And they describe exactly the problem of satisfactory air-conditioning of theatres. We have many patrons who come into our theatres in a hot, perspiring condition after a walk from parking their car or after a heavy evening meal and they certainly are not comfortable until their bodily conditions balance with the conditions inside the theatre.

Mr. Ganucheau further asked the question, "If you had it [air-conditioning of building] to do all over again, just what would you do?" And he answered:

First, "I would require two refrigerating machines instead of one, in order that in the beginning and end of the season I could operate the plant without fear of over-cooling."

Second, "I would be assured of ample reserves so far as air movement was concerned."

Here Mr. Ganucheau has emphasized two of the points that have so frequently been pointed out to theatre managers in these columns—and, I repeat, these are the recommendations of a business man, not of an engineer.



The buyer of air-conditioning and the manager of an air-conditioned theatre will never be entirely satisfied until he has a knowledge-basis for his expectancy of results. This means he must have knowledge of the plant, know how to operate it, then record the results, for his own guidance.

Air Diffusers Adapted to Varied Structural Needs

Air diffusers designed for a high degree of flexibility in application to structural as well as space conditions, have been developed by Air Devices, Inc., of New York. Various patterns are available in these diffusers, marketed under the name "Agitair," which can be obtained in types designed to deliver the air in one, two, three, or all four directions.

The directional effect, as to one way, or two or more up to four, is determined by the distribution of louvers, between which small vanes are inserted obliquely and so designed as to pass the air at an angle of 22½ degrees or less with the wall or ceiling. The small vanes are cited by the manufacturer as a means of providing a high state of turbulence to assure thorough mixing of the incoming with the room air.

Adapted to structural limitations, where the diffuser can be located in the center of the space it serves, it is shallow in depth (¾-inch) and is suited to either side wall or ceiling mounting (an installation of this type of diffuser in the Whitney theatre, Hamden, Conn., is pictured on page 12).

Four-way Agitair diffuser.

Available is a type of Agitair diffuser adapted to combination with fluorescent lighting equipment, while the regular types can be obtained in any dimensions, either square or rectangular.

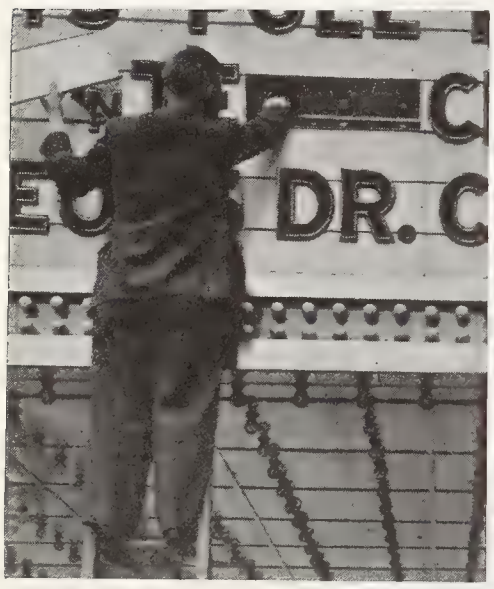
Recessed-Face Letters and Multiple-Unit Panel Frame



ATTRACTION advertising equipment manufactured by the Adler Silhouette Letter Company of Chicago, now includes a recessed-face silhouette letter and a frame permitting removal of single-line units of glass for relamping and cleaning. The letter may be had with the recessed face in color, instead of black, if desired.

The letters, which follow the general type-style of other Adler letters and are similarly of cast aluminum, are designed for size combinations, with mounting by means of L-shaped lug-bars cast with the letter at its rear; these set into chanelled panel bars and are spaced for interchangeability of letter heights. The panel bars are perforated for drainage.

Front view of a recessed-face letter, showing the outer reflective bevel and light-screen.

Letters and frames are designed for combinations of any sizes from 8 to 24 inches. The 6-inch letter is also available in this new series for use in narrow-gauge lines (bars spaced 5 instead of 7 inches).

Access to box is by lifting out (left) or raising small panel section.

Letters in all the sizes, which include 10-, 12- and 16-inch, have a forward-turned outside bevel, which is light-reflecting; light from the glass panel is shut out, however, from the face of the letter itself by the ridge of the recess.

Frame design, with construction of 18-8 stainless steel and groove-and-pin locking of sections, provides for removal of the panel glass in small units, each confined to a single line in height and a section in width. The purpose is to provide access to the interior of the lamp box for cleaning or relamping by relocation of a few letters at a time and raising or removing a lightweight section of glass. Each section is bound along its four outer edges by stainless steel.

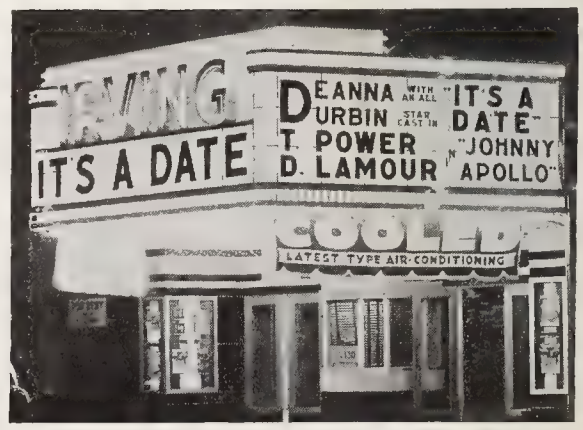
This feature is available in two types. In the simpler type, the glass section is lifted out of the frame; in the other, the section is hinged and may be merely swung out to give access to the sign box without removal; or it may be removed.

Frames with either the hinged or lift-out sections are marketed under the trade-name of "Remova-Panel," while the letter is referred to as of "Third Dimensional" type. Besides the screening of the panel light from the face of the letter, the manufacturer points to a protective effect of the raised edges surrounding the face of the letter, tending to reduce scratching of the latter in handling, while a two-tone effect is cited as being attained when the face is in color. The 10-, 16- and 24-inch letters are designed for mounting with alignment at the bottom.

Are you taking advantage of present-day interest in the news? BETTER THEATRES will have some suggestions in the August issue.

Newspaper Advertising Attention for Marquees

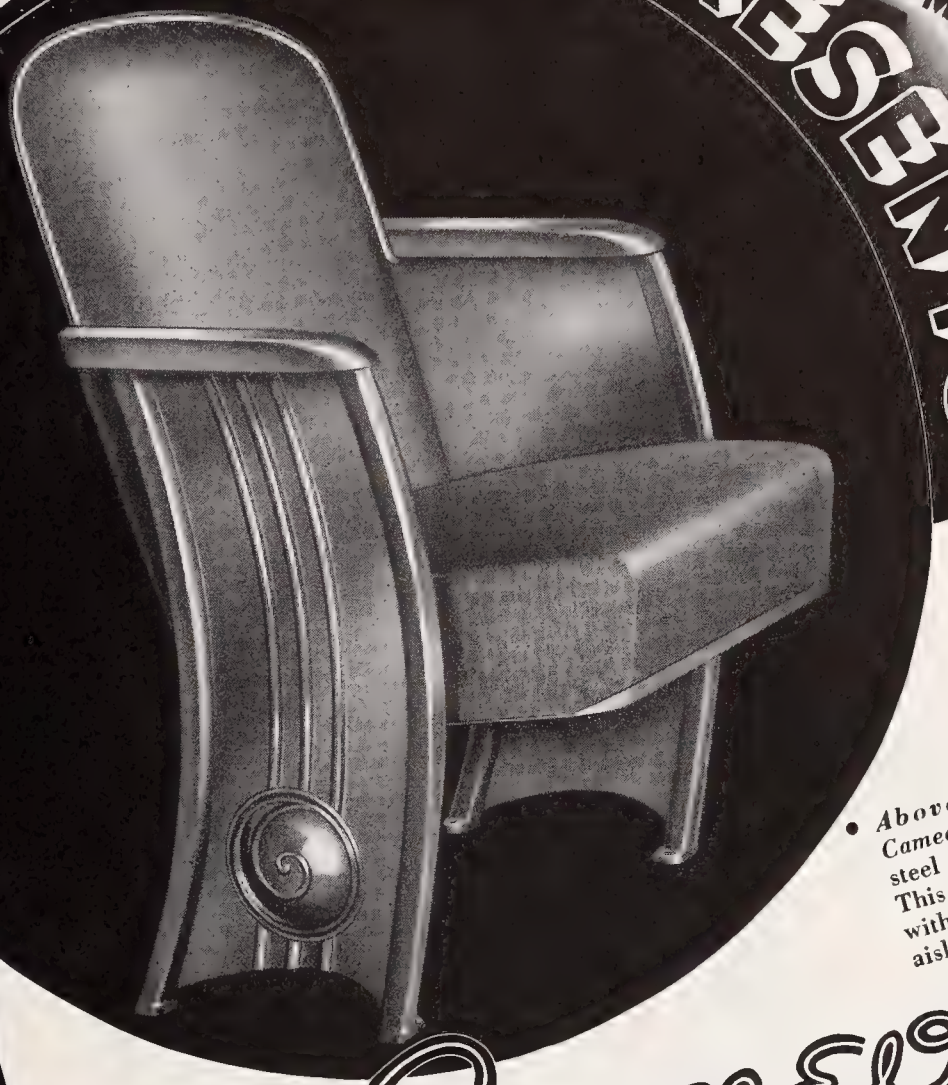
"WITH the increasing acceptance of multiple-line, silhouette-letter equipment, marquee layout now is to be regarded with the same typographical consideration given newspaper copy. Yet it is regrettably evident that theatremen who burn midnight oil to fashion ads with high eye-appeal are less concerned with the negative boxoffice impression made by the hastily assembled and visually monotonous announcement. . . .



"Since it is accepted that the first step in making a sale is to stop the passerby in front of the merchandise, it is equally true that the pulling power of marquee eye-appeal should have importantly to do with vending theatre wares."

—A-Mike Vogel, writing in Managers' Round Table, Motion Picture Herald of July 20.

THE USE AND ABUSE OF VALUABLE SPACE



■ The marquee of Irving theatre in Chicago effects practically in its entirety, a screen of light for silhouette-letter attraction advertising. Much of the possible selling value of such equipment is lost, however, in a display like that above, employing Wagner letters in one size only. Contrasted with this is the "typographical" arrangement below, using Wagner 10-, 12-, 24- and also 4-inch letters, to attain variety, selected copy values and greater legibility, and to take full advantage of panel area.

SEATING the auditorium

". . . no theatre can be better than its seating."

Cutting of Chair Fabrics: Its Significance and Control

HOW MUCH of a charge on seating maintenance costs is the tendency among boys to cut leatherette upholstery? What can be done to check the practice?

Every theatre operator is more or less acquainted with such vandalism; it is encountered at least to some extent in a fairly large percentage of theatres. But to what extent is the average exhibitor warranted in making it an important factor in the selection of the fabric for his seating?

It was to find authoritative answers to these questions that BETTER THEATRES recently made a survey of exhibitor opinion. The inquiry embraced both independent and "affiliated" circuits, and the replies represent a total of nearly 1,100 theatre properties in all types of communities. On one point all of those responding were unanimous:

Deliberate mutilation of auditorium chair fabric is a negligible factor in maintenance.

There was a difference of opinion as to the results of efforts to eradicate the mischief in theatres where, for some obscure local reason, it is a problem. But, rather surprisingly, no reply referred to it as more than a minor problem, "not serious enough," as J. H. Elder of the Interstate Circuit commented, "to elaborate on."

Shabbiness a Cause

Most of the officials or maintenance executives responding were content to dismiss this particular type of vandalism as a matter of no significance as a source of operating expense. A few commented further, however.

"We have had to recover more seats from cigarette burns where smoking is allowed than from cutting," added Frank Myers of Wometco Theatres. "In our Lincoln theatre in Miami Beach we have had only one seat slashed since it was opened five years ago. In the neighborhood houses where we have new seating, we find that the public appreciates it, but where the seating is old the children do sometimes cut the upholstery and also mar the backs of the chairs."

One of the added observations, by an independent exhibitor who doubtless would prefer to be quoted anonymously, was, in part: "The trouble with some exhibitors —yes, circuits, too— is they want the public to take better care of their theatres than they do themselves. . . . I could name some. . . ."

Getting Boys' Co-Operation

Of those commenting on the advisability of measures to check the mischief, such as screen messages at matinees or talks by the manager arranged with the co-operation of Boy Scout and similar organizations, several expressed belief that they might prove effective where vandalism was extreme, while others reported that they had actually been tried and had brought results.

"In the real tough neighborhoods," added Herman R. Maier of Warner Theatres, "our managers have tried organizing the youngsters so that they act as their own police and the behavior of the youngsters always improved when this was done."

Mr. Myers cited the practice, at Wometco Theatres' "Mickey Mouse Club" matinees, of having the manager address the children, when occasion arises, on the value of taking care of property, manly and ladylike behavior, etc., as marks of good citizenship. Such methods, plus high maintenance standards, are regarded by him as of much help in reducing abuses.

Mr. Elder was the lone dissenter. "We feel," he commented, "that calling vandalism to the attention of the youngsters might give them an idea—at least, some boy with a new knife—to cut the upholstery. It has been our experience that very few youngsters do damage the upholstery . . . and we believe the less said about the matter the better, generally."

Whipping Up a Cushion so That Patrons Sit on Air

FIRST A BATTER is made; this is poured into a beater and a few drops of jelling agent are added; then after the mixture is beaten thoroughly, it is poured into a pan and baked. When it is taken out, it looks like an angel food cake.

Thus in the language of cookery may be described the process observed at the Firestone Rubber Company's plant at Fall River, Mass. But the concoction that is whipped up is called "Airtex," this manufacturer's name for foamed latex cushion material.

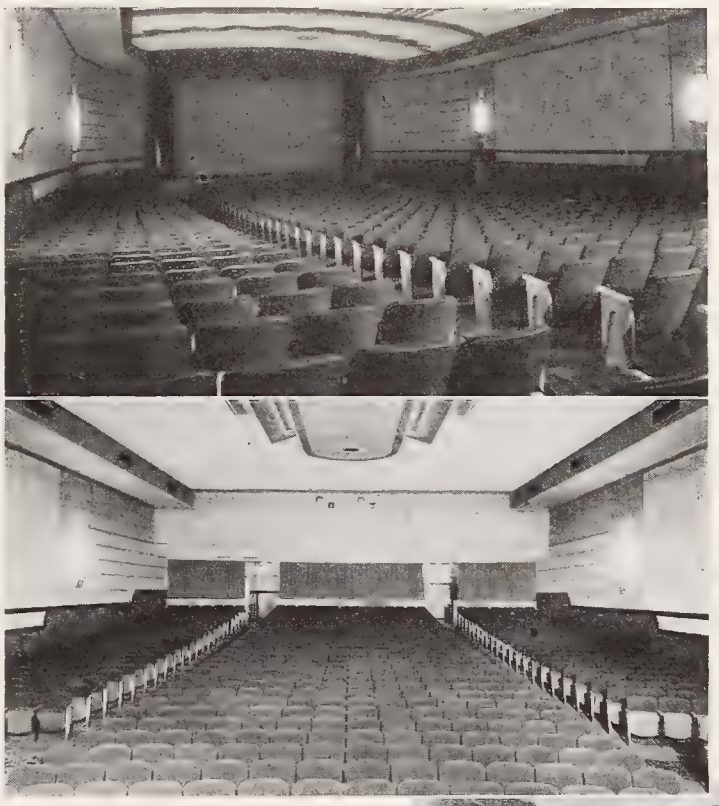
With increasing use of such material for theatre chair cushions as well as for bus

Illustrating the size of the cores of "Airtex" cushion. These extend from the bottom of the cushion, giving immediate outlet to the air cells throughout the mass of the foamed latex.

seats, household furniture, mattresses, etc., latex has become a word for the theatre man's vocabulary. Originally such cushions were loosely referred to as "rubber"; later, the word "sponge" got attached to the term. The new material is like neither ordinary rubber nor sponge rubber. It is of latex, a milky serum inside the bark of the rubber tree, and this is "whipped up" or foamed—hence the designation foamed latex, which is the proper one.

It is the foaming of the material in a beater which provides the specific type of resilience adapting it to seating. During the whipping process, air is forced into the mixture, and the jellied mass is filled with tiny air cells. In the manufacture of "Airtex" dependence is placed exclusively upon this forced introduction of air to obtain the desired foam effect.



The amount, or character, of the foaming is controlled according to the specific resilience desired. The requirements of theatre seating, as well as of bus seats, differ from those of, for example, home furniture. The moulding varies according to the application, with theatre chair cushions formed to the specifications of size and style. After moulding each cushion is washed, oven-dried and tested for its specified resilience.

Indicating the application of an "Airtex" cushion to a theatre chair—here as moulded to fit an American "Bodiform" seat. The cross-section shows the cores extending into the cushion.

Building Service of Columbus, the house will seat 1,000, and a feature of the treatment will be luminiscent ("black light") auditorium decoration. Reviewing the New D.C. Arc Lamps

WHEN THE low-voltage high-intensity, or "Suprex" carbon arc, lamp was introduced in the early '30's, only the smaller theatres remained as beyond the reach, normally, of the white projection light needed for the detailed projection of black-and-white pictures (which, with dialogue, had tended to increase in density), and absolutely demanded by color films. Developments in lamps during the past year, bringing an entirely new application of alternating current, and arc mechanisms designed for use of a new negative carbon, have taken the smaller theatres into the "white-light fold." Today, projection light is properly white; equipment that cannot supply it is definitely obsolete.

Elsewhere in this issue (page 9) the characteristics of the new direct-current, so-called "one-kilowatt" arc, produced by the "Orotip-C" negative in combination with "Suprex" type positive carbon, are described with respect to operation and costs. Following are reviewed, in alphabetical order, five of the lamps either specifically designed for, or adapted to, this type of arc. [Additionally, on page 40*, is described a new lamp, just placed on the market.*]

Ashcraft Suprex Type E

The lamp manufactured by the C. S. Ashcraft Manufacturing Company of Long Island City , N. Y., for the so-called "one kilowatt" high-intensity arc, is the Suprex Type E. Operated with a small arc gap and 6-mm. Orotip C and 7-mm. positive, it affords all the advantages of economical low-power high-intensity light. With dense prints, or when it is desired to enlarge the screen, the lamp can be adjusted for a larger trim and currents up to 50 amperes, to give low-voltage high-intensity ("Suprex" carbon arc) operation.

This flexibility of performance, which covers both the 40-ampere, 27-volt operating range, and the 45-50 ampere, 34-volt range, is inherent in the design of the inch reflector, has been designed with a speed of F/2.13, matching well with the new, faster projection lenses, and producing an over-all lamphouse and projector optical system that transmits maximum illumination to the screen.

The magnification ratio of the Suprex E—that is, the number of diameters to which the light source is magnified—has been calculated to avoid both under-magnification (which fails to fill the aperture and subjects the sides of the image to discoloration) and over-magnification, which wastes light on the cooling plate. A ratio of 6.6 magnification has been chosen as representing the ideal condition.

Operating controls have been grouped at the rear of the lamp, dowser handles and feed motor speed control at the front. The entire rear is built as a hinged door, giving accessibility to the interior for cleaning, etc. Viewing windows in the side door are oversize for easy visibility of the arc from any convenient angle.

Brenkert Senarc

Choice of carbon trims permits operation of the "one kilowatt" high-intensity lamp of the Brenkert Light Projection Company of Detroit at as little as 750 watts, which power is said to produce an illumination of 10-foot candles on an average-sized screen.

Brenkert Senarc lamphouse

Known as the Senarc, the lamp is designed to function either with 7-mm. x 6-mm. trim at 40 amperes; or 6-mm. x 5-mm. trim at 30-35 amperes. Light output is rated at 3,300 lumens at the lower current value, and at 4,300 lumens at the higher current.

The manufacturer declares that the lamp is constructed to enable "even the smallest theatre to project colored prints with true and natural tones of color." Operating costs for current and carbons are said to be from 11-16 cents per hour, according to local conditions.

Compactness, requiring a minimum of space, is achieved by placing the controls along the operating side of the lamp and the carbon feed motor (an external housing) at the front, under the dowser.

No power sources with an efficiency rated at 60% to 70% have been developed for this lamp. They are of three types; rectifiers, constant voltage generator working through a ballast resistor, and double generators of series type needing no ballast.

Mechanism of Brenkert Senarc.

For operation at 30 amperes these sources are said to draw approximately 1,300 watts from the power line, and 1,960 watts from the power line for 40-ampere operation.

The manufacturer points to the comparison of modern high-intensity 45-65 ampere lamps used in larger theatres to produce (at 5,000-6,200 lumens) an intensity of 10-foot candles on a larger screen at an operating cost of 22-32c per hour; and 10-foot candles on a 14-foot screen, at 3,300 lumens, produced by the Senarc at a cost of 11-16c per hour, with the light in both cases of an equal degree of whiteness.

Forest Universal Type

Low-wattage high-intensity illumination is afforded by the "universal trim" lamp marketed by Forest Manufacturing Corporation of Newark, which is designed to be adaptable, whenever screen size is enlarged to any trim or current that can be used with any mirror-type lamp.

The carbon holders are made to take carbons of any size. Positive and negative carbon feeds are completely independent, using a patented mechanical system which

● They don't miss a bet in getting over every bit of action there is in the film. And those color features! I never saw anything more natural in all my life.

You said it, Mr. Robinson! That fifty per cent extra light — real snow white light at that — does make a big difference. The fellows who designed this equipment did a swell job. It's real stuff from A to Z. What surprises me is how they are able to get so much light out of a one kilowatt arc. It's going to be a real pleasure to show pictures here from now on. I defy anyone to put any better pictures on the screen than we can in our little theatre.

That's the spirit, Jack! We can go to town with this new equipment. Our patrons have already noticed the improvement in our pictures. This investment is going to pay big dividends.

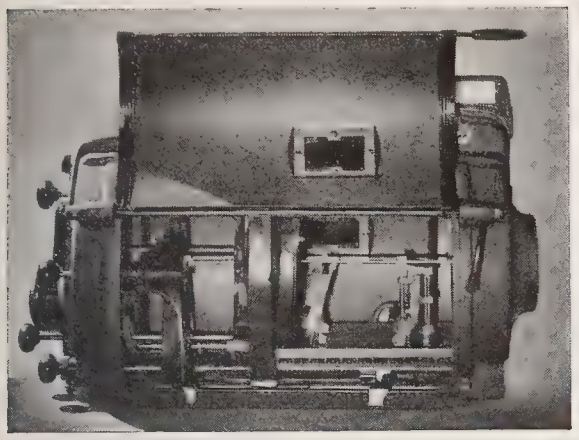
the magnetic field to secure greatest stability of flame under any condition of draft and any type of operation.



The carbon holders are constructed to give maximum use of the carbons without necessity of using carbon savers. Automatic stops are provided to prevent burning of the jaws or other injury to them in case too short a carbon should be used. Both positive and negative carbons are guided near the operating point.

Simplex "High"

The intermediate capacity high-intensity Simplex lamp distributed by the National Theatre Supply Company, is rated to deliver approximately 2,000 lumens of white light with operation at 27 volts, 40 amperes. Economy in operation is indicated not only by the low power ("one kilowatt") consumption, but by the slow rate of carbon feed, which is approximately 5.9 inches per hour for the positive, and 3.75 inches per hour for the negative.

To strike the arc it is only necessary to flip a simply-designed spring controlled contactor. The reflected flame is shown in upright position on a guide card at the top of the housing; it can, of course, also be viewed through dark-glass windows in either side door.

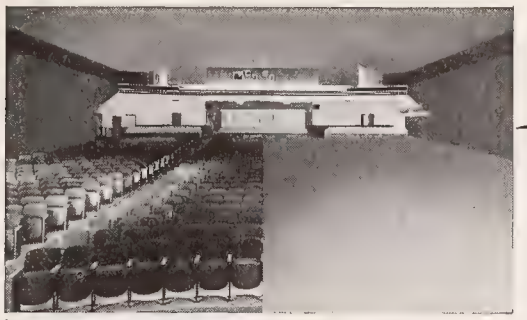
The lamp is sold as a standard unit with a rectifier specifically made to match its operating characteristics, which draws 1,940 watts from the a.c. line under normal operating conditions.

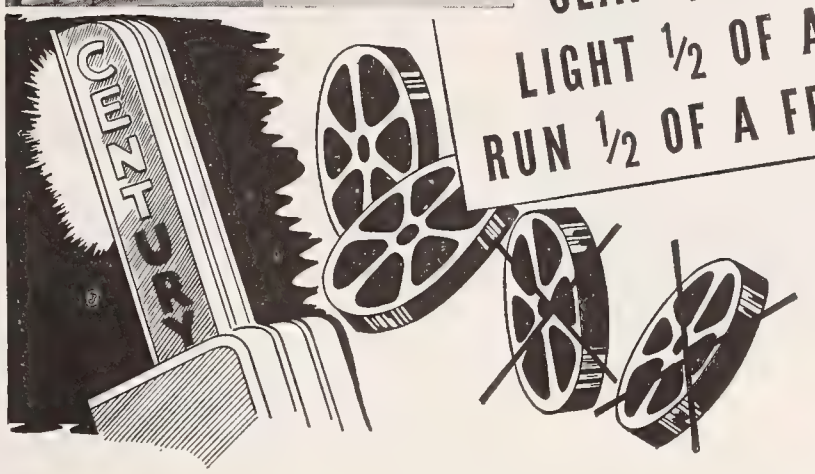
The magnetic field is strongly concentrated in the vicinity of the arc by use of a small ash tray of ferrous metal which is mounted immediately below the arc gap and causes lines of magnetic force to converge upon that location.



Automatic carbon feed is effected without use of relays by means of specially constructed motor which has a heavy-current control field directly in series with the arc. Lengthening of the arc gap as carbons burn away produces a decrease of current through that field, which in turn speeds up the motor in the same way that decrease of regulating field current speeds up any d.c. motor, and thus causes the carbons to feed faster. As the gap closes, the current through the regulating field grows stronger and the motor speed declines.

The lamp casing is compactly designed and modernly styled. Controls, except for the dowser controls, are conveniently grouped at the rear. A gap locator and carbon length guide is provided at the bottom of the housing.

Strong Utility



To meet the requirements of medium and small-size theatres for low-wattage high-intensity light sources, the Strong Electric Corporation of Toledo, has developed a 27-volt, 40-ampere lamp utilizing the 6-mm. Orotip C, and 7-mm. trim under conditions providing a high degree of stability in operation.

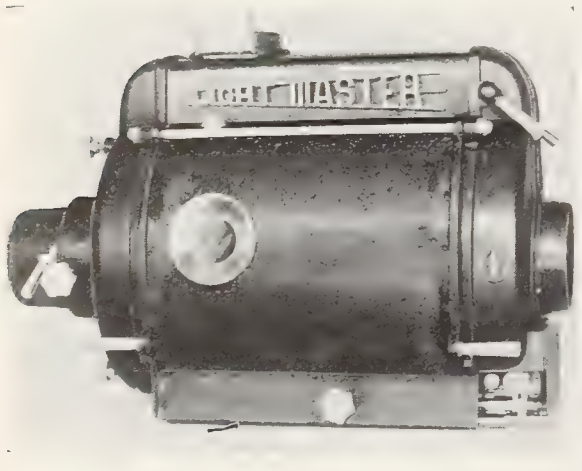
strength of current passing through the arc, affords a gradation in carbon feed rate.

The lamp uses an 11⅜-inch reflector located 30 inches from the aperture. Its working distance is 4 inches. The optical system is rated at a speed of F/2.5; its magnification of the light source is 7½/1. Reflector and arc positions are vertically and horizontally adjusted by controls confined to the rear of the housing.

Further to assure stability of operation when a hard spot in the carbon is encountered, the manufacturer has made available a special supply rectifier, the transformer core of which is adapted to providing maximum smoothness of current under conditions of low-current density arc operation. Rectifier and lamp may be obtained as a co-ordinated electrical unit.

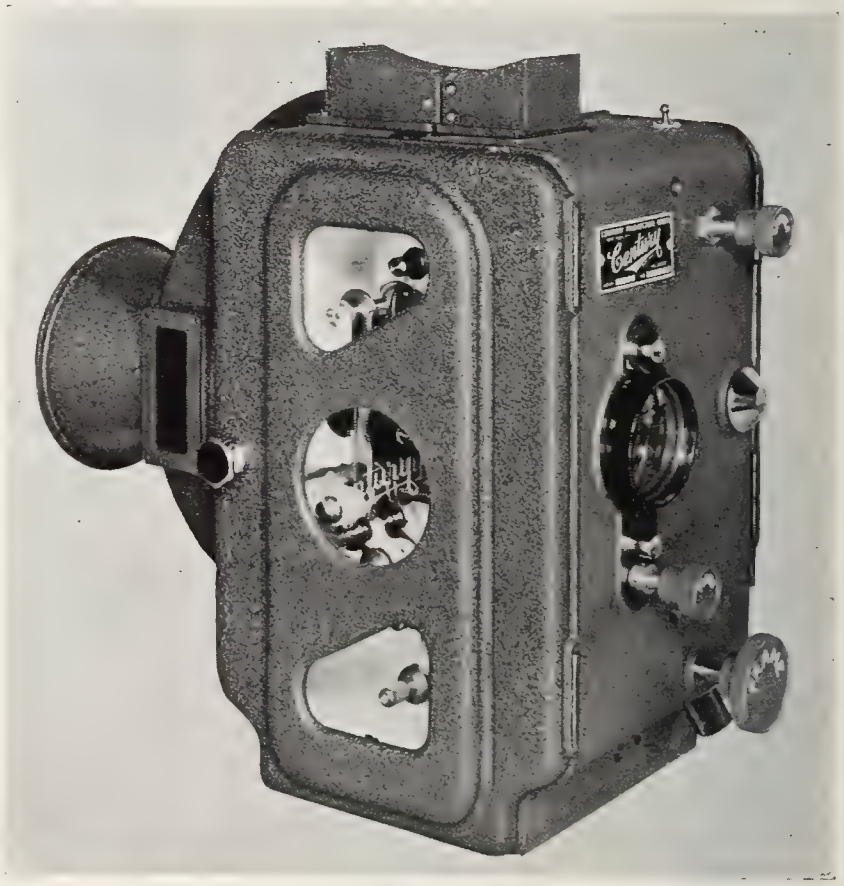
New Lamp Designed for "One-Kilowatt" Arc Projection



DESIGNED FOR low-wattage high-intensity ("one-kilowatt") operation, with the new Orotip-C negative and 7-mm. "Suprex" carbons, a new lamp, called the Light Master, has been placed on the market this month by The Ballantyne Company of Omaha.

A wide range of carbon feed rates for both positive and negative carbons, with individual control of each, has been provided. The entire carbon feed mechanism is oversize and operates on ball bearings, deriving its driving power from a continuous-feed type of motor.

The housing has been designed to give complete accessibility and ample ventilation and has been streamlined in the modern manner, with black, heat-proof wrinkle-enamel finish and bright red trim.



The mirror is of 14-inch diameter with external focusing controls located at the rear of the housing. A meter is provided at the rear, and an arc position indicator at the top of the lamphouse.

Operation is at 27 volts. The lamp may be operated with either a generator or a standard dry-type or bulb rectifier as current supply source.

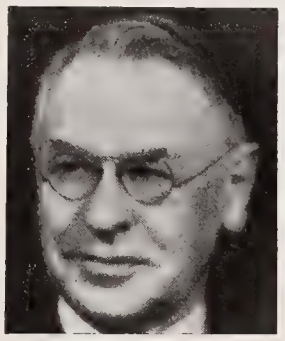
STREAMLINED CASE, SEPARATE GEARS FOR DOUBLE SHUTTERS

Exterior view of housing of new Century projector mechanism.

THE STANDARD theatre projector recently placed on the market by the Century Projector Corporation of New York—designated Model C—is of new design throughout, from streamlined case to the mechanism itself. The case (illustrated here) and the center frame are cast in one piece, so that the center frame is supported on all sides. The cast iron case, which has an inside finish of white baked enamel, is finished outside, including the doors, in gray baked enamel, while wherever possible, exposed metal surfaces are nickeled and screws are hardened and finished to match. The front and rear doors are of heavy cast aluminum designed to prevent any resonance; the front door has glass windows for observation during operation. In describing the new Century projector in the June 29th issue, the illustrations erroneously included a photograph of a previous model; the exterior of the new mechanism housing is designed as shown here.

The new model is available with double revolving rear shutters, or with a single rear shutter. In the case of double shutters, operation is inside a single shutter guard, but each shutter is driven from separate gears to keep projector gear wear at a minimum. No alignment of the two shutters is necessary, however, since this is fixed in the basic design of the shutter mechanism.

Other features of the Model C (as described in the June 29th issue) include a heat shield of heavy cast iron designed with multiple sections formed to the contour of the cone of light from the lamp reflector, for the purpose of insuring uniform distribution of light over the aperture with a minimum of aperture heat; an intermittent movement of direct drive design having no gears inside the case and lubricated automatically; film gate pads adjustable as to tension during operation; and a film gate allowing opening about an inch for inspection of the film trap shoes and pressure pads without removing the gate or film trap.



In general, the design provides for unit removal of parts for inspection, repair or replacement. The intermittent, which has four bearings—two on the cam shaft and two on the starwheel and sprocket shaft—is removable from the operating side without removal of any gears (also, installation may be made without the necessity to time the shutters afterward). The shutter shaft, gears and shutters are removable as a unit, as are also the main vertical shaft with its gears and governor.

A new Century base, fully enclosed, is in development.

F. H. RICHARDSON'S COMMENT

Projectionist Should Explain, Manager Listen

IN A LETTER from a Washington projectionist, this paragraph occurs: "When requisition for repair and replacement parts are not honored, what is a man to do? But I am doing everything possible to get the best results I can from equipment in very poor condition, though it is discouraging. Can you suggest anything that might wake the manager up to the advisability of keeping projection equipment in good condition. If so I, and I am sure hundreds of others compelled to work with equipment in such condition that really good results simply cannot be produced, would be grateful."

F. H. R.

I note that this man, who asks that his name not be published, is doing everything possible to produce the best the equipment can be made to produce, regardless of their condition. It is discouraging, of course, to be obliged to work with equipment in poor condition, particularly where apparently the management is well able to honor requisitions for needed repairs or replacements. That is a condition with which all too many projectionists are confronted. It is a condition which strongly tends to discourage men from striving to give patrons a well presented show. "What's the use?" they say, "If the manager doesn't care enough about good results to provide what's necessary to get them, why should I work up a sweat trying to produce them?"

Management Not Always to Blame

But is failure to honor requisitions always chargeable to management? Quite recently I visited a projection room in New York City and during a chat with the projectionist, asked about certain faults in the screen image.

"Look at the projectors and you have your answer," he replied. "I have asked several times that the mechanisms be sent to the factory for an overhauling, but have even been refused parts when I offered to make the repairs myself."

I examined the idle projector and was assured that the other was just as bad, if not worse. The manager came up. Holding the rotating shutter stationary, I rotated the rim of the flywheel, which permitted such excessive back-lash of the rotating shutter that in order to eliminate travelghost an unnecessarily wide master blade was necessary. I explained that I meant excessive flicker tendency, which could only be partially eliminated by an equally added width of the flicker blade. I explained that if all this were done, it would mean wasted light, hence wasted electric power.

I then pointed out the damage done to film sprocket holes by the badly worn intermittent sprocket teeth, which not only jeopardized the performance in his theatre, but might work injury to the show of every exhibitor who must use the same prints thereafter. Similarly we examined some other conditions.

"Why didn't you tell me all this?" asked the manager, turning to the projectionist. Perhaps the projectionist had his own reasons for not replying. Anyway, the manager asked me to accompany him to his office, where he called up the projector manufacturer, ordered loan mechanisms and instructed that his own mechanism be overhauled.

The point is this: The projectionist himself might have been to blame for failure to have requisitions honored. When making a requisition, or at least when one is not honored, the projectionist should understand that the manager is not himself a projectionist. He may come up and examine the part requisitioned, which may look quite all right to him. It then is the duty of the projectionist to offer detailed explanation as to why it is unfit for use, plus lucid explanation of the damage or waste or later expense its further use will entail.

It is natural enough for management to be negative toward expense, and to believe that if they are lenient, employes may become careless about costs. If the need for a part is fully explained, this fear is often dispelled.

It is part and parcel of the projectionist's duty to be able to do all this—and to do it he must study his profession. If he cannot or does not do it, he is not playing fair with the theatre management.

The first license issued to a motion picture projectionist in the United States. Thinking that a reproduction of this card might prove interesting to quite a few projectionists, I recently obtained it from Frank J. Howard of the Boston local, to whom it was issued on October 20, 1905. There can be little doubt about its being the first license for, according to Thad Barrows, president of Local 182, the first card was issued to Mr. Howard, and I personally know that Boston inaugurated the licensing of projectionists in the United States. Incidentally, the photographer who took the photograph of the card from which this reproduction was made can supply full-sized pictures of the card (6 x 3½ inches) at 10c each to any projectionists who would like to have one as a souvenir.—F. Vol. 140. No. 5 — August 3, 1940

WHO THREW IT!

LONG, long ago when Fourteenth street was Fourteenth, and the Bowery was the Bowery, there was a music hall ballad with the refrain: "Oh, who threw the shirt in Mrs. Murphy's chowder?" That, you will understand, appeared to have created the situation of confusion songfully narrated.

Just now we have in this blithe, if distracted, industry also a situation of enough confusion to inspire a Norse saga. It is decidedly a political, legal and commercial chowder.

Also it is fairly clear as to who threw the shirt.

A group of well intrenched and especially able exhibition interests, not directly involved in the Government's anti-trust suit, have raised objections to essential and basic provisions of the tentative consent decree, attaining thereby a well blended state of obfuscation.

These exhibition interests object: to provisions for advance trade showings; to possible reallocations of product; to local buying; to small block sales, precluding sewing up product by wholesale deals; and more.

In sum and short, whatever proposes a change of the conditions under which they enjoy advantage they oppose.

That these exhibition interests should be opposed to anything calculated to increase the labours of their performance and create competitive problems which they have so long and so carefully arranged to eliminate is not surprising.

However, the presumptiveness of the procedure and process is but the merest shade short of amazing.

Perhaps it may all be explained by that order of reasoning so often expressed on Broadway: "There's no harm in asking." That, like many another cliche of show patois, is not necessarily correct.

Really at bar in the Government suit is the total structure of the motion picture industry, and on trial are just precisely such components of it as the possession of special and unequal opportunity, alleged to be contrary both to law and American social and commercial principle.

NEVER before this bitter 1940 summer has there been so abundant proof of the actual community of interest of the diverse sectors of the motion picture industry, and with that equally abundant evidence that special advantages in any sector must impair the whole.

Over-all is the problem of gross revenues for the screen. It is to be observed that where the film companies suffer from declining revenues most is not in the competitive areas, but in "closed situations", where prices are controlled by long range wholesale deals, unresponsive to the actual regional market created by the retailers and their customers.

There is considerable evidence to be had in motion picture experience, and in many another industry, to show that the completely controlled market is less profitable for the controllers than operation where performance gets the spur of competition.

Analysis, for instance, of the British figures shows the picture, its producers and distributors, getting a decidedly larger return, proportionately, than in the United States. Britain trade shows the product and engages in competitive selling and buying. The distributor there can not, in general, be enmeshed in a continuing program of specially favoring arrangements with dominant customers. The product can get, piece by piece, the highest bid. Distribution does not in consequence get muscle bound in powerful alliances.

MEANWHILE, with the defendants in the Government suit so divided, the aspect is complicated with conflicts that no "escape clause" can completely answer. If some four or five defendants were to take a consent decree, and the remainder were to go to trial there would be apparently an excellent probability that adjudication would not result in a decree that would coincide with the negotiated arrangement. That obviously would deliver a nice state of divergence and two orders of regulation within the industry. The most probable consequence of that would be ultimately the substantial nullification of both, and a gravitation back to the status quo ante. It just might be that there are some who plan it that way.

ANNOUNCING EPOCH

THERE is happy encouragement in that Paramount advertisement on the back cover of a recent Herald, discussing Paramount's "Coming 'Round the Mountain" as a tale of "those simple minded folks from Goon Town who fight for life, liberty, and engage in pursuit of happiness in a glorious drama of social insignificance."

Mr. Robert Gillham asserts that any implication of reference to any other picture or producer, living or dead, is entirely coincidental.

Now July of 1940 may be set down for the beginning of the epochal movement for pictures made with fastness of purpose, with unyielding fidelity, to the cause of proving nothing.

REDUCTION

THIS week's announcement from the Eastman Kodak Company of a reduction in the price of raw film reminds one that the cost of the photographic material is the only important element of the motion picture which has so responded to the typical down turn of the cost curve in technological machine product, while improving in quality, increasing in volume. Interestingly, too, the late Mr. George Eastman personally made more money and amassed a greater fortune than any ten others derived from the motion picture industry.

ADDITIONAL TROUBLES—Your editor's Connecticut corn patch is now attacked on the land side by woodchucks and by muskrats from the lake. Two courses are open: aggression with a rifle or retreat to a can opener—by trial or consent. We'll shoot it out.

This Week in the News

3 Millions Saved

EASTMAN Kodak Company, on Monday, followed by duPont Film and Agfa-Ansco on Wednesday, reduced the prices of all negative raw stock by 12½ per cent and positive stock by 15 per cent, acting voluntarily in the face of producers' lost income abroad.

In each instance the reductions made were from four to three and a-half cents per foot on negative and from one cent to .85 of one cent a foot on positive.

Based on the Hays organization's standing estimate of 2,000,000,000 linear feet of positive used annually, at a cost of $20,000,000, the savings on positive stock should be around $2,500,000, and on its estimate of 100,000,000 feet of negative used annually, at a cost of $4,000,000, the savings there should be about $600,000, total savings of $3,100,000 a year.

The reductions became effective Thursday, August 1st.

Eastman is generally conceded to be the No. 1 supplier of raw film to Hollywood, DuPont and Agfa-Ansco following in that order.

Pressures

THE nation's theatres and theatre circuits may expect increasing requests to display outright "propaganda" films, made by organizations outside the film industry, and advocating our entrance into, or our rejection of, the European war. Such approaches are being made directly, or through the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

The Women's International League for Peace and Freedom two weeks ago importuned Charles Moscowitz, Loew New York circuit head, to play "Which Way, America," a film made recently by the American Films Foundation, of New York. The League, this week, had not received a reply from Mr. Moscowitz on whether the circuit would play the film.

League spokesmen explained that the picture, a one reeler, deals with the national defense problem, and was screened recently at an anti-war demonstration in Washington.

The Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, also a New York organization, is planning a motion picture, possibly of feature length, its spokesmen said, on Monday. It needs money, it was admitted; and it needs talent, writers, a studio, and other production adjuncts. It was hoped, this week, that playwright Robert Sherwood, who is reported writing the full page aid-the-Allies newspaper advertisements for the organization, may write a film script.

Coast 'Progressives'

THE Communists' Daily Worker newspaper, in New York, finds the "best news in years for labor is the announcement that the Motion Picture Guild has reorganized and will produce four to six progressive films a year." The Worker's report, bearing a Hollywood dateline, explained that the Guild is "composed of progressive-minded artists and technicians of the film colony."

The Hollywood Motion Picture Guild was identified, last year, at its inception, with raising money for Chinese and Spanish refugees. It has since been dormant, but on Friday its executive board—no names are available—is to meet on the coast to determine where, if any place, it might be going. It was said Tuesday by a "spokesman" that they have no producing plans.

The communistic Worker in New York, however, seems to have more positive information, even citing "Says Youth" as the title of the first of the series of "progressive" films to be produced, and calling it "a vital statement on the situation facing youth today."

It was learned from a reliable source in Hollywood that the Guild was in communication with certain foreign governments shortly after its formation with respect to the Guild's producing films in Hollywood, sponsored abroad.

$5,849,796 Gross

BROADWAY'S four vaudeville and film theatres: Loew's State, Strand, Roxy and Paramount, grossed $5,849,796 in the 45 weeks of last show season, between September 1, 1939, and June 30, 1940.

The Billboard, which computed the grosses, did so on the basis of those four houses usually depending more on "name" acts than on pictures. The Music Hall was not counted because its draw is based primarily on films.

The Paramount, seating 3,664, and spending about $12,500 for acts, was top at $1,686,500; the Roxy, seating 5,836, but charging much lower admissions, ranked second, with a $1,635,796 gross, spending only about $2,000 for specialty acts, excluding cost of the Roxyette house performers.

Warners' Strand, in third place, seating 2,717, grossed $1,511,000, on a stage outlay of about $12,500, with Loew's State, one of the few actual vaudeville-film theatres, grossing $1,026,500, on an average weekly expenditure of $5,500 for acts. It seats 3,450.

The Paramount, in second place the year before, took the first place held by the Roxy, with the Strand and State continuing in third and four places, respectively.

Sears Preview

IN line with recent policy announcements, Warner Brothers announced trade show screenings of "The Sea Hawk" for all exchanges across the nation Monday, August 5.

In prelude to the picture Gradwell Sears, sales manager, was scheduled to make his screen debut in a short picture discussing the picture and the policy purposes of the preview—the first such use of the screen. Mr. Sears appears solo.

The New York showing was booked for the Normandy theatre. Invitations were issued to exhibitors in adjacent territories.

Films Have an Heir

CALLING television the "heir apparent to movies and the radio," J. S. Knowlson, president of the Radio Manufacturers Association, urged members of the National Television Systems Committee to agree on video standards before the fall to permit full commercialization of the new art, at the initial meeting of the committee at the Hotel Roosevelt, in New York City, on Wednesday.

James L. Fly, Federal Communications Commission chairman, pledged the cooperation of the Commission, but declared that it was up to the committee, which represents every phase of the industry, to decide what is best for television. He reiterated that stations desiring licenses would have to cooperate in research and added "the more stations, the merrier." He told the committee to concentrate not only on present standards but to consider future developments such as color television.

No "Wind" Cuts

THERE might be capitulation in England on original demands that a stipulated high admission price be maintained on "Gone With the Wind," as evidenced by lower scales now at some subsequents, but MGM has no intention of permitting its David Selznick production to play anywhere in this country below the 75-cent minimum demanded by the distributor, according to William F. Rodgers, general sales manager, in New York. The 75-cent minimum expires on January 1st, at the end of the first year of exhibition.

British exhibitors fought against Metro's 70 per cent rental charge, against Metro's stipulation that increased ticket prices be established. First signs of exhibitor victory are now apparent, on Britain's northeast coast, where lower prices than were originally demanded are in effect in houses of Associated British Cinemas.

Wanger on the Road

PRODUCER Walter Wanger left Hollywood for New York this week, to begin a tour of key cities on which he will address Variety clubs, Rotary, and other organizations, asking and answering questions on "the state of the industry and public attitude towards films."

Mr. Wanger's public relations director, John Le Roy Johnston, is to precede him over the route, and also to visit other towns in the interest of the latest Wanger pictures, "The Long Voyage Home" and "Foreign Correspondent."

The itinerary includes Washington, Boston, Toronto, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, Chicago, St. Louis, New Orleans, and Dallas.

Condemns 'Airing'

"RECENT disclosure by Samuel Goldwyn in the Saturday Evening Post, of conditions in both production and exhibition which he attributed to double bills, was harmful and held the industry up to ridicule in the eyes of the public." This was the conclusion made Tuesday by theatre owners attending the first district meeting of the new United Theatre Owners Association of Illinois, an independent group, meeting at Rockford.

Edward Zorn, president, speaking for the group, admitted that the industry has "ailments," but these, he said, should not be aired in the public prints.

William F. Crouch, executive secretary, told the meeting that owners of 26 downstate Illinois theatres had joined the organization within the last few weeks.

Stage Gains

ATTENDANCE at the legitimate theatre in New York last season was the highest of the past ten years, according to a survey by the New York Theatre Program Corporation, purveyors of playbills to all New York commercial theatres. This is despite the fewer legitimate productions.

The computation was made from the number of playbills distributed each year, and is regarded by the company as fairly indicative. It was noted that the only large fluctuations of theatre attendance occurred in 1931-32, downward; and in 1934-35, upward.

Generally, during the ten years, the fewer the number of shows, the greater the average attendance, it was said.

For the 97 shows of the past season, the corporation distributed 8,771,300 playbills, or about 90,426 per show; for the 1938-39 season, it distributed 8,485,000 playbills; for 1937-38, 8,554,000; and for 1936-37, 8,651,000.

'American Common'

ON the walls of Sears, Roebuck's American Common, at the New York World's Fair, will hang the pictures of persons of foreign birth and subsequent American citizenship who, through their efforts, added to this country's arts, science, industry.

Selected to date from motion pictures: Samuel Goldwyn, of Poland; Frank Capra, Italy; Charles Chaplin, England; Carl Laemmle, Germany; Claudette Colbert, France; Ernst Lubitsch, Germany; Walter Huston, Canada; May Robson, Australia; Mary Pickford, Canada; Marlene Dietrich, Germany; Jean Hersholt, Denmark; Paul Muni, Austria; Edward G. Robinson, Roumania; Lynn Fontanne, England.

Pictures of Negroes are also being hung, not because of foreign birth, but because "they belong to an individual American culture group": Bill Robinson, Bert Williams, Richard B. Harrison.

Alla Nazimova and Maurice Schwartz are included, from Russia; and Helen Mojeska, from Poland.

'Protection Shots'

PLACED in production weeks before the Havana Pan-American Conference furnished a clue to the temper of South American officialdom with respect to Nazism, Paramount's new production of "Arise My Love"—the setting of which is Paris, September last, at the declaration of war—continues shooting, the cameras recording "protection-shots" of scenes containing dialogue referring to Hitler, Germany, Nazism, etc.

Although protection-shots are no novelty in Hollywood, serving as a means of adapting varieties of material to regulations imposed on film prints supplied to other nations, Paramount's purpose in making these shots in this instance differs from most. No potentialities of censorship impended. No changes of story are involved.

There had been reports that some South American audiences seeing films dealing with Nazi and other ideologies on occasion had been moved to appropriate topics on the screen for purposes of auditorium debate which had assumed such momentum as to leave exhibitors in possession of broken chairs, ripped and wrecked fixtures, for such, it is reported, is the South American way. It was for the protection of South American cinema furnishings, not dictators' feelings, that the "Arise My Love" protection-shots were made.

In any event, Paramount now will not use the protection shots, apparently taking cognizance of the anti-Nazi feeling expressed by the majority of South American countries at Havana.

CONSENT DECREE PROPOSALS TO BE SUBMITTED TO BOARDS OF MAJORS

Negotiators Establish Basis for "Escape Clause"; Government Insists on Limiting Selling to Blocks of Five Pictures

The status of the consent decree negotiations in the Government's motion picture anti-trust suit continued, at mid-week, in confusion.

The Government and defense negotiators this week were rewriting some of the clauses complained of by Paramount's theatre partners and by other exhibitors, but the Government appeared firm in insisting on limiting feature selling to blocks of five.

Defendants' boards of directors are to be asked to pass on any draft before corporate signatures are affixed thereto.

Joseph Hazen, personal representative of Harry M. Warner in New York, and Joseph Bernhard flew to Burbank, Cal., Tuesday night for conferences with Mr. Warner on the decree. They expected to return to New York Friday.

Spokesmen for Government counsel seemed to think that agreement on a draft could be reached by the weekend; defense counsel was not so optimistic.

A peace settlement by four distributor-circuits without Paramount Pictures, Inc., was seen as a possibility, in sequel to the attack made last week by Paramount theatre partners against fundamental parts of the tentative draft dated July 17th.

Paramount's position was described as requiring a settlement applicable without prejudice to all eight defendants and not only to the "Big Five" to the exclusion of Columbia, United Artists and Universal, non-circuit owners, which withdrew from settlement negotiations two weeks ago.

Some progress in drafting was apparent in midweek, when the basis was established for an "escape" clause—that troublesome Clause No. 8—leaving fabrication of actual machinery for arbitration, its application and financial maintenance the main issues still untouched.

To Consult Exhibitors

The Department of Justice this week apparently decided to listen to outside advice. After turning down the petition filed a month ago by the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners to make "constructive suggestions," U. S. Attorney Paul Williams this week sent a request to Robert Poole, PCCITO secretary, in Los Angeles, to forward any suggestions "without delay." Originally, Washington spokesmen for the Department of Justice dismissed the exhibitors' request with the statement, "We don't need any outside advice."

Meanwhile, the negotiating lawyers for both Government and defendants continued at their labors in New York, although the heat caused them to move the scene from the sultry quarters of the heavy panelled, heavily-draped second floor of the Bar Association Building, on 44th Street, to the air-cooled, streamlined screening room of Twentieth Century-Fox, at Tenth Avenue and 56th Street.

October 7th remains the date for resumption of trial, in the event of no settlement.

To Confer with Exhibitors

The new stand of the Government inviting "outside advice" of exhibitors will include not only their immediate suggestions for possible incorporation in the draft, but also include the views of exhibitor representatives on the actual consent decree when completed.

Thus Allied States no longer stands alone as "consultant" to the Department in the drafting of a settlement, as it has from the beginning. Allied also was close to the Department in building the Government's suit.

The Government is expected to call exhibitor organization representatives to New York for hearings, shortly. Whether the exhibitors will be given audience before the Department's New York negotiators submit the draft to superiors Robert Jackson, Attorney General, and Thurman Arnold, Assistant, was still to be determined. They will, of course, be heard before any document is submitted to Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard, for court approval.

"Internal Opposition"

The first open opposition to the tentative draft, as voiced last week by Paramount's partners in 1,200 theatres, caused little disturbance in the actual continuance of negotiations, in comparison to the excitement it caused when it came into the open.

Specifically, the Paramount partners, who, legally are not involved in the trust suit, because they are not parties thereto, objected to Section 1: Requiring distributors to trade show features in advance; Section 3: Providing for the sale of features only in blocks of five; Section 6: Prohibiting distributors from discriminating against independent theatres.

Paramount, on Thursday, July 25th, presented the views of its partners to the assembled Government and defendant negotiators. In subsequent meetings, the clauses complained of were subjected to new discussion, but at midweek they remained virtually unchanged. The Government indicated that there was little chance, if any, of altering the clause requiring distributors to sell in units of five.

Tentative Proposals

The tentative draft stood as follows:

1. Elimination of Blind Selling—Requiring advance screenings in the exchange territory in which a picture is offered for sale.

2. Leasing of Feature Pictures in Exchange Districts—Prohibiting the leasing of a picture in one exchange district for use in theatres in another district.

3. Limitations on the Leasing of Pictures Which Have Been Trade Shown—No distributor may offer for lease more than five pictures in one group, nor force shorts, trailers, serials, features or westerns with "regular" features, and allowing an exhibitor to cancel for moral, religious or racial offensiveness.

4. Pictures Available on Some Runs—Requiring the distributor to sell to a reputable and responsible exhibitor, unless such sale would prejudice the distributor's business interests in the area, and all disputes arising therefrom shall be arbitrated.

5. Disputes as to Clearance Shall Be Subject to Arbitration—Putting clearance on the "auction block," by acknowledging the right of an exhibitor to buy and a distributor to sell clearance, this clause provides for arbitration of clearance disputes and the issues which shall concern the arbitrators in arriving at an opinion.

6. Remedy for Discriminating Against Independently Operated Theatres—The remedy being arbitration, and the clause setting up the proceedings which shall be followed in determining complaints.

7. Acquisitions of or Changes With Respect to Theatres in Which Defendants Are Interested—Intended to control expansion of circuit defendants.

8. Escape Clause.

Establishment of the actual machinery of arbitration has not been decided upon.

THAT THAD BROWN APPOINTMENT

Hearings on the President's nomination of Thad Brown, to serve another term on the Federal Communications Commission, were resumed on Wednesday, with members of the Senate Interstate Commerce Commission openly restive over the lengthy examination, conducted by Senator Charles W. Tobey, Republican, of New Hampshire.

Wednesday was devoted by the Senator to questioning Ralph F. Colin, counsel for the Columbia Broadcasting System, on the frequently rehashed Paramount deal—with nominee Brown as a spectator.

During the examination of Mr. Colin, Senator Tobey attempted to show that Paramount completed its part of the deal at a time when its capital and surplus were seriously impaired by the $5,000,000 it had to pay out, and he intimated that the Columbia deal was a contributing cause to its insolvency, which Mr. Colin denied.

ALLIED MEMBERS START EXCHANGING PRODUCT, POLICY, PRICE INFORMATION

Organization Enters New Trade Association Phase with Formation of Committee to Collate Data on Buying

Allied States Association this week assumed the form of a national trade association concerned with the immediate operating business of its membership, the product it buys and prices it pays, extending its scope which up to now has been concerned for the most part with a militant attention to the operations of others, in the legislatures, in distribution.

Data To Be Collected

For the first time, Allied States will operate a national system for exchanging product, policy and price information, an idea born at the organization's last annual convention, in mid-June in Chicago. The idea, basically, is to disseminate actual operating information to all independent owners, as gathered from them. It is intended to protect owners from certain product-selling and rental-charging practices prevailing.

Allied as a trade information disseminator took actual form last week in Philadelphia, in the offices of Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Inc., headquarters of the chairman of the new national committee, Sidney Samuelson. Committee members meeting with him were P. J. Wood, Ohio; Arthur Howard, Massachusetts; Don Rossiter, Indiana. Abram F. Myers, general counsel of national Allied, was named counsel for the new setup.

The committee urges independent owners to cease and desist from any 1940-41 product buying until the first reports of the trade information setup are released, in September.

The committee has adopted as its official name "Allied Information Department." It will be designated in inter-organization correspondence by the initials "AID."

The initial standard questionnaire, to be sent out in a few days, will seek the following information:

(a) Population of town
(b) Single or double feature policy
(c) Total number of features required per year
(d) Type of competition
(e) Number of pictures offered by each distributor
(f) Number of features bought
(g) Number of percentage pictures (showing number in each bracket)
(h) Number on preferred playing time
(i) Number on flat rental
(j) Cancellation privilege granted
(k) Whether shorts or newsreels were forced
(l) Whether flat rentals were higher, lower or the same as last year
(m) Percentage of rentals to gross on last year's contract

Space will be allowed for "comments." Subsequent questionnaires may contain, in addition to the foregoing, requests for information on special subjects. In order that the information may be kept up to date, the questionnaires will be sent out each month during the selling season, but the work of the department on special subjects will continue throughout the year.

Participation by any exhibitor will be voluntary. Exhibitors will be cautioned not to sign or add any identifying notation to the questionnaires. Each exhibitor will make such use of the data as he sees fit. No effort will be made to secure unified action by the exhibitors on the basis of the information reported.

In view of the fact that its first composite reports will be ready for distribution early in September, the committee expressed the hope that further buying will be held to a minimum until exhibitors can have the benefit of the accumulated experience up to that time. In the meantime, exhibitors are cautioned not to accept as irrevocably established the terms of the several distributing companies as publicly reported in the trade press. "For exhibitors generally to sign up at such terms would be ruinous," it was warned.

The committee will hold another meeting in September during the convention of Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey.

THREE FEATURES AND ICE CREAM

Three features, a cartoon, a serial and a double dip ice cream cone for all patrons is the program Arthur Burke of the Kansas City Colonial dished up on a recent Sunday—and all for a dime.

Coast Owners Survey Product

Owners of independent theatres along the Pacific seaboard are likewise going in for product and contract probing. The Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners this week disclosed results of a questioning of members, and reported that shorts and newsreels still are being forced by distributors in making feature sales. Questions and composite average answers from the survey follow:

How many major film companies did you buy from for the 1939-40 season? First run: 6.8. Subsequent: 6.3

Collectively, how many percentage pictures were there in all your 1939-40 contracts: First Run: 23. Subsequent: 7.

Collectively, how many pictures on preferred time in your contracts? First run: 17. Subsequent: 5.5

How many pictures in your contracts exclusive of cancellations? First run and subsequent: 287.

How many pictures per week do you use? First run: five per week. Subsequent run: five per week.

How many changes per week? First run: three. Subsequent: 2.5.

Seventy per cent of the membership, representing a total of 445 theatres of the 898 houses in the Coast territories, answered the questionnaire. It was revealed that 47 per cent of the exhibitors operated first run situations, 22 per cent have no competition whatsoever. Nine per cent have affiliated competition, 16 per cent have independent competition. Fifty-three per cent are subsequent run situations, 19 per cent have affiliated competition and 34 per cent have independent competition.

Analyses Made On Deliveries

The Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, through the headquarters of P. J. Wood, secretary, this week released the following company-by-company "analyses of the contractual clauses in the various distributors' contracts pertaining to pictures not generally released during the year":

Columbia Pictures

Distributor is obligated to deliver not less than 30 features of Group C-4 and not less than eight westerns of Group C-5. Features generally released after September 30, 1940, are excluded. The clause referred to is printed directly above the schedule of pictures.

Loew's, Inc. (MGM)

Distributor is obligated to deliver not less than 44 features by August 31, 1940. Features generally released after August 31, 1940, are excluded. The clause referred to is printed directly above the schedule of pictures.

Paramount Pictures

Features generally released after August 31, 1940, are excluded. The clause is printed above the schedule of pictures.

RKO Distributing

They have changed their "not generally released" clause whereby they are obliged to deliver not more than 52 nor less than 42 feature pictures (not including George O'Briens) which are "generally released" before August 31, 1940. Refer to paragraph eight of their contract.

Twentieth Century-Fox

Distributor is obligated to deliver not less than 42 features by July 31, 1940. Features generally released after July 31, 1940, are excluded. Note: Of the 42 features, distributor includes a maximum of four English produced pictures. The clause is printed directly above the schedule of pictures.

United Artists

Features not generally released by April 15, 1941, can be cancelled by either party by giving written notice to the other within 10 days after April 15, 1941. If no such written notice is given, contract remains in effect. Clause seventh, Paragraph I.

Universal

Their contract provides that distributor will release not more than 40 nor less than 32 pictures (excluding so-called westerns) between September 1, 1939, and ending August 31, 1940. Therefore, features generally released after August 31, 1940, are excluded. The clause is printed directly above the schedule of pictures.

Warner Brothers - First National

Features released after August 31, 1940, are excluded unless exhibitor gives written notice to the distributor not later than September 30, 1940, that he elects to exhibit all such late releases if released prior to August 31, 1941. In other words, if Warners does not notify you by August 16, you receive all late releases. If they do notify you that they they are excluding them, you can still get them by writing to them up to September 30, 1940, that you want them. Refer to clause 17 of their contract.

MAJORS SET FRESH CROP OF DATES FOR WORLD PREMIERES IN THE FIELD

Universal's "Daltons" Opens in Coffeyville, Kan.; Paramount Has Plans for Three; UA Preparing "Carson" Premiere

The parade of location premieres continues.

Thus, to much ballyhoo, to a 24 hour town celebration, and to an estimated audience of 50,000 midwesterners, Universal Thursday, July 25th, opened its "When the Daltons Rode", at Coffeyville, Kansas, site of the Dalton desperados' depredations.

Paramount is preparing a preview of its "Rhythm on the River" at the Del Mar Racetrack, California, on August 16th, the premiere of its "Comin' Round the Mountain" in Nashville, August 10th, and of its "Northwest Mounted" in the fall, in some Canadian city.

United Artists may show James Roosevelt's recently acquired British picture, "Pastor Hall" in several key cities, simultaneously. Also it has tentatively set August 21st as the date on which it will open "Kit Carson" in Trinidad or in La Junta, Colorado, or in both towns.

Twentieth Century-Fox plans a preview of "Brigham Young" in Kansas City shortly, and MGM is expected to hold the world premiere of "Boom Town" in Atlantic City next Thursday.

In Coffeyville

A 24 hour celebration in which Coffeyville's 18,000 inhabitants and thousands of visitors participated, marked the premiere, Thursday, July 25th, of Universal Pictures, "When the Daltons Rode," starring Frank Albertson, Andy Devine, Constance Moore, and Peggy Moran.

Approximately 150 exhibitors and newspapermen from Kansas, Arkansas, Oklahoma, and Missouri were guests of Universal distribution executives, studio officials and stars, and of the Coffeyville politicians.

Also present was Mrs. Emmett Dalton, widow of the only survivor of the Dalton gang. Among Universal officials attending were Joe Garrison, district manager; Grover Parsons, Kansas City branch manager; Lou Levy, manager of the Des Moines exchange; Harry Hines, St. Louis branch manager; Otto Siegel, Omaha branch manager; and J. E. Hobbs, manager of the Oklahoma City branch.

Among the exhibitors present were Lon Cox, Fox Midwest circuit manager, and Ralph Talbot, from Tulsa.

The Kansas City and Hollywood delegations were welcomed to Coffeyville by Mayor J. D. Byers. There were a parade, featuring old-time rigs, several hundred mounted local citizens, and Indians; a pioneer rodeo, climaxed by an Indian ceremonial; the induction of Andy Devine and Frank Albertson into the Pawnee and Delaware tribes, respectively; a broadcast, by the Mutual network, of this ceremony; a civic banquet, with 300 leading citizens as hosts; personal appearances of the stars on a special platform in the town plaza, and in the Midland and Tackett theatres, in which the premiere was held; an extra midnight performance at the Midland theatre, to accommodate the crowds; appearance of the stars at a community ball, that night, attended by three thousand; an extra dance, for jitterbugs, at the Missouri Pacific's freight house, at 2:30 A.M. Friday morning, as the train for Kansas City, bearing the Universal stars and executives, the exhibitors and newspaper men, drew away.

The picture opened at the Esquire and Uptown theatres, in Kansas City, on Friday, July 26th.

Two Cities Compete for "Carson"

Whether to open United Artists' "Kit Carson" in Trinidad or in La Junta, both in Colorado, was a question being decided this week by officials of the company and of the Fox Intermountain Theatres circuit, in Denver. Both cities are in the territory roamed by the famed scout. They are 82 miles apart.

Letters, telegrams, and petitions from citizens and officials of the two towns have been received by the circuit officials, by UA exchange men, and by George R. Gomperts, UA assistant exploitation chief, making Denver his headquarters now.

Meanwhile, UA ballyhoo for the picture, to open August 21st, goes on. The company has found a "direct descendant" of the scout, now in Hollywood. Wednesday, he was to be feted at the Golden Gate Exposition, the day being "Kit Carson Day." The "descendant," Kit Carson the Third, has made the acquaintance, in Colorado, of Wendel Willkie, Republican Presidential nominee, and of the state governor, Ralph Carr; so it is thought in Denver, that there will be no difficulty in obtaining a state proclamation of a "Kit Carson Week."

"Rhythm" at Del Mar

Paramount Pictures is to hold a "gala press preview" of its "Rhythm on the River" at the Del Mar Racetrack, near Los Angeles, on August 16th. There will be a special train for the press; luncheon, at noon, on the track grounds; a cocktail party; a coast-to-coast radio broadcast on the NBC Blue Network from 6:30 to 7:00 P.M., Pacific Coast Standard Time; dinner at the Turf Club; and a private screening, after the dinner. Participating in the broadcast will be producer Victor Schertzinger, and actors and actresses Bing Crosby, Mary Martin, Oscar Levant, Lillian Cornell, Ken Carpenter.

From Atlantic City it is reported that George F. Weilland, of the Apollo Theatre, received word from MGM this week that his house would see the world premiere of the company's latest, "Boom Town." It was recalled that "Gone With the Wind" scored signally last Winter, in the same house. Ballyhoo plans are now proceeding, with the cooperation of Mayor Tom Taggart, the theme to be that Atlantic City also is a "boom town."

Darryl F. Zanuck, production head of Twentieth Century-Fox, last week announced the company's "Brigham Young" would be given a special preview in Kansas City, and that 50 exhibitors would be flown there to see the film, that they might help the company formulate a sales policy. Mr. Zanuck and a group of Fox people from the Coast are expected to attend. Herman Wobber, the company's distribution head, is expected to lead the Eastern delegation. It was added at the Fox studios that the company would consult exhibitors in a similar fashion on other of its product.

Paramount Plans for Two

World premieres, to be accompanied by the ballyhoo given to other big Paramount pictures, are planned for two of the company's late releases, "Comin' Round the Mountain" and "Northwest Mounted." The former is expected to be presented in Nashville, featured by local celebration, two national broadcasts, and attendance of Hollywood stars. Opening date, as of late last week, was to be August 10th. The latter picture will probably be opened in a Canadian city, in the fall.

"Pastor Hall," British made anti-Nazi film, acquired by James Roosevelt from Grand National Pictures, Ltd., for United Artists release, will probably be given simultaneous world premieres in several key cities, Mr. Roosevelt said, in New York. It will be Mr. Roosevelt's first UA release.

Jules Levey's Universal release, "The Boys From Syracuse," having opened two weeks ago in Syracuse, and last week in San Francisco, was to open at the New York Paramount on Wednesday, and next Friday at the Keith and Hippodrome theatres, in Baltimore. In the latter city, Mayor Howard Jackson has decreed a "Laugh Week" to begin on next Friday.

Advance "Virginia" Publicity

Paramount has been giving its Technicolor feature, "Virginia," starring Fred MacMurray and Madeline Carroll, and now on location in Virginia, great advance publicity. Thus, Richmond, Virginia, and Washington, D. C., newspapers have been devoting much space to the picture; and their writers have been guests at the picture's shooting. Likewise, many writers from papers in other cities of the Middle South territory have been privileged to watch the picture in work. Even writers from the great syndicates and fan magazines, in New York, are being taken to Virginia by the company.

Walter Wanger's commissioning of nine great American painters to do, in Hollywood, paintings on his latest, "The Long Voyage Home" is bringing dividends in extra publicity, his New York staff claimed, this week. They point to space obtained, for the paintings, and for stories, in Esquire, Life, the American Magazine of Art, the Art Digest, Art News, Pictures On Exhibit, Time, News Week, the Ladies' Home Journal, Town and Country, Look, Vogue, Glamour, Parents' Magazine, Harpers, Pic, New York Daily Mirror, and others.

20th-Fox Sets "Indiana"

Twentieth Century-Fox plans to produce "Indiana" as a high budget feature in color, with Brenda Joyce, John Payne and Walter Brennan heading the cast, as they did in "Maryland." Henry King will direct.

'HORSE CAVALCADE' AT CHICAGO TRACK

A production titled "Cavalcade of the Horse" will be presented at the Washington Park, Chicago, race track on Sunday. Frank Cambria, who was brought to Chicago from New York through the efforts of John Balaban, of Balaban & Katz, will stage the show.

It will portray the part horses have played in world history from the time of Alexander the Great to the running of the first American Derby in 1884, which event is being celebrated. The show will be free to the public.

The franchise holders were advised that three features and three westerns were ready for immediate release, and that advance domestic sales to date were satisfactory. Leon Fromkess, in charge of foreign sales, announced that delivery of product had been made to the English associate, Pathe Pictures, Ltd.

Sigmund Neufeld outlined production plans. He stressed the importance of the South American market.

Harry Rathner will leave New York next week to conduct regional meetings throughout the country.

Open Oklahoma Theatre

Oklahoma's newest and most modern theatre, The Osage, in Bartlesville, was officially opened Thursday, June 27th. Herbert Wilcox, producer-director, and Anna Neagle, actress, attended the opening in connection with the showing there of Miss Neagle's latest picture "Irene." The house is operated by the Griffith Amusement Company.

Indianapolis House Closes

Indianapolis, with a population of 386,170, will have only three first run theatres in operation this summer. The 3,200-seat Indiana was closed last week. Kenneth Collins, manager, said the house would reopen early in the fall. Also closed for the summer is the 1,100-seat Apollo.

NEW REVIVAL IDEA TRIED

James Long of the Plaza theatre, first subsequent run in Kansas City, Mo., is trying out a new idea he devised for the showing of revivals. He advertises six outstanding features of the past few years that will be shown at the theatre, but keeps secret the one actually to be used on a particular program. He is using one every two weeks or so.

Among the films Mr. Long will revive are "A Star Is Born," "David Harum," "San Francisco," "It Happened One Night," "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," "Hurricane" and "Test Pilot."

Allied Head Links Cooperative Ads to Problem of Duals

Current moves by some distributors, notably RKO, to reduce their cooperative advertising budgets on the ground that exhibitors do not bear their fair share of the cost (see Motion Picture Herald, July 20, page 20) were attacked last Saturday by Jack Kirsch, president of Allied of Illinois, in a statement which linked the problem to that of double bills and defended the independent exhibitor.

Circuit Competition Cited

"Why should the small exhibitor attempt to spend any money for cooperative advertising when he has to show two, or sometimes three features to compete with the chain houses showing this type of program?", Mr. Kirsch asked.

"Another important phase of this particular problem," he continued, "is, how can the exhibitor determine which of his features should be so advertised? If he advertises only one feature the reaction of the patrons is negative because they disparage the second feature, and to advertise all features is a difficult problem as distributors are not very enthusiastic about exploiting their product with another.

"But suppose," Mr. Kirsch said, "we only had one feature. We certainly could do a better job of exploitation on a single feature where we could concentrate all our efforts, to insure a better return both for ourselves and the distributor.

"For example take a situation that exists here in Chicago. In some sections, nearly ten weeks elapse between the time a picture is shown at a Balaban and Katz chain neighborhood theatre and at a small independent house. In view of the fact that B and K have advertised the picture so much earlier, is there any sane reason why we should attempt any exploitation for this picture after all the 'gravy' has been absorbed by B and K? Last fall in one of my own theatres I was showing a Mickey Rooney picture and the Balaban and Katz United Artists was showing the latest Rooney release. Had I spent any money for advertising the Rooney picture I was showing, people would have questioned the age of my feature, so I did not spend any money for advertising.

"When the day comes that producers and distributors decide to aid in the elimination of double and triple features, then, and not until then, should the independent exhibitor attempt to aid the producers and distributors by shouldering a portion of the advertising budget," Mr. Kirsch concluded.

From a Balaban and Katz executive who would not be quoted directly it was learned that advertising budgets are set up in advance for all the circuit's theatres. Should a producer desire to use additional space in newspapers, the amount he decides to spend is added to the budget of the theatre where the product will be shown.

CHICAGO TRIPLES STILL FLOURISH, ONE HOUSE PROFITS WITH SINGLES

Multiple Feature War Fanned by Reluctance of Each Side to Make First Move; Esquire Flourishes on Single Policy

by IRVING YERGIN
in Chicago

With all the protestations from Hollywood producers, notably David Selznick and Samuel Goldwyn, with all the threats of distributors and the loud complaints of competing exhibitors, Chicago still is conducting comparatively widespread triple bill business, with Balaban and Katz and some independents principally involved in what amounts to an operating feud. One side won't drop them because the other side won't.

And while all the bellowing proceeds over the city's touchiest subject—multi-featured programs—a lone independent theatre, the Esquire, is doing very nicely with a single feature, right in the heart of the thickest dual-and-triple bill belt in America.

Ads Show Extent

A check of advertisements in last Sunday's newspapers indicated that triple features are continuing, extensively.

On Chicago's south side, where Balaban and Katz have the Tivoli, an "A" week theatre, the Tower, a "B" week and the Maryland, a "C" week, the nearby Ark theatre played the following triple feature over last weekend, "Opened by Mistake" (Paramount); "Hot Steel" (Universal), and "Hidden Menace" (foreign import).

Other triple-bill theatres in this neighborhood and their features over the week end were:

Midway: "College Swing," "Hunted Men" and "California Straight Ahead."

Ray: "La Conga Nights," "Hard to Get" and "The Lone Wolf Meets a Lady."

Woodlawn: "The Lost Jungle," "Sudan," "Off the Record."

All of these houses are twenty-five-cent evening admission theatres and all are subsequent run to the Balaban and Katz theatres in this zone.

On the northwest side, the Balaban and Katz Belmont, having 3,354 seats, an "A" house, was showing "My Son, My Son," "Typhoon" and "Irene."

Triple Bill Comment

In commenting on the triple feature showing at the B. & K. Belmont, Jack Kirsch, president of Allied of Illinois, pointed out that the majority of theatres in this zone would be unable to play the same attractions for at least another five weeks and in some instances six weeks. A check of release sheets from Paramount, United Artists and RKO, whose pictures are being shown, shows that, due to the clearance situation in Chicago, none of these theatres could show these pictures on the same program.

"How can other theatres in this neighborhood with a much smaller seating capacity compete with the B. & K. Belmont in showing triple features of the "A" type of attractions with the small admission prices that prevail at most of these theatres?" Mr. Kirsch asked.

"It simply can't be done and if the small independent exhibitor expects to show such pictures and stay in business the producers and distributors will have to offer some solution."

In this same zone the following theatres played triple features last weekend, according to the ads, as follows:

Dale: "The Life of Lucretia Borgia," "Two Girls on Broadway" and "Primrose Path."

Times: "Star Dust," "Flight Angels" and "Viva Cisco Kid."

Rio: "It All Came True," "Two Girls on Broadway" and "Opened by Mistake."

Karlov: "It All Came True," "Primrose Path" and "Parole Fixer."

As to the situation on the south side, Mr. Kirsch said he had been assured by the owners of the theatres now showing double and triple features that should the circuit houses return to single features they would immediately follow suit.

The Allied leader expressed his determination to continue the fight against multiple features.

He claimed that investigation had convinced him that those independent theatres which had gone back to triple features had done so only because of the competition of the chain houses.

Single Exception

Outstanding in the discussion of the multiple feature situation in Chicago is the Esquire theatre which in two and a half years of operation has shown double bills for only two weeks. The theatre is operated by Harry, Elmer and A. J. Balaban, all of the Balaban theatre family. The house opened February 16, 1938, and the last week in December of that year and the first of January, 1939, were the only times that double features were shown. The first program showed a profit, the second a heavy loss and that ended double bills for the house.

To ascertain specific reasons for the continued single feature policy William Galligan, youthful manager of the Esquire since it opened, was asked to explain.

"It's a very simple method of operating a theatre and presenting a program that will receive community acceptance with relation to single feature programs. The first double feature did a fair business—the second week the receipts took such a drop that after a series of conferences it was decided that never again would the Esquire show double features. We received so many protests against double features that it was decided to adhere to a single feature presentation.

"I am not necessarily against double features," he continued. "Some sections of this city have been so accustomed to doubles that if they were eliminated, the exhibitor would have to close his doors.

"But the patrons of the Esquire come from all over Chicago to see our shows. Over 25 per cent are from different sections of Chicago."

To prove his point Mr. Galligan produced a copy of the amusement page of a daily paper. "Here are some theatres showing triple features and again others showing double features and also giving away premiums. But the Beverly theatre on Chicago's far south side is still showing single features in spite of all the double and triple billing in the surrounding neighborhood.

"There again you have another example of a community receptive to single features. As far as the Esquire theatre is concerned a double feature program is contrary to the policy established in this house and any deviation from this policy would hurt the business.

"In a majority of cases," he continued, "double and triple bills have become so established that they now seem to be a commercial necessity. There are three theatres within a half a mile of the Esquire showing double features and they probably will continue to do so. But we have built up a patronage on strictly a single feature program and our business has been, is and will continue to be good as long as we adhere to this policy," he concluded.

Triples in Evanston

Frank Ford, plaintiff in a pending anti-trust action involving clearance against Balaban & Katz and the majors, is trying out triple bills at the Stadium theatre in Evanston, Ill.

The opening program at the RKO Palace in Chicago, which reopened Thursday as the local first run for the circuit, was a double bill, "When the Daltons Rode" and "Private Affairs," instead of a single feature as originally planned. The house had been closed for 10 weeks.

Balaban & Katz is using first run double bills at the Riviera theatre, Chicago, which was the first deluxe theatre on the north side.

Kansas City, Kan., theatre owners, who have an organization of their own, inaugurated an experiment with single bills recently. Seven subsequent run theatres, for four weeks, will play "A" picture on the Sunday-Monday change on single bills. If the experiment proves successful, the exhibitors probably will extend the policy. The city's two first runs, the Electric and Granada, are not included in the test. Theatres involved are the State, Park, Midway, Osage, Home, Gauntier and Tenth Street.

"Brigham Young" Decision

In an effort to discourage exhibitors from the double bill policy, Twentieth Century-Fox has decided to let "Brigham Young" run for two hours and 23 minutes. A total of 369,000 feet was filmed, and this amount has now been cut to 25,000 feet. Further cutting will be necessary to bring the picture within the set limits.

Marking the first break from the regular double feature policy in the Milwaukee territory in years, all Warner and Fox West Coast houses will play Warners' "All This, and Heaven Too" as a single feature program.

Standard Theatres in Oklahoma City will provide the city with six first-run theatres, thus bringing new screen product there shortly after release dates. Second week holdovers have caused product to pile up on Standard's books.

ILLINOIS ALLIED TO FIGHT DUALS

Support of a fight against double and triple features in Chicago was voted Wednesday by the board of Allied of Illinois.

The strategy is to contact civic and social groups and educators in the city for expressions on multi-feature shows.

Close Chicago Office

The International Seat Corporation has closed its Chicago sales office. Chicago sales will be handled directly from the company's factory at Union City, Ind., by David L. Dewey and E. J. Fitzmaurice. Mrs. J. G. Feinberg, formerly in charge of the Chicago office is planning an extended vacation at Colorado Springs, Col.

Petrillo on Park Board

James C. Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians, has been reappointed to the Chicago Park Board for a term of five years by Mayor Edward Kelly.

U.S. Reports No Film Control in Paraguay, Peru

There are no quota or contingent laws in force in Paraguay, nor, so far as is known, is any legislation contemplated which might affect motion picture distribution, the American Consulate at Asuncion has reported to the Motion Picture Division of the U. S. Department of Commerce at Washington. Motion pictures are not produced locally, and legislation concerning their compulsory exhibition is therefore unnecessary.

Free Foreign Exchange

There are no laws in force which prohibit foreign exchange, and the prior-permit and import-control system established June 2, 1939, does not affect imports of motion pictures, since they are brought in for exhibition purposes only and remain in Paraguay for a maximum of 15 days. There are no laws in effect which give preference to films from any one country.

Approximately 180 films are required yearly to supply the Paraguayan market, with only one print of each, since there are no circuits, and not more than two theatres, situated near each other, would be likely to show the same films, and then only on a double feature program. Negatives are not imported and there are no facilities for printing positives in Paraguay.

Competition to American films has not progressed in Paraguay. American motion pictures account for about 90 per cent of the total exhibited. Argentine films advanced in popularity in 1939, but principally at the expense of productions from countries other than the United States.

Censorship in Paraguay is not strict. Although an Asuncion municipal decree covers censorship and requires examination, its provisions are practically ignored. The certificate of Argentine authorities is generally accepted in Paraguay. Previews are required only where the title suggests subversive or immoral subject matter.

There are only eight theatres operating in Paraguay at present, five in Asuncion and its suburbs, one in Encarnacion, one in Pilar, and one in Villarrica. The total seating capacity is approximately 3,000, but will be increased to about 3,500 on completion of the reconstruction of one of the principal Ascunsion houses. These seats are filled only on Sundays, in the late afternoon performance, and occasionally on Monday nights, when it is customary to present double feature programs.

Peru Open Market

There are no quotas nor exchange controls in effect in Peru, nor any other legislation that might reduce or prevent the distribution of American motion pictures in that country. Shortage of foreign exchange, however, the office of the American Commercial Attache, at Lima, reports to the Department of Commerce, in the last part of 1939 made it disadvantageous for American branch distributing offices in Lima to obtain dollar exchange for remittances to the United States.

No laws are in existence that require a certain percentage of Peruvian films to be exhibited in the country.

In the period from January 1st to November 15, 1939, the censorship board reviewed 967 films. This number includes features, short subjects and newsreels, representing a total length of 1,250,832 meters, paying censorship duties amounting to 49,904 Peruvian soles. Educational pictures, which are not subject to censorship duties, amounted to 48 in the January-November period.

American films continue to dominate the Peruvian market for, of those reviewed by the board, 320 were American features and 437 were American short subjects and newsreels. Other features reviewed were French, 70; German, 11; English, 11; Chinese, 13; Japanese, 26; Argentine, 25; Mexican, 11; Polish, 2; Cuban, 1; Italian, 8; Spanish, 4, and Czechoslovakian, 1. Three American features were rejected, one for having a gangster theme and two because they were said to be offensive to a foreign nation. One French and one Italian feature were also rejected for the latter reason.

The box office income derived by domestically produced films in 1939 as compared with foreign films was almost negligible, according to the report. It is said that the receipts secured from the exhibition of national productions in 1939 were in most cases not even sufficient to cover the cost of the prints. There are approximately 215 theatres in Peru.

DETROIT THEATRE'S REVIVAL POLICY

The Madison theatre, originally a first run house of the United Detroit circuit, has a new policy. With a standard price of 25 cents at all times, the theatre selects its bookings from requests sent in by patrons, the theatre furnishing the list of films for selection. The list consists of popular films of the past.

Post cards, carrying the list that are available for the Madison, are checked and returned at no cost to the patron and are sent out weekly. The theatre finds the policy a satisfactory one, reporting increased patronage each week.

Republic Holds Sales Meeting

Republic Pictures held a regional sales meeting for its eastern branch managers and franchise holders, at the New York home office on Friday, presided over by President James R. Grainger.

There are to be three more this year, at the Drake Hotel, in Chicago, on August 8th; at the Peabody Hotel, in Memphis, August 15th; and on the Coast, the date and hotel not selected.

Attending the New York sales meeting were, besides Mr. Grainger, Grover C. Schaefer, treasurer; Arthur Newman, Albany; Jack Bellman, Buffalo; M. E. Morey, Boston; Samuel Seletsky, New Haven; Sam and Jake Flax, Washington; Morris Epstein, New York.

Also, Max Gellis, Philadelphia; James H. Alexander, Pittsburgh; Nat Lefton, Cleveland and Cincinnati; George Kirby, Cincinnati; Samuel Gorrel, Cleveland; and Samuel Seplowin, Detroit.

Farnol to Coast

Lynn Farnol, director of advertising and publicity for United Artists, returned to New York City on Thursday, after completing a four weeks' course in military training for business and professional men, at Plattsburg, New York. He left shortly afterward for Hollywood, to join Maurice Silverstone, UA chief executive, and Charles Chaplin, in conferences on the advertising and publicity for Mr. Chaplin's forthcoming, "The Great Dictator."

Lange, Miggins See Total Loss Near in Europe

Whether American film companies may again conduct business in Continental Europe as they did, depends almost entirely upon the attitude of the German conquerors and the situation has deteriorated so much that less than 20 per cent of Hollywood's output may expect a market in Europe so long as the war continues. These were the opinions, this week, of Fred Lange, Paramount's Continental European manager, as he returned to New York from Europe.

Miggins Pessimistic

Corroboration of Mr. Lange's pessimism was reported from Hollywood Tuesday, when Ben Miggins, Twentieth Century-Fox European manager, arrived there from New York. Mr. Miggins declared that there was no hope for revenue from the European continent for a long time and that existing conditions made it impossible to carry on business.

Mr. Lange, in New York, said that, whereas 20 per cent of the Hollywood film product may find a European market during the war's duration, formerly 50 per cent of Hollywood product was used.

Saying he could not predict what regulations the German authorities would establish in conquered Europe, Mr. Lange added that continuing business there depended solely upon whether the regulations would afford the possibility of profit for the American film companies. If they did not, he said, he could see no reason for continuing to distribute pictures in Europe. At best, he said, Europe under war conditions might use 20 per cent of Hollywood's product. Normally 50 per cent of the product is exported.

Mr. Lange said the German military had established a censor board in conquered France.

While in Barcelona, and prior to his embarkation for the United States, he kept in touch with the situation in conquered France, he said. Thus, he heard that the German censors had limited theatre programs to 11,000 feet of film, and to films not inimical to their cause; that the German military had encouraged reopening of French theatres; that on July 7th 100 theatres in Paris and 25 in its suburbs had reopened; that German films were being widely shown; that, on the above date, there were 20 distributors active in Paris, three of them American, Universal, Loew's, and RKO; and that only Paramount and Loew's were still operating in Germany proper, Twentieth Century-Fox having withdrawn.

Also, in Barcelona, Mr. Lange heard that Germany had contracted to supply Spain with 80 films this year and, he added, it was probable that similar deals were being made by German film men with authorities and film people in conquered areas.

Only RKO is endeavoring to maintain European headquarters, Mr. Lange said. These are in Lisbon. Other companies are operating from home offices or regionally. He added that operations, for all companies, are haphazard.

Beginning immediately with the preparations for a campaign on the picture "Flotsam," Russell Birdwell and Associates have been retained to handle all publicity, advertising and exploitation for the David L. Loew-Albert Lewin Company. The company's next production will be "Night Music," from a play by Clifford Odets.

HOLLYWOOD WANTS "WHITE COLLAR" WORKERS REMOVED FROM LABOR ACT

Studio Workers Appear at U. S. Labor Hearings in Opposition to Producers' Petitions to Change Status of Thousands

While motion picture-corporate managements in New York were struggling with the Government over a settlement of the New York trust suit (see page 12), and the third phase of motion picture operation, exhibition, was disconsolately observing box office figures dropping in pace with rising thermometers, production was enacting, in comparative quiet, a little drama of its own in Washington, appearing before some high-seated U. S. commissioners to ask that thousands of "white collar" workers be exempted from the Federal Labor Act. Their arguments brought attacks from representatives of workers who would be effected.

Hearings were suddenly adjourned Tuesday, following the arrival in Washington, from Hollywood, of Pat Casey, the producers' labor contact.

It was indicated that probably no further hearings would be held, and if the Wage-Hour Committee does make a report on the basis of testimony taken, it may recommend that the producers, studio unions and talent guilds seek an argument with Los Angeles representatives of the Wage-Hour Committee.

For one thing, Hollywood would remove certain classes from the protection of the maximum work-hour day, also would have some 500 to 600 different classes reclassified.

Radio broadcasters want to do likewise. Here, too, opposition developed from among those facing changed status. Principally involved in both cases are so-called "executive," "professional" and "administrative" workers.

Status Claimed Not Clear

The recommendations of Hollywood producers were submitted to Wage House Division officials by Homer I. Mitchell on behalf of the MPPDA, who explained that out of an average employment of 18,541 in a number of studios which had been surveyed, 4,556 persons were found whose status under the act was not made clear by the present definitions.

Included in this group, he said, were actors, directors, screen writers, film editors, producers, location men, etc. He explained that many actors and writers could not qualify as professionals under the present definitions because they did not have the required "educational training in a specially organized body of knowledge"; and that many persons in what are considered administrative positions could not qualify because they are not engaged in superintending, managing or directing any group of employees.

Creative Character Stressed

Mr. Mitchell suggested that the Wage-Hour Division undoubtedly was familiar with the problem through the investigation recently made in Hollywood by Elbert Cocking, but Harold Stein, assistant director of the hearings branch, who was presiding, explained that Mr. Cocking's study was aimed merely at making the identification of jobs in the industry easier rather than an analysis to determine their status under the act.

"The motion picture business is really largely professional and artistic in character," Mr. Mitchell pointed out, adding that the business also is "varied" in that no two productions are handled in exactly the same way. The employees for whom exemption is being sought are persons who are intimately connected with the pictures to which they are assigned and who cannot be dispensed with at the expiration of any fixed number of hours but must stay with it as long as the film is in production.

Asserting that there was no doubt of the professional status of actors, directors, writers and other creative employees, even though they were without the "educational training" now required he suggested that the new definition provide for the exemption of any employee "who is customarily or regularly engaged in work which is largely original and creative in character and of which the result depends upon the conception, invention, imagination or genius of the employee."

To provide for persons in key positions who may not be engaged in directing the work of others, he urged that the definition of administrative employees be broadened to provide for any person "who is an essential member of the staff of a head of a production department, unit, or division of the employer's establishment and whose services by reason of his special or technical knowledge pertinent to the particular production process cannot be restricted as to hours without hindering, reducing or delaying production."

Guilds Oppose Move

Mr. Mitchell also proposed that the definition include any person "whose primary duty is to perform work involving the execution of special assignments or tasks requiring the exercise of discretion and independent judgment and whose work is performed under circumstances in which there is no direct supervision or control over the manner of performance," to cover positions such as those of location men.

Repesentatives of the Hollywood talent guilds and unions appeared before Assistant Director Stern Monday to oppose the producers' suggestions and urged that the definitions be retained in their present wording in the act.

George E. Bodle of Los Angeles, appearing for the Hollywood Guild Council, Screen Publicists Guild, Screen Set Designers, Screen Readers Guild, Society of Motion Picture Interior Decorators, Screen Writers Guild, Screen Office Employees Guild, Screen Cartoonists Local and Moving Picture Painters, testified that those organizaitons were opposed to "any and all" amendments.

The organizations he represented have 4,700 members, Mr. Bodle said. Several of the Guilds are composed of employees regarding whose exemption from the law there is no question, but they join with the others in opposition to changes because of the possible future effect of a broadening of the definitions, he declared.

Appearing on behalf of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees, Joseph A. Padway, of Washington, argued that the recommendations of the producers would exempt too many persons from the law and would deprive of protection a large number of jobs which do not fall into the exempt class except by undue stretching of the definitions.

Broadcasters Ask Changes

The broadcasting industry also is anxious to have new definitions, it was developed by Joseph L. Miller, labor relations director of the National Association of Broadcasters, who asked that the provision that an executive do no "substantial amount" or work of the same nature as that performed by non-exempt employees be dropped.

Mr. Miller explained that employment in broadcasting stations is small compared with that of the average industrial establishment and that, by reason of restricted budgets, it is frequently the practice for executives to relieve engineers or others for brief periods. Less than 1,500 radio employees whose average salary is $47.18 per week would be affected by the change.

The NAB also asked for an amendment of the definition of outside radio time salesmen so as to make it clear that salesmen for radio stations were exempt to the same extent as salesmen whose activities result in transfers of property. The present definition, Mr. Miller claimed, restricts the exemption to employees selling tangible commodities without adequate basis for such a limitation.

Opposing changes suggested by the National Association of Broadcasters, Henry Jaffe of New York, representing the American Federation of Radio Artists, contended that any change in the classifications would create a great hardship on thousands of artists. He declared the NAB was seeking to give exempt status to announcers and others whose duties were not of an executive, administrative or professional nature and that only program directors and company officials should be exempt.

BIOFF FREEDOM PLEA DENIED

William H. Holly, federal judge, in Chicago Saturday, July 27th, denied Willie Bioff freedom from a 1922 conviction for pandering on which he was returned to jail this spring.

Walker Butler, attorney for Bioff, said he had exhausted all legal efforts to secure release of the former Hollywood IATSE leader from jail.

Judge Holly cited a decision of the United States supreme court that sufficiency of an indictment cannot be reviewed in habeas corpus proceedings. In answer to Bioff's argument against return to jail 18 years after the sentence, during which time he had rehabilitated himself, the court held that laxity in enforcement does not nullify the original action of the Chicago trial court.

Exchange Decline Cancels Improved Chinese Business

by B. W. PALMERTZ
in Shanghai

Gauged by grosses from pictures released in the first four months of this year in Shanghai and North China, film business in this territory has improved considerably in spite of the European conflict and the continuance of the Sino-Japanese war. On the debit side of the ledger, however, is the fact that the improvement does not reflect in increased remittances from distributors because of a tremendous drop in exchange.

Admissions Increased

Shanghai's four first run theatres have increased their admission prices lately without a noticeable drop in attendance. Even in smaller theatres, where Chinese audiences are in the majority, business is better. The improvement can only be attributed to the fact that even with the increased prices, the cinemas are still the cheapest form of entertainment the public can find here. During the past six months the cost of living has gone up more than 200 per cent, and the average man in the street looks for entertainment which will give him the most for the least amount of money. The theatres have been the answer.

The distributors, however, are not receiving revenue commensurate with the increased business as measured in Chinese dollars on account of the drop in exchange. For instance, in January, 1940, the rate of the Chinese dollar to the gold dollar was C$12.74 to US$1.00. In February it was C$14.67 to US$1.00. In March the rate was C$15.00 to US $1.00, while in April it soared to C$16.66 to US$1.00. Today the exchange has dropped to C$20.00 to US$1.00. These rates, of course, apply only to Shanghai.

In North China, which includes Tsingtao, Tientsin and Peiping, most of the business is done in Federal Reserve Bank Currency (a Japanese sponsored bank) and the FRB dollar is even lower than the Chinese National dollar.

It must also be taken into consideration that the drop in exchange has made commodities relatively higher and the distributors today face greater overhead including office rental, staff salaries as well as an increase in freight and customs duties. The duty now compared with January, has increased about 42 per cent due to the exchange.

Japanese Areas Lost

Prior to 1937 the whole of China was open to business and the American distributors had a clear field. Especially in smaller cities, theatres were built wired for sound and the Chinese were becoming more and more educated and interested in American films.

Due to the hostilities, however, there are today only five key cities that can be served regularly by the American distributors. These are Shanghai, Tsingtao, Tientsin, Peiping and Hongkong. Of course, films are still being sent to some cities in the interior such as Yunnanfu, Chungking and Chengtu, but with the risk of losing the prints on account of the continual bombardment of these cities. The service is very irregular and films can only be sent by plane from Hongkong.

In the Japanese occupied areas which include big cities like Nanking, Amoy, Swatow and Canton, hardly any American films are being shown at present. Also Hankow, the big interior city on the Yangzte River is cut off because of the closure of this river to foreign shipping. In the occupied areas theatres are still operating, but these show only Chinese and Japanese pictures with a few independent English and French productions.

A film company has been started with a Japanese-Chinese backing, which distributes in these territories in much the same way as the Japanese controlled industry in Manchukuo. This company has approached the American distributors, offering to handle their films for distribution in these places, but so far no arrangements have been made.

Later on, if the new Central Government of China under Wang Ching Wei is able to control the Republic of China, no doubt American distributors will find it to their advantage to again serve all these places. It may then, however, be too late.

THEATRES LIKELY BOMBING PLACES

Motion picture theatres, particularly those presenting pictures of "controversial, political, racial or religious character," are listed in a New York State Police Bulletin as likely places for bombings, along with railroad stations, factories, churches, bridges and river locks.

The State Police laboratory will print an article concerning bombs and how to handle them in a forthcoming issue of its official publication. It is believed to have been prompted by the recent bombing at the New York World's Fair.

New Company Releasing 52 Early Day Comedies

Fifty-two early day comedies are to be released in the current year by the recently formed Motion Picture Jubilee Productions, New York, John J. Balaber, executive director, said this week.

The present plans call for the release of eight slapstick comedies (four featuring the late Ben Turpin, and four starring Snub Pollard) and the rest in September. All are synchronized one and two reelers.

Shea Theatre Opens

The Niagara theatre, Buffalo, newest of the houses in the Shea theatre circuit, was formally opened Thursday. The house, in the heart of the city's Italian colony, will present double features with programs changing three times weekly. City officials, led by Mayor Thomas I. Holling, attended.

In the basement of the theatre is a modern air-conditioning and heating plant, enabling the theatre to regulate its temperatures the year around. Plans for the structure and the entire architectural scheme was designed by Henry L. Spann.

Warners Set Up New Ad Service

Warners home office advertising and publicity department has instituted a new plan to assist theatremen in getting early starts on campaigns for the company's forthcoming features. Special advance proof sheets of both ad and scene stills will be sent to all branches, field men and theatre ad men several weeks before the regular pressbook on the feature.

This advance service will be in addition to the initial set of ad and scene mats which they have always received.

The first set of advance proofs on "River's End," have been mailed out.

No Actual Radio Confiscation in Event of War

by FRANCIS L. BURT in Washington

The United States Government will not take over the broadcasting industry, even if this country goes to war, it was said last week by James Lawrence Fly, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, in Washington.

Plans Now Underway

Plans for the coordination of all forms of communications, for national defense purposes, are now being worked out, as is known, and shortly will be made official by a proclamation to be issued by President Roosevelt, but these plans do not contemplate any interference with the activities of broadcasters, Chairman Fly declared.

"The Government is not qualified to take over broadcasting," the chairman asserted flatly.

"There is no occasion now, and I hope there never will be, for the radio industry to be alarmed," he said.

Under the defense program, the broadcasters, as well as other interests in the communications field will have committees representing them before the coordinating body, which probably will consist of representatives of the State, Commerce, Navy, War and Treasury Departments, the Federal Communications Commission and possibly one or two other Federal agencies having an interest in communications.

Complete details of the program have not been disclosed, but so far as broadcasting is concerned, it has been indicated that its role will be that of a medium of dissemination—to be the vehicle by which, in the case of necessity, the Government promptly can reach all of the people with such news, information and instructions as may be required by the situation.

However, Mr. Fly stressed, it is planned to "leave private operations in private hands as at present."

"It would be unfortunate," he said, "if the commercial operations of the broadcasters were at all influenced. There is no reason why the commercial operations should not go on absolutely unimpeded."

No Problem Seen

The chairman emphasized that "no problem" is involved in the handling of broadcasting, and that even in the event of war, the effect on the stations should be "very limited."

"Should we ever get into a war, there are some things the Government would do," he explained, "but I should think they would be particular things rather than any action of sweeping character affecting the broadcasting industry."

Complete cooperation with the Government in any plans to promote national defense has been pledged by the radio industry. Even though details of the FCC's proposed plan have not been announced broadcasting executives are showing a willingness to help. The only reservation being the hope that any proposal would not interfere with the rights of the individual stations.

Emergency conditions now confronting the nation will keep the Federal Communications Commission in full activity throughout the summer, Mr. Fly said. Whereas, in the past, it has been the custom for the commission to recess all but emergency matters through the hot months, plans are now being worked out by which any problems which may arise suddenly may be immediately dealt with.

LOEW AD DIRECTORY IS EXTENDED TO 5 PAPERS

New York Circuit Reports That New Plan Replacing Mailing Piece Is Success So Far

The Loew New York circuit's directory advertising in that city's daily newspapers, inaugurated last week in the Journal-American co-incident with the ending of Loew's Weekly and marking the end of direct mail advertising by the circuit, this week was scrutinized by the company's advertising executives, declared a success so far, and then extended, on Thursday, to the Evening Post, the World-Telegram, the Times, and the Sun.

Adopted Permanently

The directory lists all Loew metropolitan theatres, and the features being shown. It has been tried several times in past years but it now has been adopted permanently, replacing the weekly mailing piece which cost the company an estimated $400,000 per year. The Weekly, reached a peak of 1,200,000 copies distributed but which did not prevent an estimated 6,000 telephone calls daily to Loew neighborhood theatres by patrons who apparently did not read it thoroughly.

The circuit is to apply the money formerly appropriated for the Weekly to the newspaper advertising. The public, which spent an estimated $100,000 per year on telephone calls, may now save that amount or go more often to the theatre.

At the Loew home offices this week, it was said that it was too early to check the results of the directory type advertising and that it would take several weeks of checking telephoned requests for information at the neighborhood houses.

Flossie Flynn, head telephone operator at the Broadway home office of the company, said on Friday, July 26th, that the volume of the requests for information had not slackened. She said that at first, the operators gave the information, and then added, "see the Journal American" but after noting the indignation of those who were told to see the newspaper, the telephone girls ceased adding this admonition.

Estimated 1,500,000 Readers

The Loew directory, which on Thursday will be in five of New York's daily newspapers, will reach an estimated 1,500,000 persons daily. It was said by Loew officials that more of the city's newspapers might be added.

Noting that the one New York daily newspaper which does not accept paid advertising, PM, had already started a directory of neighborhood theatres, Oscar A. Doob, in charge of advertising and publicity for the Loew circuit, in a letter to the Motion Picture Daily, on Tuesday, said:

"The fact that PM does not accept any paid advertising puts this directory on a strictly news basis, and not merely as an adjunct to advertising.

"PM wants to build circulation; and its smart editors feel that the movies can help."

URGE RESPITE THROUGH FILMS

Neighborhood Theatres of Minneapolis in a recent Sunday issue of the Minneapolis Star-Journal inserted an ad calling on the readers "to forget the thoughts and worries of this troubled world" by making frequent visits to their favorite neighborhood theatre. The message, which was placed along side of the regular neighborhood theatre advertising copy of the individual theatres, assured the patron of "complete relaxation with the most modern comforts and carefully selected programs."

National Decency Legion Classifies Eleven Films

Of 11 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week four were approved for general patronage, three were listed as unobjectionable for adults, three were cited as objectionable in part and one was condemned. The films and their classification follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Fugitive from Justice," "Gun Code," "Military Academy" and "The Sea Hawk." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Girls of the Road," "Gold Rush Maisie," "The Man I Married." Paramount Signs Pal for Six Animated Subjects

Paramount has signed George Pal to produce six one reel animated character subjects for the company's new season schedule. The series will be known as the "Merry Models." Mr. Pal uses plastic figures instead of drawings, three-dimensional characters who perform against a background of actual sets, to the accompaniment of synchronized music, songs and special effects. He expects to begin production on his first subject, a western based on a story by Victor McLeod, in three weeks.

Honor M. E. Comerford

A precedent set in 1924 by the late M. E. Comerford was continued in Scranton this week when the annual Comerford Day was observed at the Scranton Boys' Club Camp. Friends of the late head of the Comerford circuit journeyed to the camp for the event. John J. O'Leary was co-chairman in charge of the observance.

Fox Signs Carter

Twentieth Century-Fox has signed Negro actor Ben Carter to a long-term contract.

Flippen Resigns as AGVA National Head

Jay C. Flippen, vaudeville comic, resigned from the presidency of the American Guild of Variety Artists, vaudeville performers' union, last week, being succeeded, as acting president by Dewey Barto of the team of Barto and Mann.

Mr. Flippen gave pressure of private business as the reason for the resignation; however, the guild has been torn by factional disputes and his resignation is one of many, seven of the 21 members of the executive board having resigned also last week.

The national board convenes on next Monday and may then select a permanent president.

Hoyt S. Haddock, executive secretary of the union, which has been, among many things, negotiating with the New York circuits for a closed shop contract, has been on the Coast; his arrival back in New York next Monday is expected to result in adoption or rejection of the contract, and in a resolution of the factional disputes.

Mohawk Makes Deals

Mohawk Pictures Corporation, which is distributing 19 pictures from the former Grand National Pictures schedule, reported this week that it had sold rights to the Illinois, Indianapolis, Wisconsin, and St. Louis territories to James Jovaney, head of Imperial and Superior Pictures; to the Louisiana and Mississippi territories, to Fred Goodrow, of Atlantic Pictures, of New Orleans; and that the company's present group of features is headed by James Cagney in "Something to Sing About," and includes two Stuart Erwin comedies, six Tex Ritter westerns, and 10 action melodramas.

North Carolina Promotions

Herbert F. Kincey, general manager of North Carolina Theatres, Charlotte, N. C., has promoted Emil Bernstecker, former manager of the Carolina and city manager in Charlotte, to district manager of the eastern theatres; Neil McGill, Imperial manager, to succeed Mr. Bernstecker at the Carolina and Sanford Jordon, Broadway manager to city manager in Lexington, N. C. Dewanner Stallings becomes Imperial manager; Clyde Wooten, Danville, Va., becomes manager of the Broadway in Charlotte. Roy L. Smart, former district manager, is handling buying and booking, and Harry Harding, booker, is now district manager in Charlotte.

Contracts Renewed

Anne Baxter and Robert Conway, Twentieth Century-Fox players, have had their contracts renewed by the company. Miss Baxter will appear in the forthcoming "The Great Profile," starring John Barrymore, and Conway is currently working in Jane Withers' latest film, "Youth Will Be Served."

Form New Company

International Pictures, Inc., has been formed in Hollywood to produce pictures in English and Spanish. Alexis Thurn-Taxis is president; Edward V. Rawlings, vice-president in charge of production, and C. David Biedermann, vice-president in charge of sales. The company will make "Gypsy Cavalier," starring Gilbert Roland, and it will be released by Monogram.

Secrecy Campaign

Despite secrecy, so far as publicity is concerned, "Piccadilly," latest Associated British production, is now completed at the Welwyn Studios under the aegis of producer Walter Mycroft. "Piccadilly" is set in peace time London, with no hint of war clouding it until the final passages. Set in Soho, cosmopolitan quarter of London's West End, the story has a murder theme, with the adventures of a woman crime reporter running through it as a background. Harold Huth directed the film, which is from a screen play by J. Lee Thompson and Lesley Storm, and Claude Friese-Green was responsible for the camera work.

Judy Campbell, one of Britain's latest screen discoveries, has the role of crime reporter, with Henry Edwards, veteran of Britain's screen constellation, playing the part of a Scotland Yard detective. Opposite Miss Campbell is Sebastian Shaw as an author of crime thrillers. Others in the cast include George Hayes, who portrays a lunatic actor, and Niall MacGinnis. The story has no connection with the E. A. Dupont earlier film of the same name.

With the completion of "Piccadilly," the Associated British unit now goes to work on the screen version of "The Farmer's Wife," rustic comedy set in Devonshire, and author of which is British dramatist Eden Philpotts. Casting is proceeding and the picture will be directed by Leslie Arliss, who with Norman Lee has written the script.

Twentieth Century-Fox To Make Seven

Immediately following the ratification of the new financial Quota scheme, Francis L. Harley, chief of 20th Century-Fox in Britain, announced a program of high grade British films to be made here at a total cost of £400,000 for seven pictures. All the films will be made in direct line with the new Quota scheme which encourages the production of high quality pictures in this country by American interests. The schedule provides for seven pictures, but so far only three titles have been announced: "Inspector Hornleigh Goes To It," "Kipps" and "The Ghost Train."

The Hornleigh film, which will include in its cast Cockney Comedian Gordon Harker and Scotsman Alistair Sim, with Phyllis Calvert as the feminine lead, will be directed by Walter Forde. It will be one of two Hornleigh pictures to be produced in 1940.

One of the most ambitious subjects of Harley's programme will be the screen version of H. G. Wells' immortal novel "Kipps." The cast will include Michael Redgrave, Margaret Lockwood and Phyllis Calvert. No other details have yet been arranged.

Radio and stage comedian Arthur ("I-thangyou") Askey is to play the lead in a new version of "The Ghost Train," which is to be made on lavish lines and which will be directed by Carol Reed.

During Robert T. Kane's absence in Hollywood Mr. Harley will be in complete charge of 20th Century-Fox's production interests. The pictures will be made under the title of 20th Century Productions Limited and all will be produced at Shepherds Bush Studios, where Maurice Ostrer is in charge of production and Edward Black is producer.

Meanwhile at Shepherds Bush Studios the Maurice Ostrer team are still at work on the Crazy Gang comedy "Balloonatics," in which the Flanagan & Allen, Naughton & Gold, Nervo & Knox sextette have the role of balloon barrage men carried away into enemy territory. Marcel Varnel is directing.

Sistrom Supervising RKO Production

William Sistrom who came here early in the year to supervise RKO-Radio's new production line-up and who left for America some months back has now returned "to supervise RKO-Radio's new production line-up." states that Company's publicity department.

Sistrom, it is stated, is to make films "on a scale comparable with the foremost features on the company's 1940-41 programme."

Harrison Working In "Major Barbara"

Owing to the calling-up to military duties of Andrew Osborn, Gabriel Pascal has now placed Rex Harrison under contract to play the role of Adolphus Cusins in the screen version of "Major Barbara." Cusins is the penniless but audacious professor of Greek who courts and eventually marries Wendy Hiller, in the role of a Major in the Salvation Army, withal the daughter of a millionaire armament lord.

Rex Harrison, who recently refused a Hollywood offer to play in Walter Wanger's "Personal History," has recently been appointed to the Royal Air Force, but has been told that he will have time to complete his work in "Major Barbara" before being called to the Colours.

Sutro Unit In Canada

In Canada at the moment is a unit despatched by Ortus Films, chief of which is John Sutro. The unit has gone to shoot sequences for "49th Parallel," picture in which both the Dominions Office and the Canadian Government are interested, and which is allegedly to dramatise the role of Canada in the world.

The Odeon Public Relations Department, which represents Mr. Oscar Deutsch, a financial father of the enterprise, states: "Mr. Vincent Massey, High Commissioner for Canada, is giving every help to ensure that this story is worthy to be the forerunner of others about the Dominions, and it is almost inevitable that one of the stars should be Raymond Massey, the Commissioner's brother."

Michael Powell is directing and the names of Elisabeth Bergner (now, it is stated, a British citizen) and Leslie Howard have been mentioned for leading roles.

"Information Please" is the title of a series of shorts now being produced by Concanen Films Ltd., with the co-operation of the War Office who have afforded producers Derrick de Marney and Dan Birt a free hand in preparing the script. The unit has already filmed the work and manoeuvres of British Local Defense Volunteers (colloquially known as "Parashots").

BRITISH INDUSTRY FEARS EXCHANGE CRISIS AFTER NEW RULES EXPIRE

Criticism of Quota Provisions Linked to Expectation of Confusion When Withdrawal Permits End in October

by AUBREY FANAGAN
in London

Sitting back to survey in perspective the wartime scene as illumined recently by the new defence order establishing an alternative quota process for American distributors, the industry is coming slowly but surely to the conclusion that though the best has been made of a bad job it is maybe not such a good best after all.

Crisis Seen in October

Criticism of the financial quota is still fierce—from the producer and labor points of the trade compass. Those among them who have welcomed what crumbs of comfort it has afforded however, have been slow to realize that the currency restrictions which exist color it a sickly hue. The situation after October next is, at the moment of reporting, dubious.

The recent issue of a permit for the Americans to use money from their frozen credits for the acquisition or production of British films is operative only until October 31st when the wider exchange agreement between the Americans and the Treasury expires. No continuance of that agreement has been provided for or even discussed. Since the majority of British film makers are counting on American money for their continued existence, it can be understood that the opinion exists that after October 31st major British production may cease entirely.

Credit Bank Promised

Most comforting of all assurances, however, has been the formal and emphatic promise of the Board of Trade, as voiced by Sir Andrew Duncan, that the Credit Bank, for the use and aid of independent British producers, is not abandoned. It is the Government's intention to proceed with this and to bring it into being immediately the situation—governed at all times by the international situation—is ripe. Indeed the Films Council has been asked by Sir Andrew Duncan to appoint a committee to assist the Board of Trade officials in drawing up an appropriate bill for presentation to Parliament.

Exhibitor doubts about the continuance of a sufficiency of product have been to a great extent laid at rest by the promise of the Board of Trade, already recorded in these columns, that if the supply of British films is inadequate for them to observe their quota commitments, they will be exonerated from their legislative duties. It is not surprising, then, that the exhibitor group have declared themselves as uninterested in percentage decreases. They see a note of salvation in the Credit Bank, and plead in its favor.

Most crucial of all considerations—though it has not been recognized as such in every trade section—is the question of currency control. As recorded above, the basic agreement under which the Americans have been allowed to remit a nominal fifty per cent of their monies to the U. S. expires at the end of October. No plans have been made to continue it, no discussions have taken place with the Treasury on its continuance, nor on an alternative scheme. The recent order permitting monies frozen here to be used to purchase British films was hailed on all sides as a valuable concession which, it would have seemed from the chorus of praise, was a virtual salvation of the industry. Only the Americans realized immediately that it, too, expired in October. After that they would be unable to secure release of their monies to make or acquire the super quality films provided for in the Alternative Quota scheme.

Obviously distributors arrange their programmes on a long term basis. Producers, too, are geared up for the production of numbers of films on a like long term basis. One film in fact must take a minimum of two months to prepare and produce. In most cases it takes considerably more. Any margin that is left between close of production and October 31st must be minute. In that margin many producers will have to concentrate the selling of their films.

The situation puts an immediate brake upon British production and upon the production plans of the foreign distributors here. It is known that the Board of Trade favors action which will make the situation clear and permit the carrying out of the intentions of the Films Act, and its recent addition, the financial quota scheme. Unless financial elasticity is allowed there is the danger that major production here may cease, for it would be uneconomic for the distributors to fulfil their quota by other than the most inexpensive single quota means under the old Act. Since they have the option of observing either plan the situation is admitted in enlightened circles as serious. How serious not all trade groups have yet realized.

Aid Voluntary Producer

One thing is agreed upon by all sections it would seem, and that is that a Credit Bank will assist voluntary production, and exhibitors and labor, more than mere pious words and legislative promises. Producers and labor have both lamented the absence from the recent alternative quota scheme of any plans to aid the voluntary producer. It has been pointed out that the scheme is essentially an alternative, and not a substitute for the Act which still operates. Critics who complained that the times were not ripe for the Government to take money from the production of armaments and national defence, and hand it over to the motion picture industry, have been answered by the reminder that the Credit Bank will be a Credit Bank and not a charity dole. From it appropriate and accredited producers could secure credits to enable them to launch their films, credits with Government and City backing, which would be strictly on a loan basis, and not gifts from the national exchequer. Sufficient safeguards are contemplated to remove all risks.

Most vociferous in their complaint against the recent alternative quota scheme have been the Labor group, the Film Industry Employees Council, who have canvassed all Members of Parliament for aid in securing further legislative adjustment. Though their Films Council representatives might have taken Sir Andrew Duncan's word that the Credit Bank would be materialized as a sincere promise, they have told M.P.s that nothing has been done to help the British producer. The new scheme they say "completely ignores the volnntary British producer who is the life blood of the British industry." . . . Indeed "if most of the American companies take advantage of the alternative proposals . . . film production in this country will drop by twenty-five per cent . . . it will mean the reduction of the present quota from 22½ per cent to about 14 per cent."

Quota Pro and Con

Their solution for this is that "The provision of the Act . . . that the actual total footage of films registered for renters quota must be at least half the notional footage (i.e. two or three times their actual length) be made a condition of the alternative quota proposals laid down in the new order."

It has ever been a firmly nailed plank in the labor platform that more and ever more quota films be an essential of film legislation, on the thesis that the more quota films the Americans are called upon to make, the more employment there will be in the studios. The theory has been challenged as a fallacy only in the London trade daily Today's Cinema where it has been argued that the more the Americans are called upon to concern themselves with production the less rosy will be the outlook for the independent British producer. Though the paper courageously contends the sanest and most constructive step would be to remove from the American distributor the onus of making British films at all, thus giving the whole of the field to the independent British producer, the new scheme is seen a happy via media, inasmuch as it has reduced the percentage of the American quota without reducing the screen time available for British films, thus increasing the exhibitor demand for independently made British films.

CONTRACTS CANCELLED FOR CLOSED HOUSES

Satisfaction has been expressed in exhibitor circles that those theatre operators who have been suffering because of the military protection of their districts have received sympathetic cooperation from members of the Kinematograph Renters Society. Some 15 applications for special treatment in distress cases have been considered by the KRS and it is known that members of the distributor group have cancelled contracts willingly for houses which have been closed.

Korda Will Retain British Unit Intact

Alexander Korda is retaining intact his British production organization, Alexander Korda Productions, Ltd., Basil Bleck, his attorney, said in New York last week. Mr Bleck indicated that Mr. Korda expects to return to England, probably in the early fall.

Meanwhile, his American producing company, Alexander Korda Films, Inc., plans three pictures for the new season. "The Thief of Bagdad" has been completed, and the next film, to star Vivien Leigh, will go into work about the middle of August. The tentative title is "Womanhunt."

Mr. Bleck indicated that although the producer has been giving consideration to the possibility of producing in Canada, he is of the opinion that technical facilities thus far are lacking in the Dominion for large scale production.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Candidate Wendell Willkie didn't require much make-up when RKO Pathe filmed him for their "Information Please" short. They said he's quite "photogenic," has the right contour, etc. Nor did they have much trouble with him. He only "squawked" once —when they tapped the Willkie countenance with the usual large fluffy powder puff that is used to dry up facial moisture caused by the heat of the lights.

The Republican Presidential nominee was made up and filmed by RKO in the studio of Fox Movietonews in New York's Hell's Kitchen. It's a rental place, used for odd movie jobs: trailers, advertising films, screen-tests, anything. A few days later, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, the wife of one Democratic Presidential nominee, was also "made-up," in the same place, for appearance in a prologue to "Pastor Hall," an anti-Nazi film about to be distributed by "Jimmy" Roosevelt, son of the President. She sat in the same barber chair, in the same room, for make-up, where Candidate Willkie had his face fixed.

The newly outfitted Studio theatre, formerly called the Sonotone, in downtown Chicago, has a "perfume bar" in its lobby. Reminds us of the old nickelodeon days when the highly-scented flit-gun sprinkled "ashes-of-roses", of a sort, between shows.

Maybe it's the heat. Anyway, legislators in Louisiana passed a bill raising the salary of state censors. Governor Samuel Jones vetoed it, because the state doesn't have any censors. It does have a law for censoring, but it was never enacted, censors were never appointed. There were no salaries to raise.

A "Jean Arthur Dog Show" was put on by Columbia Pictures in connection with its finishing of location filming of Wesley Ruggles' new film, "Arizona," at Tucson, Arizona.

The show was held in the lobby of the Santa Rita Hotel, was billed as "Jean Arthur's Mutt Show," and included all the canine actors who appeared in the production. This goofy assortment of crossbreds had been corraled for the purpose of providing local color on the Old Tucson set.

The Columbia star had been playing "Lady Bountiful" to this fine collection of stray pooches ever since the company went on location. Following regulation dog show precedent, blue, red and white ribbons, emblematic of first, second and third placings were awarded in all classes. Miss Arthur officiated as judge.

After the show each dog was provided with a three-year paid up city dog license, and a new home, which guaranteed its future safety from the city poundmaster.

Nothing surprises us any more. Columbia Broadcasting's Connie Crowder, who plays "Doris Cameron" in CBS's "Right to Happiness" air show, hates to get up in the morning, as who doesn't. But this little lady has rigged up a contraption that goes Rube Goldberg one better. Before going to bed she places her alarm clock on a glass jar standing in a pail of ice water. When she reaches to turn off the alarm in the morning, the ice water jolts her drowsiness as her hand drops into it. What keeps the ice water ice water during the night is something she doesn't explain, if she can.

DALTON "BODIES" MAKE GOOD

Universal and interested participants put on a wham of a "field day" premiere for the new production of "When the Daltons Rode", out in the Daltons' native Coffeyville, Kansas, sector, last week.

There were receptions and welcomes, banners and ballyhoo, all climaxed by a whopper of a parade.

Down Main Street they rode and marched. Floats colored the "spectacle", particularly one carrying four "bodies" stretched out on a rolling platform, to represent the four leaders of the Dalton gang. The truck pulling the float broke down. The "bodies", responding to the emergency, after a bit of prodding, unlimbered, jumped to the pavement and pushed the funereal float to the side of the road.

Survival-of-the-Fittest Department, being a movie note from the New York Herald-Tribune:

> Donald Dillaway, former actor who turned agent, tried to place a client in a role in "I'm Still Alive", at RKO. The casting director didn't like the actor client but offered the part to Mr. Dillaway, who promptly accepted. Dillaway is now out of the agency business.

The "ten most exciting persons in the world" is something in the line of numerical nominations that has been overlooked, according to Wesley Ruggles, who has supplied this great deficiency with his own list, to compete with the polls of the "ten best dressed," "ten most interesting," etc.

According to the director, currently piloting the super-western "Arizona," for Columbia, the world's ten most exciting persons (and the word "exciting" is something to be reckoned with these days,) are:

1. Winston Churchill.
2, 3. Mr. and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.
4. Fiorello LaGuardia.

6. Westbrook Pegler.
7. Lana Turner.

It was alright, except for a faint but persistent click-click-click throughout the waxing. Engineers turned the equipment inside out looking for the defect. Finally they made another recording. Same thing: click-click-click.

After an hour of exasperting searching they discovered the cause. Pauline was wearing a gown with buttons that kept hitting the keys. The job had to be done that afternoon, so they had Pauline divest herself of the dress and make the recording—sitting in her underwear.

Selevision, a new electrical installation which they say combines the advantages of telegraphy, sound, light and printing, was publicly demonstrated for the first time the other day in the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria, New York. The machine operates on the lines of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Use of this new machine will make it possible for a farmer in Florida or California to sell a carload of fruit almost immediately after it is packed, and, at the same time, obtain the competitive bids of all carload buyers.

The carload will be inspected while the fruit is being graded and packed. A certificate made out by the government inspector will describe the fruit so completely that buyers a thousand miles away can buy with as much confidence as if they had seen samples. This certificate is flashed to all buyers during the day of packing, and the next morning they gather at the Selevision machines to conduct the sale.

Paramount put on a special show for Republican Presidential candidate Wendell L. Willkie—who, by the way, still has to "make" Who's Who—at Colorado Springs. They screened "The Great McGinty," said he "laughed heartily" at the experiences of McGinty, a "bum" who became a governor. At election he voted as many as 32 times—McGinty did.

Up from the deep plains country of Texas, Hollywood Press-agent Joe Shea sends word of some real recognition of exhibition competition. Resigned to the inroads of the yearly rodeo, one Peyton Priddy went to town to make the best of it at his Palace theatre in the little town of Canadian, Texas, in the Panhandle.

Mr. Priddy took substantial advertising space in the local Hemphill County News, to tell the countryside that they MUST see the 18th annual rodeo. "It's to be the liveliest, the brightest and best for some time," Priddy shouted in print, and, showing a real sense of Texas hospitality, he invited visitors and townsfolk to use his telephones, to pick a cool spot in his auditorium to rest, to use the Palace as their headquarters. There were no strings. He kept the theatre open all day, turned on the house lights, turned off his show, 'til night-time, cancelling the regular matinee.

Brown Dissents

It is by the cutting of overhead costs which contribute nothing to screened results, and not by cutting salaries, that the problem raised by decrease in grosses may be solved, MGM producer-director Clarence Brown told MOTION PICTURE HERALD this week in Hollywood. Taking issue with a statement by Edward Small to the effect that in his opinion salaries should be reduced by 40 per cent because grosses have declined to that extent, Mr. Brown declared "hidden costs" of pictures could be reduced to effect economies dictated by circumstances of the time, without recourse to the cutting of salaries or diluting the quality of product.

"Reduction of wages," he declared, "should be resorted to only as a final expedient. Every studio has reducible overhead items which in many instances constitute deadwood. By eliminating them, or reducing them, savings of as much as 40 per cent can be achieved."

Brown, now preparing "Come Live with Me," vehicle for James Stewart and Hedy Lamarr, sees as outgrowth of the industry's cost reduction program an increase in the number of directors given producer ratings.

"Placing entire responsibility for costs on the director," he said, "gives them added incentive for paring expenses. The director is the logical person to shoulder the burden of financial matters as well as artistic matters."

In the next few years, Mr. Brown said, the number of producing directors will be more than trebled, due to the necessity for "streamlining" production methods.

"Combining the producer-director duties in one person is an ideal method of 'streamlining' production," he said. "A director, by virtue of his actual work and experience, is perhaps the best judge of the relation of cost to what appears finally on the screen."

Concentration on themes which appeal to the Americas was predicted also by Mr. Brown, who averred in the coming year very few pictures will have Continental flavour.

Producer and director of "Young Tom Edison" and "Edison the Man," Mr. Brown nevertheless believes biographical subjects are on their way out as film material.

"The life stories have to be dramatized in a good many instances," he said, "and, as a result, some film patrons quarrel with the liberties taken. But not to have taken the liberties would mean, in many instances, dull entertainment, and poor showmanship.

"So the remedy is simple—no more biographical topics."

FILMS FOLLOW THE CUSTOMERS TO TIBET

Del Goodman, Far Eastern manager of Twentieth Century-Fox and of 18 years' service in that territory, told the press while in Hollywood on his way to New York that demand for films in his area is on the increase in the face of war conditions, but barriers against withdrawal of revenues are multiplying in proportion.

"Despite disturbed conditions," he said, "we are pushing ahead and developing the market as best we can, looking toward a more peaceful era.

"We are selling pictures in all sections of the East with the exception of Japanese-controlled China. We have even managed to extend our operations and have followed evacuated Chinese civilian populations to the border of Tibet."

Chaplin Unmoved

Not all the discouragement, disparagement, disbelief aimed by Charles Chaplin in word and type by acquaintances and columnists since events across the sea gave rise to the thought that Adolph Hitler is not a subject for comedy at this time have dissuaded the comedian, who replies neither to inquiry nor suggestion, from proceeding according to announcement with "Production No. 6." On the contrary, he now has added to the sum of knowledge on the venture that the film will be released as "The Great Dictator," no matter what you may have read in the papers, this title having been released to him by Paramount, which owned it, and that he will have been in conference this week with Murray Silvertsone, United Artists head, and Lynn Farnol, director of U. A. publicity and advertising, on details of the exploitation campaign for the picture, outcome of these conferences to include, perhaps, release date of the film.

Cutting of the picture has been completed, says the comedian, and scoring is proceeding under direction of Meredith Wilson, radio composer and orchestra leader for whom August 27 has been set aside by the governors of the San Francisco Fair as "Meredith Wilson Day,' on which occasion he will perform for the first time in public a Chaplin composition entitled "Prelude to the Great Dictator." That is not described as a part of the exploitation campaign.

All Star Cast

Announcement of August 19th as date and Selznick-International Studios as place for commencement of shooting on the feature to be produced and distributed for benefit of British and American charities this week brought into focus of tangibility a project applauded by the community when reported in preparation a number of months ago, whereupon diners in the town's cafes, accountants in some of its studios, plied pencils in computation of the cost which would be represented by the salaries of the cast if they were to be paid for the services they have pledged themselves to donate.

As of now, with more pledges expected, the cast consists of Brian Aherne, Freddie Bartholomew, Madeleine Carrol, Ronald Colman, Gracie Fields, Errol Flynn, Joan Fontaine, Greer Garson, Cary Grant, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Charles Laughton, Anna Lee, Vivien Leigh, Herbert Marshall, Victor McLaglen, Ray Milland, Merle Oberon, Maureen O'Hara, Laurence Olivier, C. Aubrey Smith and Claude Rains.

Estimators who went on from there to calculate the cost of employing Edmund Goulding, Alfred Hitchcock, Zoltan Korda, Frank Lloyd, Victor Saville and Herbert to collaborate in directing a film, plus A. J. Cronin, John Van Druten, James Hilton, Aldous Huxley, W. P. Lipscomb, R. C. Sheriff and Dodie Smith to write it and Robert Stevenson to produce, are still at it.

Proceeds from exhibition of the feature, to be entitled "The Rafters Ring" and to cover 220 years of English history ending in 2,000 A. D., are to be donated to British and American charities. RKO-Radio is to advance the cost of production, at bank loan rate, and distribute the film at cost. Terms on which exhibitors may obtain it have not been revealed.

Captain Caution

(UA-Roach)

Maritime Melodrama, 1812

The ships in Hal Roach's production of Kenneth Roberts' novel are such as sailed the seas, under British flag and American, in the year of 1812, and the men who sail them live, fight and die in the tradition of that era. They are plotters and heroes, fighters all, and after a bit of singing for purposes of atmosphere at the start of the film, there is never a moment of repose until the dastards have been done to death and the good ship "Olive Branch" pointed toward America. Action, speed, dash and more action, with men battling in boatloads, in groups and en solo, with cannon, pistol, knife and fist—that is "Captain Caution," named for a hero who has none of it in him.

The role which gives the film its name is played by Victor Mature, seen in other Roach pictures, who comes to grips with Bruce Cabot, cast as a slaver, pirate and internationalist for profit, in the melee which follows upon the last of several ship-to-ship battles which make up the picture. Their fight recalls that "Spoilers" brawl of some decades back as has no other filmed since. It is the keynote of the production and an item for showmen to concentrate upon in exploitation.

Although the story is concerned with American and British ships in 1812 and the war of that year enters into it, the war is not refought for the occasion and neither is the dialogue tempered to fit 1940 circumstances. On the contrary, the American girl whose father is killed by a British shell and who sets out to sail her vessel as a privateer against the British for vengeance, speaks the words her counterpart of 1812 might have spoken. There are no hands-across-the-sea concessions.

Presented as a Richard Wallace-Grover Jones production, the hyphenation designating director and writer, the film contains a number of characterizations that rate billing in their own right. Leo Carillo as a French-Canadian furnishes a blend of humor and bambast; Vivienne Osborne, an etching of Parisian vivacity; El Brendel a demonstration in dialect set to music, and Pat O'Malley a bit that stands out above many.

The film is a departure from routine in setting, subject matter and treatment, a film full of action, color and thrill.

Mystery Sea Raider

(Paramount)

Nazis in the Carribean

This melodrama opens with the torpedoing of a passenger-liner hours after Britain's declaration of war, identifying a German submarine as responsible for that disaster, then moves to New York where a German agent, instrumental in arranging the first shipwreck, finances an American freighter which, once at sea, he mans with a German crew picked up from a submarine and operates from then on as a sea raider plying the Caribbean, sinking French and British ships and establishing oil-supply stations for U-boats. The time is now and the Bahamas are mentioned by name, location in that area by inference.

Ways and means by which the operation of a sea raider under present international circumstances might be conducted give the film timeliness of interest. There is no masking of national identities, the German spy being known as such to the audience throughout, but there is no denouncing of Hitler or Nazism or Germany in the manner of other war films of contemporary distribution and no atrocities are depicted. War is treated of as terrible in its effects upon the lives of the characters in the story, but no sides are taken in the one now going on.

Henry Wilcoxon plays the hero, owner of the ship used as a sea raider, Onslow Stevens the German agent who directs its operations, and Carole Landis the girl in the case. Eugene Zukor produced the picture, directed by Edward Dmytryk, from a screen play by Edward F. Paramore, Jr., based on a story by Robert Grant.

When the Daltons Rode

(Universal)

Frontier Action

Universal decided it wanted, at this time, a picture running the scale of entertainment elements from comedy to tragedy, from action to romance to suspense. So Harold Shumate was put to work on an original screenplay telling of the Dalton gang, which terrorized Kansas and surrounding territory during the middle of the last century, and George Marshall, who directed the studio's "Destry Rides Again," was assigned to guide the new film.

The result is "When the Daltons Rode," and it now can be reported that at last week's preview in Hollywood opinion was unanimous that all that the studio hoped for was delivered. There is more action and tragedy compressed into the picture's 81 minutes than has been seen on the screen in one picture for years. It tells of a family of four sons torn from their mother by a series of incidents which places them outside of the law. It tells also of romance and a gang of criminals, hardened by a world turned against them, plundering trains, banks and stage-coaches. It tells of their annihilation at what was to be their last "job." And it uses vigor, straightforwardness and brutality to depict the story of the Daltons, some of whose adventures were admittedly fictionized. Paralleling the underlying story of romance is the comedy, both of which temper the force of the action.

Brian Donlevy, Broderick Crawford, Stuart Erwin and Frank Albertson portray the Dalton boys. Randolph Scott plays the attorney who attempts to aid them in their court fights, and who falls in love with one of the youths' sweethearts, played by Kay Francis. Andy Devine is seen as the hired hand who joins the gang and is used chiefly for comic effect.

Others in the cast include George Bancroft, Mary Gordon and Harvey Stephens.

Shumate used as his script basis the book written by Emmett Dalton, sole survivor of the gang's "last stand," and Jack Jungmeyer, Sr.

Previewed at the Pantages theatre, Hollywood. The audience was enthralled completely, and sat on the edge of its collective seat throughout. It applauded long and loudly at the finish, and during the unreeling, especially for some of the outstanding stunt work.—V. K.

Busman's Honeymoon

(MGM-British)

Detection Yarn

A detective with an Oxford accent and a handle to his name is not necessarily any more of a box office draw in Britain than one in a derby and heavy boots. He is a novelty, doubly so when played by an American star. Here then the star value of Robert Montgomery, with Miss Constance Cummings as an extra attraction, plus the novelty infused into the "whodunnit" theme, plus the pulling power of Metro British pictures, means that this fourth of a quartette is sound box office material for the wartime era. There is no trace of the war in "Busman's Honeymoon" save a brief allusion to evacuated children. Probably in the U. S. the film, being one version of the life of the English leisured, will have additional features of attraction.

Though it measures up to the best Metro standard, the editing staff—surely with no ulterior quota footage motive—have been easy on the scissors. The story is long in starting and ambles on in a more than leisurely way. It is slick enough in its sophisticated dialogue and smooth treatment of situation, has a constant sparkle of laughter and some boldly tinted character touches. The Devonshire setting, with its thatched cottages and warm accents, its mincing parson, its choir practice and its public house, should be as fascinating to American audiences as a Virginian homestead is to ours.

Montgomery makes no effort to disguise his American origins, though he is cast as Lord Peter Wimsey, a detection-gifted aristocrat who finds himself caught up in a murder mystery in his honeymoon village. There is little to this particular murder, which seems plain sailing all along, but the parson and the policeman, a Scotland Yard man, and a chimney sweep are all dragged in—only to see Lord Peter diagnose it in a forenoon.

An afternoon audience attended the trade show, registered many and long laughs, but did not seem unduly mystified or, for that matter, unduly worried about it. The general consensus of exhibitor opinion was that it was an agreeable effort but overlong.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer British. Directed by Arthur B. Woods. Screen play by Monckton Hoffe, Angus MacPhail and Harold Goldman. Associate Producer, Harold Huth. Running time, when seen in London, 99 minutes. Adult audience classification.

Charlie Chan at the Wax Museum

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Murder Mystery

Added to the mystery, suspense and thrill of the crime and detection which the Chinese criminologist furnishes in each number of this series is, in this instance, the fascination of the wax museum, on the sightseeing-bus route in Manhattan, in which the murders are committed and the murderer captured. Effect of this on a Hollywood audience was to intensify interest and response.

The proprietor of the wax museum conducts it as a blind for an operating room in which he, a former surgeon, alters the faces of criminals seeking escape from the law. To him comes one of these who, convicted by "Chan," forces him to lure the detective to the museum for participation in a radio broadcast, planning to kill him. "Chan" is spared by coincidence, another detective occupying the chair intended for him, and from there on suspicion switches from one to another of a dozen suspects, including the wax dummies present.

Walter Morosco and Ralph Dietrich are down as associate producers and Lynn Shores directed from a screen play by John Larkin.

Golden Gloves

(Paramount)

Melodrama

Built with compactness and a wealth of human values, Paramount's "Golden Gloves" is the story, fictionized somewhat, of the start of the Golden Gloves amateur boxing tournaments. It offers for contrast a story of a young love against a background of action.

Leads are enacted by Richard Denning, Jean Cagney, Robert Paige and J. Carrol Naish. Support includes William Frawley, Edward S. Brophy, Robert Ryan, George Ernest, James Seay, Sidney Miller and others.

William C. Thomas is the associate producer, whose idea of making a film on the amateur tournament was developed by Maxwell Shane and Lewis R. Foster. Edward Dmytryk directed.

"Taggerty," a racketeer exploiting amateur fighters, arouses the ire of "Matson," a sports reporter, by his methods. "Matson," fired from his job by the sports editor, who is in the pay of "Taggerty," joins another paper's staff and talks the publisher into conducting a properly supervised amateur tournament. He is aided by "Crane," an amateur boxer, who is in love with "Mary." After several misunderstandings, the romance is smoothed out, the tournament is successful and "Taggerty" is defeated.

Previewed at the Paramount theatre, Los Angeles, to a most enthusiastic audience.—V. K.

Sing, Dance, Plenty Hot

(Republic)

Comedy with Music

Fabricated of humor, song and dance, with story and plot backgrounding but never overshadowing these, this is a picture in the tradition of "light, summery entertainment" and a midweek Hollywood preview audience liked it a lot. It fulfills, whether by coincidence or design, the present Hollywood definition of box office requirements, offering entertainment and nothing else.

Ruth Terry and Johnny Downs, as socialite and hoofer, do most of the singing and dancing, handling musical numbers of the swing persuasion by Jule Styne, George R. Brown and Sol Meyer. Comedy interludes, of which there are many, include two or three shared by Billy Gilbert, here seen in song and in a straight role as well as in his sneeze routine, and Barbara Allen, who is Vera Vague to radio audiences, a circumstance of exploitation significance.

Directed by Lew Landers with speed and conciseness, the story by Bradford Ropes and Vera Caspary has to do with the staging of a benefit for an orphanage by a producer intent upon receiving more of the proceeds than are due him. He is caught up with in time and the project succeeds. It is a Robert North production.

Pastor Hall

(United Artists)

Tragedy under Hitler

Appearing in person before an audience of journalists invited to the Samuel Goldwyn studios to view the first feature picture to bear his name, James Roosevelt described this importation as type of film "difficult to sell," explained that he had chosen it for his initial enterprise "first, because it is entertainment" and "second, because it leaves with you something you will remember for many days to come," then requested his hearers to "cooperate by passing the word along."

Lights went off and Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, on the screen, delivered a foreword written by Robert E. Sherwood excoriating aggression, oppression and curtailment of freedom of worship.

Neither Mr. Roosevelt nor his mother named Hitler or Germany.

The picture names both.

Produced this year in England and based on an unproduced play by the late German dramatist, Ernst Toller, the film depicts life in a German village before the coming of Nazi stormtroopers and after. It tells its story in terms of events affecting the life of the village pastor, his daughter, their friends and acquaintances. It is said to parallel a case of record and ends in tragedy with the death of the minister who opposes Nazi doctrine and practice from his pulpit.

"Pastor Hall" is drawn as a kindly man beloved by his parishioners, who strives at first to cooperate with arriving Storm Troopers commissioned to train the village folk to awareness of Nazi policy. He incurs the displeasure of their commander by declining to supply names of Jews, Catholics and residents in the community sought for disciplining, later by protesting the wrecking of a shop owned by a man whose grandmother was a Jewess, still later by conducting a burial service for a townsman turned Storm Trooper and executed as a traitor to the Third Reich for reasons not disclosed. The commander restrains his men from taking action against the pastor but tells the daughter of the evidence against her father and promises to spare him if she will yield to him. She declines and the pastor is sent to a concentration camp.

Episodes in the concentration camp, said to be taken from the British White Paper on the subject, excel in brutality, squalor, injustice and horror any included in the several American-made features indicting the Hitler regime. There are lashings as punishment, beatings for the amusement of the guards, killings without provocation. "Pastor Hall" survives these until the Storm Trooper, to whom the pastor's daughter now has promised to submit in exchange for her father's release, comes and tells him he is free to go if he will sign a pledge to preach no more against the Hitler regime. The pastor refuses, tries to rally the prisoners to resistance by his eloquence, is sentenced to 25 lashes every morning from then on.

The pastor's escape is finally arranged and his daughter attempts to persuade him to leave the country for America, but he returns instead to his pulpit and preaches a final sermon while the Troopers wait outside with guns ready to kill him "while attempting escape." (A secondary story thread depicts Nazi officialdom's indifference to the seduction of a 14-year-old girl in a work camp and her suicide.

Members of the press attending the preview, many or most of which had witnessed previews of "Four Sons," "The Mortal Storm" and other films in kind, gasped at some of the incidents depicted here, shuddered during the concentration camp sequences, told each other afterword that this picture has more impact and shock than any treatment of the subject to date.

(Republic)

Action Western

Donald "Red" Barry, who was brought to the attention of the exhibitor and fans with his performance in "Wyoming Outlaw" and later seen in supporting roles in other western productions for Republic, is now the star of the "Action Westerns" series.

In self-defense "Bob Wallace" kills one of the local gang. "Montana," trigger-man for the band of outlaws is assigned by his boss to frame the young rancher and by that means gain control of the water-hole on the ranch. With the aid of "Tom Benton," one-time gunman who has taken the straight and narrow path, "Wallace" escapes. The plot branches from there into two separate themes, to prove the innocence of "Wallace" and help him keep control of his property and secondly, to turn "Montana" from the life he's been leading as a gunman to one of a respected rancher, both purposes being accomplished.

Different from most of Republic's western productions this one does not contain the familiar singing renditions of its star but rather depends on the action, of which there is plenty, to hold the interest of the audience.

Dreary Drama

As explained in the house program for the theatre sponsoring the American premiere of this French film, this "production is the last to have come from free France." In such sad circumstances, the tragic tone of the vehicle is most timely and to the point. The dreary and depressing drama of murder and maniacs sounds a dirgeful requiem chord that Gallic gatherings is the States may wish to hear. However, for individuals who find no fun in attending wakes the woeful proceedings are a bit too sour to stomach.

Jean Gabin, who seems to be the first choice of French casting offices for portraying harrassed humanity is seen in the leading role of the harmless and romantic sand blaster who is driven to murder, insanity and suicide by the stings of jealousy and suspicion. Jacqueline Laurent, a wide eyed and petal faced young miss, Arletty in the role of an aging but still amorous vaudeville hall performer and Jules Berry as a sadistic animal trainer and pathological Lothario form a capable supporting background for M. Gabin's moving rendition of a murderer barricaded in his room as the Paris police close in on him. An effective musical score has been made for the production and there is some striking photographic work in several sequences, particularly of early dawn shots and tenement crowds.

The film begins interestingly enough with the murder of "Valentin" in the room of "Francois." While the police prepare to force the murderer out and in between bullet barrages, "Francois" via the flashback route recalls the steps leading to the fatal incident. From pathetic circumstances he has found a bit of happiness in the love of the beauteous "Francoise" but through the juvenile infatuation of the girl for the demented animal trainer, "Valentin," the romance begins to sicken with suspicion and jealousy. When "Valentin" visits "Francois" in his home to demand that the girl be allowed to see him, "Francois" is goaded into shooting his tormentor as he is implying the lax conduct of "Francoise." The unfortunate "Francois" loses his sanity under the stress of the police siege and ends his life.

(Monogram)

Mystery, Comedy

"Doomed to Die" is the newest in the Mr. Wong series. The San Francisco detective of Oriental extraction is again played by Boris Karloff. The film has a fair share of mystery and suspense and a couple of murders in the bargain. The murderer is prominently in the cast, among several other suspects, for the audience to put the finger on, but it is unlikely that most of the fingerpointing will find its mark as accurately as "Wong's."

The comedy element of the series is still in the hands of Grant Withers as "Captain Street" of the San Francisco Homicide Squad and Marjorie Reynolds as the girl reporter.

"Wentworth" and "Fleming" are operators of rival steamship companies. "Wentworth" has consistently refused "Fleming's" proposal to combine the two companies and to allow his daughter, "Cynthia," to marry "Flemming's" son, "Dick." "Dick" and "Wentworth" have an argument in the latter's office over the marriage and "Wentworth" is shot. The police hold "Dick" for the murder.

"Wong" is called in on the case by "Bobbie," a friend of "Cynthia's," who believes "Dick" innocent. The trail leads to a Chinese servant of the "Wentworth's, who, when found, is dead. With "Street" protesting that "Dick" is the man they want, "Wong" continues his investigation and in a climactic scene in the "Wentworth" home points out the murderer and the reasons why.

Screen Snapshots, No. 9
(Columbia)
Gags and Games

The newest number in the safaris to Hollywood is particularly refreshing and entertaining. Instead of the sacred tones usually reserved for annotating some of these pilgrimages to the lands of glamour, the baedeker is wired with the merrily mad gags of Ken Murray, radio funster of some repute. Snooping at the sporty screen star set, the spectator makes the rounds of various gaming places such as a tennis court where Judy Garland and Mickey Rooney demonstrate their talents, a golf links for a view of Richard Arlen, an all-star polo contest and a ping pong contest between John Howard and Marsha Hunt. In between transitions from one sport slant to another, Mr. Murray gags and clowns. The fan facts should be of some interest and for other sections of an audience not concerned with the playtime activity of picture personalities, the fresh flippancy of Murray patter should find a receptive ear.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Young America Flies
(Vitaphone)
Splendid and Timely

Material, timely in its content and splendidly handled in treatment, is the offering of this aeronautical subject, produced in cooperation with the Civil Aeronautics Authority. Using a representative group as it is to be found at Stanford University, the occupational study follows the embryonic wing candidates from classroom instruction on the fundamental principles of flying. The academic side of the preparation is supplemented when the students are enrolled in a Civilian Flying school and their actual experience in handling a ship begins. Further training is obtained in solo flights and an individual examination is given each candidate under the proctoring of a representative of the Civil Aeronautics Authority. A final written examination concludes the student's preparation. A starlet studded array of some of Hollywood's most engaging young folk enact the parts of the ambitious air aspirants and includes Jean Parker, Donald Woods, William Lundigan, and William Orr. Henry O'Neil is present as a professor of aeronautics.—Running time, 22 minutes.

Little Blabbermouse
(Vitaphone)
Merrie Melody Mixup

The mousey inhabitants of a drug store go on a conducted tour of their home after the establishment has been closed for the night. The excursion is under the supervision of a bloated and red nosed rodent whose similarity to a well known screen comedian is apparently coincidental and purely accidental. The trek via store's carrier system is informative and entertaining to the mice travelers until the outing is interrupted by the arrival of the shop's cat. The miniature's title refers to one of the passengers, a tiny mouse with a squeaky line of continuous chatter. The humor and situations are at times rather obvious and forced but should nevertheless raise up a chuckle or two.—Running time, seven minutes.

Patient Porky
(Vitaphone)
Looney Tune Bit

Porky, the porcine personality from the Looney Tune gallery, this time is troubled with an ailment that confines him to a hospital tenanted by animals. One of the bed inhabitants is a cat with ambitions of becoming a medico. The feline practitioner selects our friend Porky as the object of his special care. The unfortunate victim suffers some hectic experiences under the screwball administrations of the pussy sawbones but the audience should have an amusing time watching all the medical mixups.—Running time, seven minutes.

Trifles of Importance
(MGM)
Passing Parade

John Nesbitt's latest Passing Parade subject has three items rather than the usual one. Here are enacted three things of trivial importance but which became matters of importance. The first recounts how the lapels on a man's coat, the tails of a full dress suit and the buttons on a man's coat came about, all trivial at the time, but still the fashion today; the second has to do with "doodling," the scribblings that some people are addicted to, and the third, with an organization at the University of Virginia, known as the Secret Seven, founded, it is said, by Thomas Jefferson. Running time, 10 minutes.

Behind the Guns
(Merton Park Studios)
British Ministry of Information

This Government sponsored short has a purpose—to encourage work in munitions factories. It attains its end more than competently. By dramatizing the work of those who labor in shipyards, aircraft factories, and arsenals, it emphasizes that the war may be won no less in the factory than on the battlefield and tints the artisan's role in heroic hues. Films about machinery and factories can be dull. There is hardly a dull moment in this. The human element is constantly underlined, editing and camerawork combined with an apt use of the sound track has achieved a near symphonic form, and there is a complete absence of that juvenile pseudo-artiness which marks the modern documentary. Cecil Musk and Montgomery Tully were producer and director respectively. The collaboration of the CEA and the Newsreels has secured a nationwide screening for the film. Running time, 21 minutes.—AUBERY FLANAGAN.

Matty Malneck and His Band
(Vitaphone)
Melody Moments

Matty Malneck and his orchestral assistants give out with a tune tickling round of musical moments in this current concert from the Melody Master podium. The recital runs the do-re-me gamut from a rendition of Hawaiian rondelays to a performance of the "William Tell Overture." Maestro Malneck obliges with several violin recitals. The purpose of the display is musical entertainment and this is offered without any impeding dialogue or interrupting vaudeville turns. The result of the effort is material that should lighten any program makeup, especially during sweltering summer sessions.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Shark Hunting
(Vitaphone)
Angling with Bow and Arrow

Howard Hill, billed as the world's greatest archer, pits his aim and accuracy against shark baiting in this interesting and exciting miniature subject. Mr. Hill's talent with his bow and arrow has been on display in previous pictorial studies. Now once again Mr. Hill demonstrates his steady aim and sure fire eye in making bull's eye shots at targets ranging from a cork top as it bobs unsteadily on the water to piercing the head of a man eater shark pursuing a pair of frantic swimmers as they struggle to escape the snap of the monster's sharp teeth. The archery exhibition makes for unusual and thrilling pictorial moments.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Going Places, No. 79
(Universal)
Pacific Curios

The Pacific Northwest is the locale of this educational subject on the inhabitants of the ocean and its shores and the curiosities forged and cast upon its beaches. In the caves near Florence, Oregon, hundreds of sea lions take shelter from the pounding surf and can be seen in their protective habitat from the many balconies frequented by tourists. Other curios that make up the remainder of the subject are Neptune's Marbles, spherical stones, found in "pot holes" along the coast where pounding waves shape them from the soft sand. The subject also contains scenes of the various clams that are found along these shores—Running time, 9¼ minutes.

Junior G-Men
(Universal)
Juvenile Chapter Play

Episode entertainment contained in this chapter play is especially pointed in the direction of juvenile appreciation and endorsement. Staffed chiefly with adventurous adolescents, the material should be close to the cinematic heart of all youthful admirers and aspirants to the romantic vocation of "G-Men." Initial installments reveal a gang of young toughies who mix blows and insults with a crowd of more refined youngsters who have incorporated themselves into a division of "Junior G-Men." The leader of the hoodlum mob happens to be the long lost son of an inventor who at present is being held captive by a secret and subversive organization attempting to establish a terroristic and dictatorial regime. The kids become involved with falling elevators, deadly explosives and runaway cars. The miniature mobsters are portrayed by the "Dead End Kids" with supplementary smart alecky assistance from the "Little Tough Guys." Billy Halop and Huntz Hall are the chief tenement roughnecks and through their long experience with such assignments snarl and swagger with expert fashion. Kenneth Howell is the young fellow from the other side of the tracks who runs the "G-Men" prep school.—Running time, 12 chapters, two reels each. Release date, October 1, 1940.

INCREASED USE OF COLOR SEEN FOR 1940-41 SEASON

But Flexible Schedules Make Determination of Trend Uncertain; Shorts Are Increased

War economies or no, there is every indication in Hollywood that there will be more features and short subjects in color during the 1940-41 season than during the season just closing. Exact determination of the number of productions to be tinted during the coming year cannot be made, however, because of the flexibility of production schedules arising from the effect of the war and related events on grosses both here and abroad.

Commitments Set

Technicolor, which processed 16 features, 67 cartoons and 24 shorts, exclusive of advertising films, last year, already has commitments for the new season for 15 features, 85 cartoons and 27 shorts. The company expects many more industrial films than the 41 processed last year.

Cinecolor, which last year processed two features, has commitments for at least four this year, continuation of the Fairbanks-Carlisle shorts for Paramount, and an extensive backlog of industrial film work.

A great upsurge in the amount of Cinecolor business is expected, according to A. L. McCormick, president of the corporation, when in two months its new three-color process is ready for the industry.

On the other hand, Dunningcolor finds itself stymied because of the war raging in Europe. Its newly developed three-color process using a single negative cannot be marketed for it is impossible to get certain materials necessary for the work from Holland, now under Nazi domination.

However, two short subjects produced and processed by Dunningcolor have been acquired by Paramount for release. The subjects are travelogues of Hawaii, and the first, "Pacific Paradise," is now being re-recorded and narrated by Paramount. Both will be dubbed in Spanish and Portuguese dialogue also.

Because of the blocking of importation of materials from Holland, Dunningcolor is at present primarily engaged in making slide films for commercial accounts.

Slot Machine Business Expected

A boom in the business done by Cinecolor and Technicolor is expected from the coin-operated, automatic projection field. Various companies now producing or planning production for the boxes are investigating color possibilities and several contracts are in the negotiation stage.

Latest color enthusiast is C. B. DeMille, who in using Technicolor for the first time with "North West Mounted Police," completed the Paramount release in nine days less than the scheduled time and for considerably less than the estimated budget. As a result, his next three pictures for Paramount, "Reap the Wild Wind," "The Queen of Queens," and "Rurales," will be in Technicolor.

Added stimulus to Technicolor business is expected as a result of the recently announced reduction of one cent per foot on release prints.

Technicolor cameras are currently in work on "Bambi" and "Fantasia," Walt Disney features; "Bittersweet," MGM; "Down Argentine Way," 20th Century-Fox, and Paramount's "Virginia."

Finished and scheduled for release soon are "The Return of Frank James," 20th Century-Fox; DeMille's aforementioned "North West Mounted Police"; "Queen of Destiny," Herbert Wilcox production, starring Anna Neagle and made last year in England; and Alexander Korda's "The Thief of Bagdad."

Technicolor contracts have been signed for the following: "Aloma of the South Seas" and "Shepherd of the Hills," Paramount; "Chad Hanna" and "Western Union," 20th Century-Fox; "Blood Will Tell," David Butler production for RKO.

The Cinecolor commitments are three to be produced for Monogram by Charles E. Goetz, who last year produced "Gentleman from Arizona" in that medium; and at least one, "Gypsy Cavalier," to be made for Monogram release by the newly formed International Pictures. The other picture processed in Cinecolor last year was Fine Arts' "Isle of Destiny," released by RKO.

Hinging on the inauguration of the three-color process, according to Cinecolor's President McCormick, are several feature deals with major studios.

Cinecolor expects to receive the bulk of 16 mm. automatic projection machine print business if and when the producers decide to use color. It will shortly announce to the trade a new process by which, it is claimed, true fidelity of 35 mm. sound can be given 16 mm. prints. The new method of reducing 35 mm. sound to 16 mm. prints has been in work for some time, and shortly will be available on a large scale, according to Mr. McCormick.

20th-Fox and Terry-Toons Sign Long Term Renewal

Twentieth Century-Fox and Terry-Toons have signed a long term renewal contract for the distribution of Paul Terry's animated cartoons. The current contract has one year to go. The distributing company has been handling the cartoons for seven years and, according to an announcement, the new contract will extend into the second decade, indicating that the deal is for at least two years.

With the current season schedule and the long term renewal to follow, the cartoon organization is committed to deliver more than 100 pictures for distribution by Twentieth Century-Fox.

Slot Machine Subjects

The first series of short subjects for coin-operated automatic projection machines scheduled to be made by James Roosevelt's Globe Productions have been completed. With Henry Henigson as production head, Globe has completed eight subjects for the Mills Novelty Company machines.

New Darmour Series

A series of "Ellery Queen" films will replace the Jack Holt pictures on the Larry Darmour schedule for Columbia release. Mr. Darmour has signed Manfred B. Lee and Frederick Dannay to write the screen plays.

Hellinger Option Renewed

Warner Brothers have renewed Mark Hellinger's option, as associate producer, for one more year.

FROM READERS

SERVICE BEYOND LINE OF DUTY

To the Editor of the Herald:

About two weeks ago we were playing a picture from Universal called "Alias the Deacon" which was to come to us by express, the last express train to arrive here in time for our opening. Upon the arrival of this train we found that the print was not aboard, and realizing that we were practically out of business without it we called the Indianapolis Universal branch. The booker there went into action at once and in checking with their shipper and the express company found that they had been misinformed and that the print was still lying in their office. The booker called me back in about ten minutes saying that their salesman, Bill Sherman, had been located and that he was going to drive the print down to us. We are about eighty miles from Indianapolis and the time was getting short and we were a bit worried about Bill Sherman getting here in time. But when the time came for us to open, in comes Bill with the print and were we relieved. He had to step on it all the way here too.

We feel that this was a swell thing for Bill Sherman to do for us and we do feel that it is something new for film salesmen to deliver film. It's things like this that will cause Bill Sherman to attain greater things.

FDR'S ELLIOTT THREATENS TO GET U.S. AFTER BROADCASTERS OVER ASCAP

President's Son, as Executive of Texas Network, Signs with Society and Attacks Radio Industry as Monopoly

Elliott Roosevelt, the President's son, has taken up the defense of the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers, in the society's fight with the organized broadcasting industry, over music royalties.

On Friday, July 26th, in the board room of the society in Rockefeller Center, amidst newspaper and radio trade press men, Elliott Roosevelt, as president of the independent Texas State Network, set his hand to the new five year ASCAP contract, which supplants the present contract with broadcasters at the end of this year. He then assailed the broadcasters for "attempting to muzzle the American songwriter" and challenged the National Association of Broadcasters, to "discipline" him.

Hailed as Victory

The ceremony attendant upon Mr. Roosevelt's signing of the new ASCAP contract apparently was dictated by the Society's view of Mr. Roosevelt's adherence as a victory, its first major one in the fight with the National Association of Broadcasters, which has been boiling for about five months, and which has been marked by the Association's establishment of a new music source for radio, screen, and stage, Broadcast Music, Inc. Mr. Roosevelt's network is the first to sign the new ASCAP contract.

Mr. Roosevelt charged that the Broadcasters' Association was controlled by the chains in New York, that it had threatened individual broadcasters with discipline if they dealt with ASCAP, and that, if similarly threatened, he would act through the Federal Communications Commission and the courts.

"The air waves belong to the American people," he said, "and I challenge the right of any self-appointed, self-anointed rulers of the air to dictate to the people of Texas what they may or may not listen to on their radios."

Assails BMI

Broadcast Music, also, was assailed by Mr. Roosevelt:

"Exclusively plugging the music of subsidized songwriters and subsidized subsidiaries is definitely in their own interest, without regard for the FCC, or the public, or the rights of other songwriters. If this discrimination is permitted, there is nothing to stop the chains from ultimately swallowing the music industry. It would thereby exert an unhealthy control of tremendous investments involved in allied industries, such as motion pictures, the theatres, dance halls, hotels, night clubs, and other activities too numerous to mention, which depend in great part for music to safeguard investments."

In Mr. Roosevelt's Texas chain are stations KFJZ, Fort Worth; KABC, San Antonio; KCMC, Texarkana; KPLT, Paris; KBST, Big Spring; KRBC, Abilene; KGKL, San Angelo; WACO, Waco; KNOW, Austin.

Mr. Roosevelt charged the big chains had ignored the FCC regulations anent monopoly, and now controlled numerous affiliates and subsidiaries, such as artists' bureaus, concert bureaus, lecture bureaus, recording companies, networks, and affiliated stations and that they also controlled individual stations through long term contracts.

Even while Elliott Roosevelt was signing the new ASCAP contract last Friday, the NAB, its creation, BMI, and its components, the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting Company proceeded with their campaign to make radio broadcasting independent of ASCAP music. On the same day, Paul W. Kesten, vice-president of the CBS, in a letter to advertising agencies and their clients, called for help to thwart "ASCAP's $4,400,000 squeeze-play" against radio.

Mr. Kesten described the broadcasting industry fight against ASCAP as one "to protect radio advertisers and broadcasters alike from a $4,400,000 holdup, over and above an unjustified $4,300,000 toll paid in 1939 for the privilege of broadcasting music which ASCAP controls."

CBS Attacks Society

The letter outlined the growth of ASCAP tolls, charging in conclusion that in 1939 radio paid ASCAP 40 times as much per dollar of revenue as did any other user of music. It also detailed the organization and operation of BMI, asserting that over 300 stations representing approximately three quarters of the business done by the entire industry, had together with the networks, contributed over $1,250,000 to BMI.

Mr. Kesten noted that the network, and other NAB members, were not to be dependent only on BMI music. He listed the catalogues of the Society of European Stage Authors and Composers, the A. P. Schmidt Company, the Associated Music Publishers, A. Ricordi and Company, of Milan, the E. C. Schirmer Music Company, and others.

The CBS letter followed by one week letters, also to advertisers and their agencies, from the newly elected NBC president Niles R. Trammell, similarly apprising the recipients of progress to date, and also telling them that, after Wednesday, all orchestras broadcasting on NBC sustaining programs shall schedule at least one non-ASCAP composition during each of their NBC broadcast periods.

The NAB refused to allow a representative of ASCAP to address its annual convention, which begins next Monday in San Francisco. The reply of Neville Miller, president of the NAB, to John G. Paine, general manager of ASCAP, in which was contained the refusal, was understood to be somewhat sarcastic.

This week, band leaders through the country were appraising the NBC and CBS orders anent the increased use of non-ASCAP music, and the possibility they might have to eliminate the Society's music entirely by the year's end. They noted that this was the first time band leaders had been told by the networks what they might play.

Broadcast Music, Inc., this week continued to sign new composers, to plug its music among band leaders and member stations, and to try to gain the music catalogues of Robins, Feist, and Miller, MGM publishing houses; though success of the latter endeavor is regarded now as doubtful, after weeks of negotiation.

George Marlo, general professional manager of BMI, last week announced the retention of Billy Chandler and Jerry Lewin as contact men in New York; of Harry Hume, as the same, in California; and of James Cairns, in that capacity, in Chicago.

ASCAP Paris Man Jailed

New York friends of Hugo Bryk, representative of ASCAP in Paris, said this week that they heard he has been in a concentration camp since the Germans occupied that city.

U.S. Probing Ascap Directly, Questioning All Members

Again charging that its harassment is instigated by the radio networks against which it is battling for control of the supply of music to radio, the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers this week was subjected to questionnaires from the United States Department of Justice. They went to individual members, in New York and elsewhere, and are part of a quiet investigation of the Society's alleged monopoly of music, which the Department has been pursuing for several years. The Government also has been conducting a federal grand jury investigation of ASCAP.

The questionnaires ask individual ASCAP members whether they were allowed discretion in determining terms of contracts between the Society and music publishers and also whether, before joining the Society, they found difficulty in having their works played because they did not belong to it. There are also other questions.

Membership in ASCAP is by application, after the applicant has had five songs published by music publishers who are ASCAP members.

The Society lists the Department's investigation, and this latest manifestation of it, as part of the persecution to which it has been subjected since it began to fight with the broadcasters openly, after revealing the terms of its new five-year contracts, which are to take effect at the expiration of the present contracts, December 31st. The National Association of Broadcasters, about five months ago, established Broadcast Music, Inc., which, it hopes, will supplant ASCAP as a music source; that was one harassment, the Society feels. Gene Buck, the Society's president, was arrested on February 22nd, in Arizona, in a royalty dispute with a Montana station. That was another harassment, the Society says.

The first territorial meeting to draft plans to combat 16mm slot machine competition will be held in Pittsburgh shortly, it was indicated this week. Invitations will be extended to exhibitors in the Pittsburgh and West Virginia territory, and to all exchange managers in Pittsburgh.

New Strength Seen

The Western Pennsylvania affiliate of Allied is back of the move but it also has additional strength for at a meeting recently at the allied quarters in Pittsburgh representatives from the Warner and Harris circuits attended.

A 16 mm. coin-operated machine has been placed in the Oakwood Grill in the suburban Homewood district of Pittsburgh. The machine has eight film subjects of approximately three minutes running time each, the slot taking a dime for each exhibition.

Local 171, operators, claims jurisdiction over coin-operated movie machines and will demand servicing of all 16 mm. projectors which may be installed in the Pittsburgh district. The number of units to be serviced by one operator will depend on the location of the machines.

The city council of Champaign, Ill., has repealed two ordinances requiring licenses for coin vending machines, musical devices and film amusement machines. Approximately 2,300 citizens signed petitions protesting the ordinances, claiming they were unreasonable and would tax the operators out of business. Film theatre owners will present a vigorous protest at the next council meeting.

The New York State censor board plans to watch closely the use of slot machine films in the state. "Any motion picture film which is displayed with admission charge in New York State is subject to review and needs a state seal," Irwin Esmond, censor chief, told MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S Albany correspondent this week.

The Chicago police censor has ruled that all 16 mm films exhibited commercially in that city must be submitted for examination. Because the censor's office is without 16 mm projectors, distributors and exhibitors must bring their equipment for the screenings.

Film Troubles in Mexico Mounting

by JAMES LOCKHART

in Mexico City

Mexico's motion picture industry problems are increasing and there are many here who doubt that the industry will be able to survive much longer unless something drastic happens. These troubles are attributed to a variety of reasons, among them, poor organization and quality, bad distribution, labor conflicts and favoritism in the casting of players.

Production Drops

These circumstances, it is claimed, caused production to drop from 60 films in 1938 to 38 in 1939. Thirty-four of the pictures made in 1939 were not exhibited as compared with 26 not exhibited in the preceding year. The number of Mexican producers who were active slumped from 48 in 1938 to 22 last year. At the end of last year only seven of the 24 Mexican distributors functioning in 1938 were still in business.

However, the exhibiting branch of the business is holding up well. Figures covering the grosses of theatres in Mexico City show that their receipts for the first 10 months of last year was $3,006,000 as compared with $1,515,000 in the corresponding period of 1935.

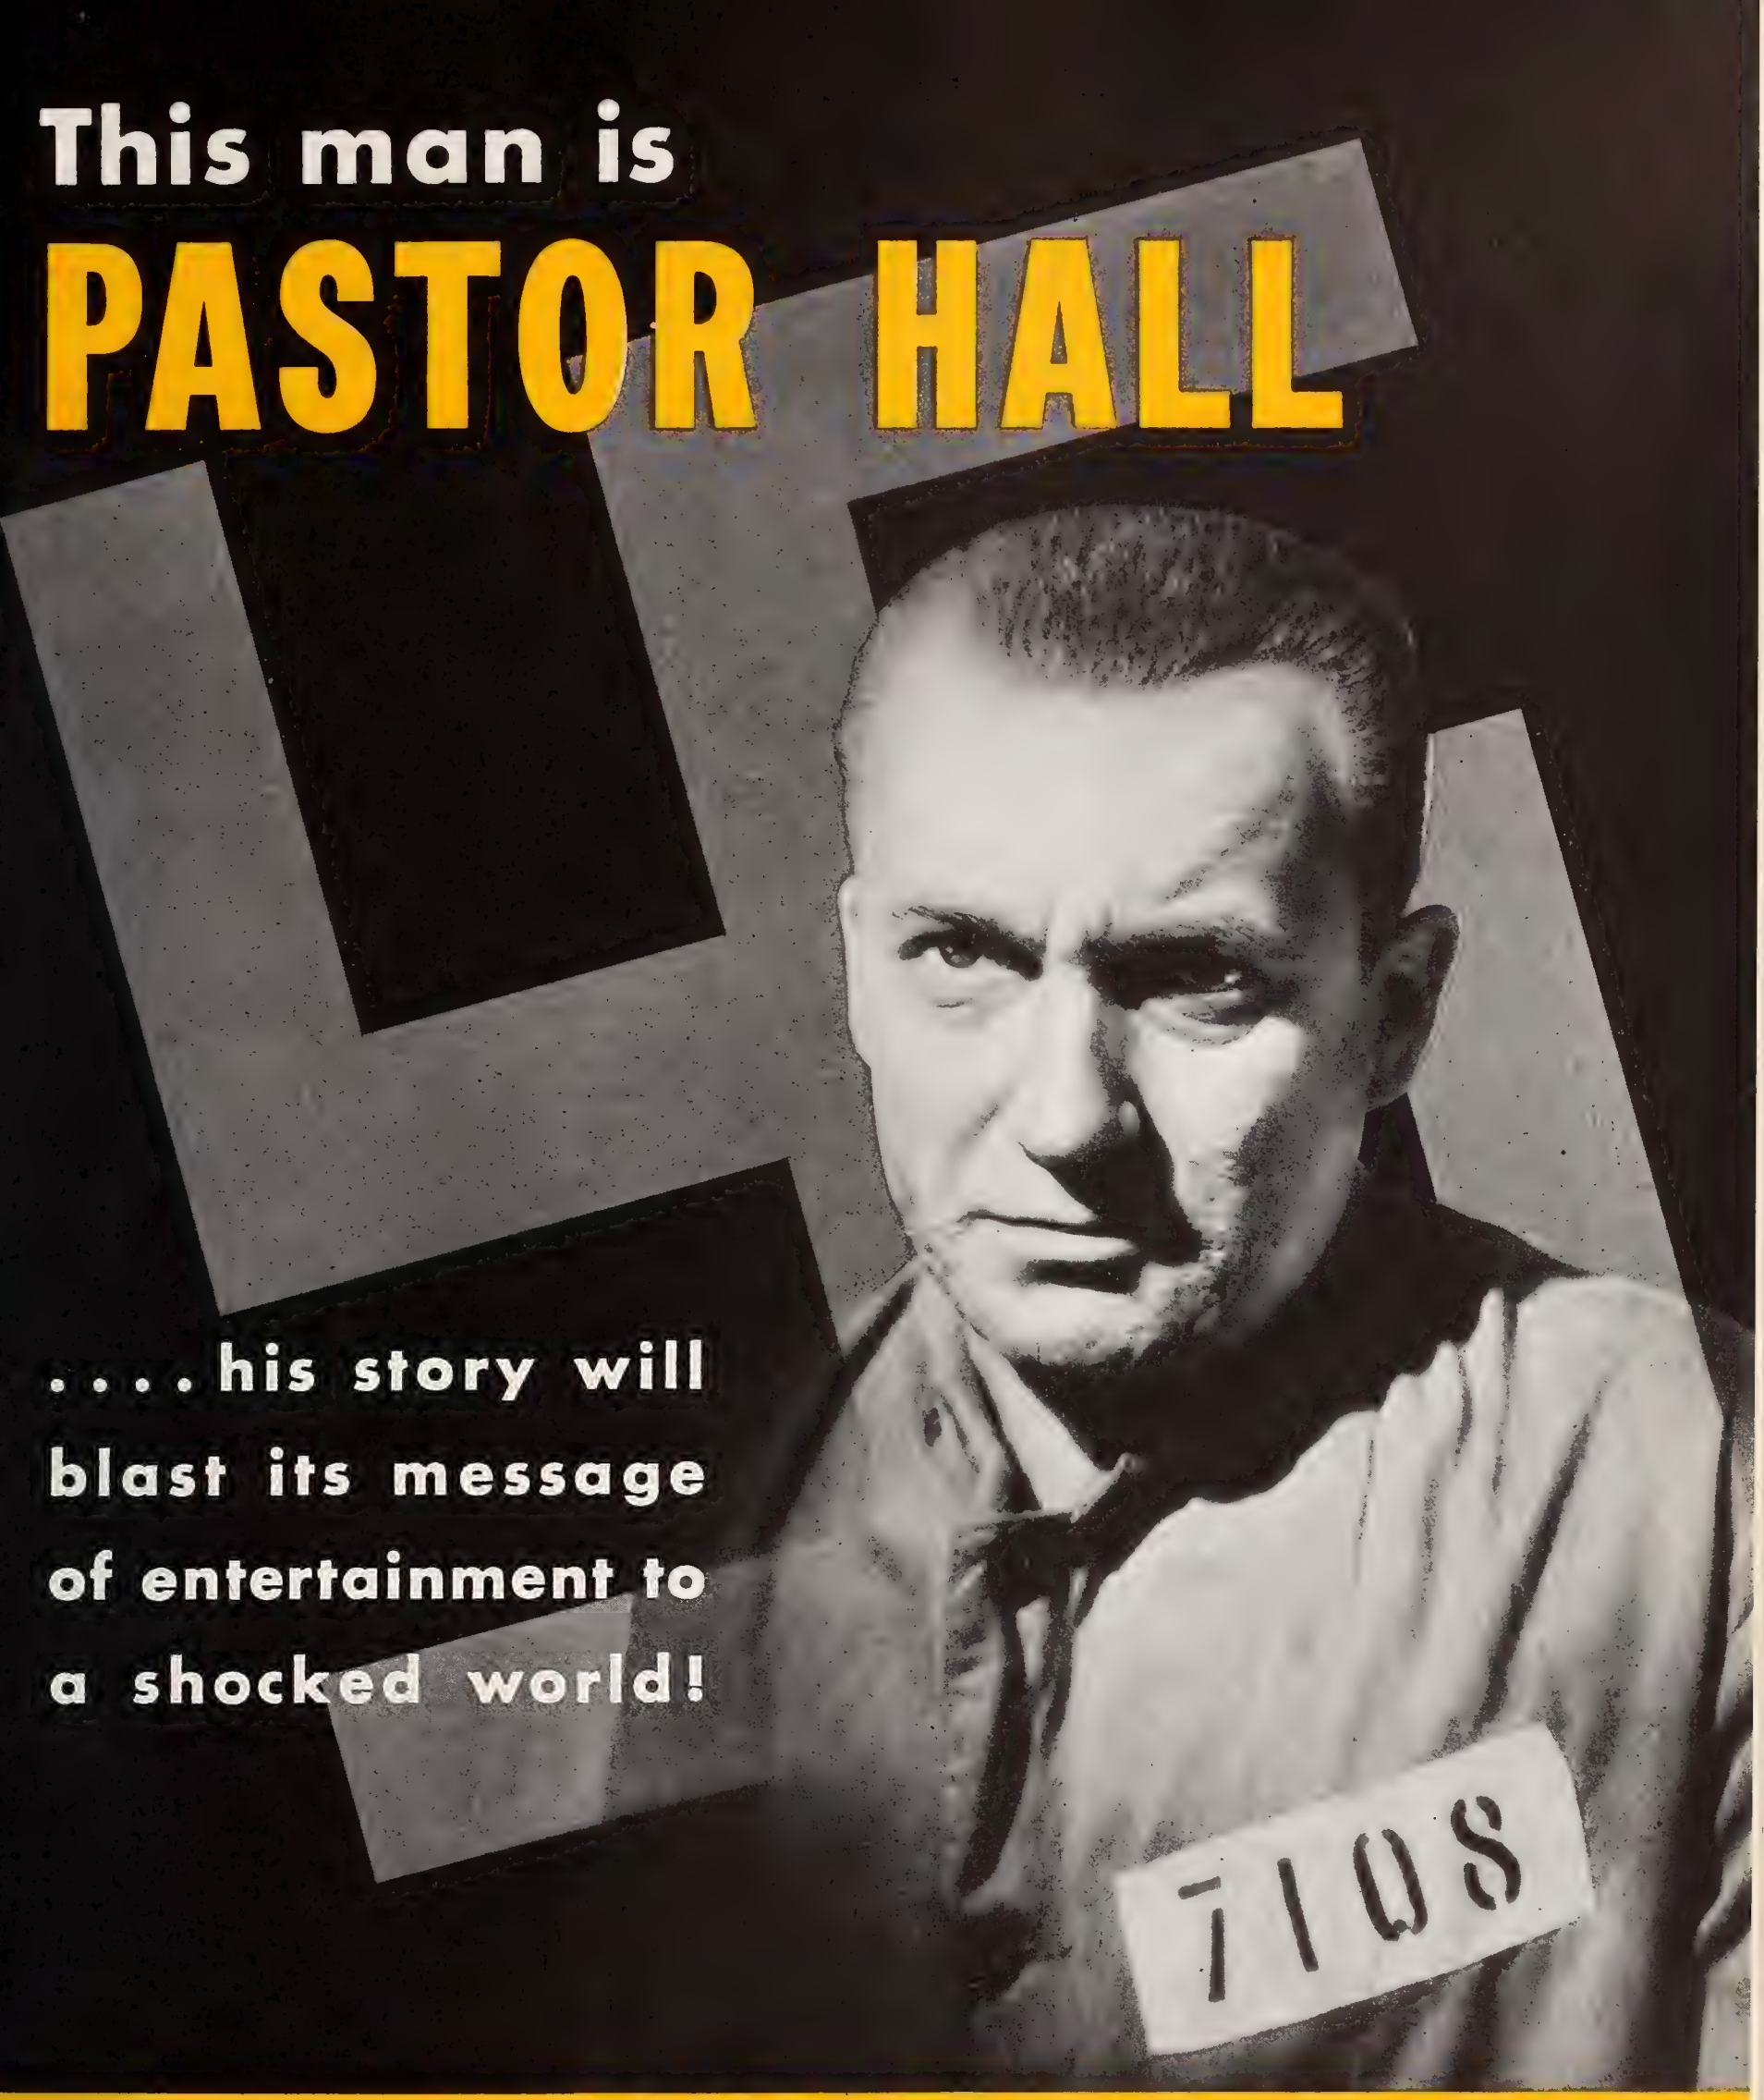
Nuisance Tax in Offing

A nuisance tax is in the offing for exhibitors throughout Mexico, a levy of two cents a year per seat urged by the national song writers' union which feels that the cinema is not giving its members sufficient return. However, the exhibitors are not so very much excited because this tax would apply only when Mexican pictures are exhibited.

Roberto Soto, Mexican stage comedian, who recently got half way through the production of his first picture and ran out of money, has returned to the stage in order to raise money to finish the picture.

A series of representative national dances, including "El Jarabe Tapatio," the national Mexican dance, are being made in Mexico City by Max Urban and Floyd W. Boulton. The subjects are to be widely exhibited in Mexico and the United States, it is said.

Production of pictures exclusively for children and enacted entirely by children is the object of a syndicate of businessmen of Orizaba, Vera Cruz state. The company, headed by Carlos Sanchez, wealthy tobaccoman, is scheduled to start production about September 15th.



President Lazaro Cardenas has ordered ratification of the Pan American agreement exempting educational films from import and export duties.

Warners Set Pooling Deal in Philadelphia

A pooling deal in the Germantown area of Philadelphia has been set between William Goldman, for the Bandbox theatre and Warner Theatres, for the Germantown theatre. The Germantown will play first run in the area for Twentieth Century-Fox and Columbia product, with the Bandbox playing shows after the Germantown on a continuous run basis.

The Bandbox had been using Twentieth Century-Fox and Columbia product, but the house has a small seating capacity, while the Warner Germantown is now being renovated and enlarged. Mr. Goldman, who operates an independent theatre circuit in the state, is a former Warner zone chief.

U. S. FILMS 80 PER CENT OF AUSTRALIAN RELEASES

Censorship Report Shows an Increase in Imports; 76 of 498 Are from Great Britain

by LIN ENDEAN
in Sydney

Hollywood films in 1939 continued to dominate the Australian market. Of a total of 498 subjects imported, 400 came from the United States film capital, the report of W. Creswell O'Reilly, chief Commonwealth film censor, reveals. England contributed 76 and other countries 22. In the short subjects field Hollywood had 791, England 676 and other countries 536.

In New South Wales the entertainment tax reports indicate a total annual attendance of more than 17,000,000. The population of the state is 3,000,000.

The 1939 censorship report, in contrast with the reports for recent years, kept strictly to figures, steering clear of matters of a seriously contentious character. It was noted, however, that the Australian film quota in the states of New South Wales and Victoria had "signally failed" (which is denied by local producers) and interests hopeful of dragging the department into controversy with the object of obtaining "cheap publicity" on censored films was condemned.

418 Given Full Approval

Censorship approved 418 features, made cuts in 59 and rejected 21 in the first instance, eventual appeal resulting in nine of them getting approval and twelve being ousted definitely—nine Hollywood, one British and two from other countries.

The report records that the percentage of British films imported was slightly higher (15.3 per cent against 13 per cent) than in 1938, and that the percentage of British films in which cuts were made was more than twice that of the American percentage, but it was the first year since 1934 that the rejection percentage was better than that of the U. S.—1.3 against America's 2.25 per cent.

A breakdown of the feature imports shows that 3,099 reels, totalling 2,654,155 feet were imported from U. S. A.; 585 reels, totalling 516,447 feet from England; 210 reels, totalling 188,572 feet from other countries.

The total importation of standard films of all classes—scenic, topical, educational, medical, commercial and dramatic—was 1,701, breaking down to 5,405 reels, and 4,464,620 feet, 3,438,317 from the U. S., 714,412 from England, and 311,891 from other countries.

American Films Show Increase

An interesting comparison of the year-by-year feature importation is shown in the figures for the past four years: 1936—348 from America; 103 from England; two from other countries; total, 453. 1937—397, 103 and 1. 1938—403, 61 and 3. 1939—400, 76 and 22. It will be seen that while English imports dropped, both the U. S. and continental features progressed.

"So far present conditions have not lessened the volume of censorship work, and, while standard films are slightly fewer, the reels and footage are greater than in 1938," says the report. "This means that feature films are tending to be longer, and one recent film probably created a record by taking over three and a half hours to screen. While the U. S. and Great Britain declined in number, other foreign feature films increased from 3 to 22. These are notable for novel technique and the introduction of unusual methods of treatment in theme and dramatic development.

"The quota legislation of New South Wales and Victoria, designed to encourage local film production, signally failed last year to effect its purpose, as only two locally made features were presented for the issue of Export Permits," Mr. O'Reilly's report continues. "For the three previous years the figures were 7, 4 and 3, respectively.

"The classification of films by Censorship into 'Suitable for General Exhibition' and 'Not Suitable for General Exhibition' (or 'Suitable for Adults'), made as the result of a 'gentleman's agreement' (for Victoria in accordance with legislation) is made known to the public by endorsement on all publicity, and appears to be well observed by distributors and exhibitors. During last year it was arranged that the indication of classification (by the letters 'G' and 'A' respectively) should be extended to the brief announcements appearing in the daily press. Whether much heed is paid to it by parents and others is of course another question, and there is the difficulty attaching to the impossibility of always showing pictures of the same classification on any given double-program.

"Cheap Publicity" Hit

"Members of the Censorship have refrained from entering into any Press controversy over the advisability or otherwise of cutting or rejecting any particular films. Such controversies are probably started in the hope that cheap publicity may be gained if the pictures were eventually shown.

"The number of complaints received regarding the pictures which have been shown is remarkably small. We consider it fortunate that the regulations, under we operate, are general in their terms, and allow a wide discretion to be exercised under world conditions and community customs which are subject to fluctuations and change," the report concludes.

Customs Duty Increased

The Federal Government has increased customs duty a further 10 per cent, an impost which F. McNeil Ackland, secretary of the M. P. D. A., estimates will cost distributors an extra £35,000 per year. This means that the U. S. film handlers are now operating under the heaviest governmental levies in the history of their activity in this country. Duty, taxation, the depreciation of, and restriction on, money sent to New York are elements which are making the road to profit a hurdle-packed highway.

Taxes, Attendance Listed

Indicative of two things—the vastness of the motion picture public, and the importance of its distribution to the state's revenue—is the table of Entertainment Tax returns issued by the New South Wales government. Embracing horse-racing, picture theatres, legitimate theatres, dancing and skating halls and miscellaneous shows, such as boxing, wrestling, football, circus, cycle and motor racing, concerts, athletic contests, lectures, cricket, baseball, etc., the list shows that in the period from 1931 to 1938 picture houses paid £357,966 ($1,789,830 at par).

For the year 1938 picture theatres paid taxes of £62,623 ($313,115 at par), legitimate and other theatre ventures paid £14,005 ($70,025 at par). The total taxable attendance for the year at picture theatres was 13,432,611, nearly eight times the attendance for the next highest figure, which was for shows under the miscellaneous heading—1,728,842. Racing, as in America, a high-priced sport and more or less the accepted national pastime, could boast of only 1,225,684 taxable customers over the year, involving a payment of £42,184—or £20,438 less than that by picture theatres. Legitimate and other shows dropped approximately 70,000 attendances on the 1937 figure, while skating and dancing added many thousands to their respective totals in the same contrast. The lift in picture theatre attendances in higher-priced sections, since 1931, is eloquent of the screen's sustained and advancing popularity. The figures are: 1931—7,931,410; 1932—6,731,163; 1933—7,527,753; 1934—8,053,646; 1935— 9,727,466; 1936—11,254,940; 1937—12,329,523; 1938—13,432,611.

It is to be pointed out that the 13,432,611 are actually the patrons who paid admissions at the higher scale, an estimate of this number added to the payees on popular admissions, on which taxation is not levied, jacking the total up by nearly two-thirds—a proof of emphatic picture-mindedness on the part of the state's population of just under 3,000,000! The other, and smaller states, scale on a favorable comparative basis.

"WIND" ADMISSION SCALES REDUCED

What is regarded in British exhibition circles as the first concrete signs of victory in the "Gone with the Wind" battle are forthcoming from Blackpool, pleasure resort on the northeast coast of Britain. There the film opened July 15th at an Associated British house at admissions ranging from 9d. to 1/6d. for matinees to 1/0d. to 3/0d. for evening performances. It is the first time the Metro picture has been shown at less than the prices which it was claimed, when the film was screened in London, would be the only prices at which patrons could secure admission for over a year.

Golf Tournament In New Haven

More than 50 prizes for golfers and non-golfers and a full day of golf, special luncheon, dinner and entertainment await Connecticut film people and their out-of-State guests at the fifth annual film golf tournament sponsored by Connecticut MPTO to be held Tuesday at the Race Brook Country Club, Orange. A nine-hole qualifying round in the morning will be followed by luncheon at the clubhouse, the 18-hole championship match, full-course dinner, award of prizes and entertainment. Fee for the day is $5.00. Among the donors of prizes are: William A. Scully, RKO, Maurice N. Canadian Government Gets $695,448 from War Stamps

The Canadian Government on Tuesday acknowledged receiving $695,448 from National Theatre Night, an evening in which patrons were admitted to patriotic shows in 975 theatres upon production of war savings stamps as admission. Returns were still coming in this week.

Over 604,000 seats were occupied at the shows. On the night of the shows, 392,274 war certificate folders, each having spaces for $4 worth of stamps, were given to patrons.

The highest average sale of war stamps per theatre was recorded in Nova Scotia, the figure being $1,120. The theatres of that province also secured the highest number of stamp sales per seat, the figure approximating $1.90.

It is expected that the total to be gained by the Government from the drive will run into millions of dollars; because, while many patrons bought only two 25 cent stamps to secure admission to the shows, many of them are expected to fill out their certificates.

NEW COMPETITION SEEN FROM ICE SHOW UNITS

New Traveling Show Booked for 20-Week Run; Henie Unit To Resume Tour

by M. H. ORODENKER
in Philadelphia

Ice shows, which in the past few years, have become increasingly a competitive factor to the motion picture box-office, will, with the coming season, undoubtedly prove competitive to an even greater degree. For the first time, the Arena Managers' Association, recently organized among managers of arenas and auditoriums throughout the country, will sponsor an ice show of their own, "Ice-Capades of 1941," on a cross-country tour.

Tour Arranged

According to Pete Tyrrell, business manager for the Association and manager of the Philadelphia Arena, the ice show will go on the road for at least 20 weeks, starting in November and continuing until the end of March. Over 60 per cent of the tour is already set, opening November 6th for a week at the Duquesne Gardens in Pittsburgh with successive weeks following until Christmas at the Philadelphia Arena, New Haven Arena, Providence Auditorium, the Gardens in Boston, and the Forum in Montreal.

Starting in February, the "Ice-Capades" will play weekly engagements at the Riverside Stadium, Washington, Toledo Auditorium, Hershey Park Arena, Hershey, Pa.; Springfield, Mass., Coliseum, and the Arena in Cleveland. A swing into the west will fill the playing time between Christmas and the February dates, weekly engagements already being booked for the Coliseum in Tulsa, Okla.; St. Paul Auditorium; and the Arena in St. Louis. Preference is given to the weekly engagements, although one and two-day stands may be booked.

The cast of the new ice show, to number 60, will be principally the same as presently appearing with the "Ice-Capades of 1940," which opened a 45-day engagement on July 19th at the Atlantic City Convention Hall under the auspices of the Association. Rehearsals for the new show start shortly in Atlantic City, the spectacle to be staged and produced by Russel Markert, who stages the Radio City Music Hall productions in New York. The present "Ice-Capades" will play a return engagement at the New Orleans Auditorium, September 5-23.

Sonja Henie Tour

The new season will also find Sonja Henie headlining a "Hollywood Ice Revue," which has already a minimum route of 20 weeks as well for the coming season, sponsored by Arthur Wirtz, manager of the Chicago Stadium, and a member of the Arena Managers' Association. In addition to the Chicago Stadium, Mr. Wirtz operates stadiums in Omaha and Indianapolis, and the itinerary for the Sonja Henie show will include weekly engagements in New Orleans, Houston, Dallas, Atlanta, Philadelphia and San Francisco.

In New York, Mr. Wirtz, as president of Sonart Productions, Inc., in which Miss Henie is also associated, has exclusive use of the Rockefeller Center Theatre for ice productions for four years after the close of his first show, which is scheduled to reopen the house on October 1st and continue for a 40-week season. Miss Henie recently renewed her contract with Mr. Wirtz, giving him exclusive rights so long as she gives personal appearances on skates.

In Philadelphia this week, sports promoter Ray Fabiani opened his sun-proof, outdoor skating rink, Philadelphia Ice Gardens, on the site of the old "Phillies" Ball Park. Harry Losee, who directed Miss Henie's skating sequences in pictures, has been engaged by Mr. Fabiani to stage an "Ice Varieties of 1940" show for the Gardens, to be produced by Fortune Gallo, opera impressario. In addition, the Gardens offers a combination of ice skating and dancing four nights weekly.

Academy Sciences Branch Appoints Section Chairmen

The executive committee of the Sciences Branch, Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, has appointed the following section chairmen: Harold McCord, film editors; Peter Mole, Equipment; Thomas Moulton, sound; Jack Otterson, art directors, and Ray Wilkinson, photographic.

In announcing the appointments, Nathan Levinson, chairman of the branch, said that in line with the policy of the Academy board of governors, the executive committee and the new section chairmen will immediately inaugurate a comprehensive program of membership activities designed to increase the value of membership in the Academy to its scientific groups.

The committee also announced resumption of publication of the Technical Credits Bulletin. The first issue is now in preparation and will include credits for all productions completed by all studios between January 1st and June 30, 1940, as well as a complete listing of all credits for the past two years of members of the Sciences Branch.

Radke Fails to Secure Patent Suit Dismissal

Application for dismissal of the suit against them by the Photometric Production Corporation, was denied to Albert A. Radke, the Radke Patents Corporation, Leonard Day, and Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., by Federal Judge John W. Clancy, on Tuesday, in New York Federal Court. The defendants charged the plaintiff had failed to state a cause of action.

The Photometric company's suit charges that Mr. Radke, while employde by the American Development and Operation Company, developed a patent described as "methods and means of optically recording sound"; and that the company had assigned its claim to Photometric.

Cameo Changes Hands

Consolidated Film Enterprises has acquired the Cameo theatre on 42nd Street, Broadway, formerly the showcase for Soviet films. The theatre, which was closed about three months ago, was operated by Matty Radin. Following renovation, including additional lobby space, the circuit will reopen the house about the middle of next month as the Bryant. No definite policy has been set yet.

$1,500,000 Universal Loan

Universal has arranged for a $1,500,000 loan from the First National Bank of Boston. Of the loan, $1,000,000 will be used to retire a mortgage of that amount on the Universal studio properties. The mortgage is held by Consolidated Film Laboratories. The balance of the loan will provide additional working capital for the company.

The company's earnings for the current fiscal year continuing at a steady rate of improvement over recent years, maintaining a trend established with the advent of the company's new management, headed by Nate J. Blumberg, early in 1937. The company's net profit for the 39 weeks ended last Saturday is estimated to be in excess of $1,700,000.

That the company expects to attain domestic self-sufficiency by September 1st was indicated in a letter in June to stockholders from J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board.

INDUSTRY AIDING RED CROSS DRIVE

Theatrical interests in the Seattle region have united to organize their part in the state drive in the $10,000,000 national American Red Cross war relief drive. Theatre owners, operators and exchanges met this week under the leadership of Frank L. Newman, Sr., and the following committee heads were chosen to plan the local campaign.

John Hamrick, for the circuits; Leroy V. Johnson, for independent theatre owners; L. J. McGinley, film exchanges; B. F. Shearer, theatre equipment; Jack Flannery, screen service groups, and Basil Gray, theatre unions.

The Century Circuit, Brooklyn, devoted the entire proceeds of the morning performances last Friday and Saturday at four theatres to the Brooklyn Chapter of the Red Cross.

Max Milder, head of British activities for Warner Brothers, has arranged for the evacuation of 44 children of Warner employees in London to this country, it was reported from London last Monday. They will be guests of the American company.

SEC Educational Action

Securities of Educational Pictures, Inc., were last week ordered delisted from the Chicago Board of Trade by the Securities and Exchange Commission on the ground that the company failed to file an annual report as required by the Securities Exchange Act.

An order for the proceedings was issued by the SEC March 22, last, and the president of Educational explained that the company, which had filed a petition in bankruptcy on January 30th failed to file its annual report because of lack of funds for an independent audit. When the hearing was called, no one appeared for the purpose of opposing the delisting.

Stock Registered in 1937

Educational Pictures registered its common and preferred stock on the Chicago Board of Trade in 1937. The preferred stock, the commission's order stated, apparently has never been issued and it appears that the common stock is held by a very small number of persons. The record indicates that there has never been a transaction in the stock on the Chicago Board of Trade.

GTE Net Up

General Theatres Equipment Corporation and subsidiaries, excluding Cinema Building Corporation, report consolidated profit for the three months ended June 30th of $195,637, after provision for depreciation and estimated federal income tax.
